Weather, pollution pushed sewers for 1985 top stories

It has not been an uninteresting year in Cohasset. Be it municipal government, metereology, ecology or business, there was something to pique everyone's interest in 1985.

JANUARY

It was just about a year ago that Eileen Mullaney traveled from her South Main Street home to South Africa. She was one of four nurses selected from the United States to care for the starving refugees in a camp near Addis Ababa.

The good news is that Eileen returned home to her family this week. She is spending a few days skiing with her family and will return home only to travel across country to lecture about her experiences.

1985 has changed Eileen's life. Her dedication and unselfishness undoubtedly changed the lives of many Ethiopians.

FEBRUARY

The Town Hall Study Committee, reacting to public hearings held through the past summer, present selectmen with alternative preliminary plans for additional office space.

At the hearings held by the study committee, residents objected loudly to the initial plans which recommended the Town Hall stage be razed to provide needed office facilities. Members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club protested that without the auditorium stage, they would be forced to find an alternate home. The club has utilized the location for the past 63 years.

The new preliminary plans prepared by architect

Some '85 issues to have '86 impact

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

There are few issues which occurred in 1984 that will not affect the approaching new year. Many issues of importance took place during the past year, but their effects will be felt far into the future.

The town is about to review plans to create 36 housing units on North Main Street, a number of which will be designated for low and moderate income residents.

Wayne Sawchuk will be presenting an application and plan to the Zoning Board of Appeals at the Jan. 9 meeting. At that hearing, he will outline his plans to construct 36 one and two bedroom units on the 1,000 by 400 square foot parcel.

The property is located at 320 and 330 North Main Street. Sawchuk has purchased the two single-family homes currently located on the site.

As designed by the architectural firm of Wallace Floyd Associates of Boston, the development will include 36 units of one-level, attached Cape-style homes. There will be four units per building, except for the unit located on the corner lot. The one and two-bedroom units will be accessible to handicapped and elderly, Sawchuk stated.

Rather than apply for a variance from the zoning board, the local developer said the board would likely be responsible for a comprehensive review of the plan. Sawchuk is unsure, until the zoning hearing is completed, if he will have to file for a review before other town boards.

The developer is planning the project under the federal TELLER program (Tax Exempt Local Loans to Encourage Rentals). According to that program which became effective last June, the local Housing Authority must receive and review the lengthy formal application from the developer, and review construction plans and all bonds for construction

Construction soared to new heights in '85

There is a construction boom in Cohasset. During the past year, there were more permits issued for home repairs and new construction than at any time in Cohasset's history.

With one day remaining, the town's building inspector has issued 615 building permits in 1985.

Inspector Edward Poskus does not give himself credit for the increased construction, but acknowledges that contractors and carpenters are aware of the consequences should they work without the proper permits.

The Building Inspector's office is located down the end of the hallway on the second floor of Town Hall. It's not that it's much smaller than the other offices, it's just that this space is usually occupied by two or three staff people, and residents waiting their turn to obtain information or permits. It's friendly, comfortable, but always crowded.

This busy office belongs to Building Inspector Poskus, his secretary, Marian Douglas, and Plumbing and Gas Inspector Robert Leonard. Although most of the day the two inspectors will be "out in the field," there's a good deal of activity in this office as residents seek a conversation with the inspectors, a copy of the zoning map, or a permit to begin construction.

The reason for this flourish of activity is the amount of construction within town. Since Building Inspector Poskus was appointed in the summer of 1984, he has seen construction continually rise in this small community. Developers and contractors are seeking every available buildable space in town, and the permits reflect that surge.

Issuing permits is just one responsibility of the building inspector. He is noted for driving through

Accountant interviews

Selectmen were scheduled to interview the top three candidates for the position of Town Accountant.

Beginning at 9:45 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 28, selectmen were scheduled to interview Mary Barbuto of Hingham, the current Assistant Town Accountant in Cohasset, Michael Collins of Milton, and John Carta of Quincy.

Seven persons applied for the position. For the past five months, Donald Andrew served as the town's executive secretary and town accountant. He decided in November that the responsibilities were too great in each position, and told selectmen the jobs should be separate. Prior to Andrew's appointment, the accountant's position was under the jurisdiction of Civil Service and was held for many years by William Signorelli. Town Meeting voted in June to take the position out of the Civil Service ranks and allow selectmen the sole authority to appoint an accountant for the town.

Photographs returned

Photographs of five Cohasset men who died in combat during World War I, will once again be displayed in Town Hall.

When the auditorium was painted this year, the five engraved photographs were taken from the wall, wrapped in newspaper, and stored in the Town Hall basement. The art work was never returned to the auditorium, where they had been for more than 55 years.

According to Richard Barrow of King Street, Town Meeting voters in 1929 appropriated $550 to purchase the five photographs of the residents who lost their lives in World War I. The photographs, according to the Town Meeting warrant, were to be placed at the Town Hall. Since the order was never rescinded, Barrow requested three weeks ago that selectmen return the photographs to their original location.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England has ordered the photographs to be hung at the Town Hall.

According to Barrow's letter to selectmen, the photographs are of Cpl. Lawrence B. Williams, Pvt. Herman E. Daley, Pvt. John W. Sidney, Pvt. Joseph A. Gonsalves, and Sgt. George H. Mealy.

Inspector honored

Building Inspector Edward A.J. Poskus was recently honored by the Massachusetts Federation of Planning Boards.

Building Inspector Edward Poskus

Poskus, a former Brockton Planning Board Chairman and a registered professional architect, received honorary membership to the federation. He was given the award by members of the state association in October.

According to the citation awarded the Cohasset Building Inspector, he has been "dedicated to the principles of the Federation for thirty five years, a former president and presently serving as the Chairman of the Nominating Committee in addition to being past Planning Board Chairman for nine years and Chairman of the Zoning Board of Appeals for the City of Brockton," Poskus is a former resident of Brockton, and currently resides in South Weymouth. He was appointed building inspector in Cohasset in June, 1984.

The Federation noted that Poskus "blends his technical knowledge with his planning and zoning expertise to further the ideas of sound planning practices . . . with gratitude for his flamboyant leadership, wise decisions and willing contributions to the planning process over the years."

Final voting for King Award closes Jan. 20

The ballots for the selection of the winner of the first annual Forrest E. King Memorial award have been mailed to chamber members.

The award, named for the late Forrest E. King, long-time proprietor of King Jewelers, Cushing Plaza, Cohasset, will be presented annually to the member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce (either an individual or other entity) who has demonstrated during the previous year the highest standards of business ethics, management, employee and public relations and civic responsibility consistent with the goals of the Chamber of Commerce and whose actions have reflected favorably upon the membership and to the credit of the member, their business organization and the Cohasset community.

The King award committee along with the board of directors and president Fred Wood are urging all chamber members to cast their ballots for one of the four nominees who were chosen in the nomination voting held last month.

The four nominees are Dan Leahy of Kimball's By the Sea, Andrea Merrill of the Consignment Shop and Jack Conway Co., Sue Straley of Cards and Shards and Frank Smith of Flemings.

President Wood is encouraging all chamber members to vote whether or not they participated in the nomination voting held last month. Each member is entitled to one vote.

The voting will close January 20, and the results will be kept secret until a dinner dance ceremony to be held Februrary 14 at Kimball's By the Sea.

Chamber members who have not received a ballot or who wish more information may call Valerie King, 383-1755 or Joe Quinn, 383-9753.

View of typical four unit building and financing.

This is the architect's rendering of the 36 housing units. planned for 320 and 330 N. Main Street. At least 20 percent of the units will be designated for low and moderate income residents.

Because the federal program is relatively new, there are few existing housing developments which have utilized the TELLER program, Sawchuk said. For that reason, he is unsure how long the review process will take, and when construction will begin.

"By January 9 I will know better how long this process will take," he said.

According to the TELLER regulations, a developer must construct at least 20 percent low and middle income units within a developemt to qualify for the federal low interest loans. Sawchuk said until he has proceeded further in the review process, he does not know how many of the 36 units will be designated for low and moderate income.

"I know at least 20 percent will be for that income level, and it can't be more than 100 percent. So it will be somewhere in between," he stated this week.

The TELLER program has advantages for a prospective developer, Sawchuk noted, including low-interest loans for construction, and assurance that there'll be some flexbility in the town's review of the project. "It is not the most profitable thing I have ever done. But it will be a long term investment for me and the town," he added.

Sawchuk said he became interested in such a project after learning about the TELLER program, adding that the development is needed in Cohasset and is "financially feasible."

The greatest drawback at this point, he added, is the lengthy formal application he must file with Housing Authority. Although the members of the local authority have issued their initial approval of the plans, Sawchuk is responsible for filing an application form that is comparable to filing for a mortgage from a bank.

Because of the technical aspect of the application, the authority must have an attorney review and process the paperwork. The Housing Authority will be responsible for administering the program and will review all persons applying for the low and moderate income units.

Although Sawchuk said there is presently no solid timeframe, he would like to begin construction within the year. "But at some point soon, I will need some positive feedback from the two town agencies," he noted.

Although Sawchuk has informally presented his plans to the local Housing Authority on three occasions, they must hold two public hearings on the plan. At the first hearing, the members will

Water pollution, elections dominate 1985

Benjamin Blake, included an addition to the right rear of the existing building. The stage would remain intact.

At their last meeting this month, the study committee reviewed several design estimates from architects. Once the committee recommends a choice of architect, selectmen will make the final decision.

Last April, Town Meeting appropriated $20,000 to fund an architectural study. The committee received bid proposals from ten architects.

APRIL

This is the month for annual town elections and 1985 was no exception to the rule.

It was not a hard-fought campaign in any of the municipal elections. Many offices were uncontested, although an average amount of voters turned out at the polls.

Diane Sullivan was elected to the Board of Selectmen to fill the seat vacated in January by incumbent John DeBassio. Citing additional business commitments, DeBassio resigned from the board months before his term concluded. That was probably the single contest in this year's election that captured any excitement. Sullivan was challenged by Recreation Commission member James Gallagher. Rocco Laugelle was unopposed in his re-election bid.

Barbara Bliss was the new face on the school board, with chairman Joseph Nedrow unopposed in his campaign for re-election. Bliss was also unopposed in her first try for public office. She won the seat vacated by former board member Martha Gjesteby.

Other new faces included Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley, who had been serving in an acting capacity after the resignation in October, 1984 of Gordon Flint.

MAY

This was a busy month for John McNabb Jr. and the Board of Selectmen. McNabb filed a complaint with the district attorney's office, alledging that selectmen violated the state Open Meeting Law.

Acting as a private citizen and not as chairman of the town government structure committee, McNabb asked the D.A. to investigate executive sessions held that month by selectmen which led to the provisional appointment of a new dual position. In those sessions, McNabb alledged, selectmen decided to combine the positions of town accountant and executive secretary and offer the job to Donald Andrew.

McNabb charged that selectmen voted in a closed session May 9 to combine the two positions. His letter to the D.A. stated, "I am taking this action because I feel that the public interest was harmed by the selectmen meeting in closed session to consider and decide on a serious question of public policy affecting two major positions in town government and because I feel it is important that the selectmen be made aware by official action of the requirement of the Open Meeting Law so they will follow the law in the future."

Several weeks later, D.A. William Delahunt responded with an official reprimand of the board, ordering them not to violate the intent of the state law, and issuing guidelines for the proper use of closed sessions in municipal government.

JUNE

The town's new acting Town Accountant/Executive Secretary began work early this month. Donald Andrew, 33, former senior accountant and temporary comptroller for Brookline, began his dual duties in Cohasset June 3.

He brought to Cohasset a wealth of experience in administrative and accounting assignments. Andrew, who remains a resident of Brookline, was employed in that large town for three and a half years. For seven years prior to that, he was town accountant and clerk to the Board of Selectmen in Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard.

Also during this month, the state Attorney General's office approved the town's request to lower the Town Meeting quorum. Town Meeting voters decided in April to lower the quorum to 100 from the former 200 minimum requirement. The state approved the decision, thus establishing the lowest quorum in Cohasset history.

Later that month, the Zoning Board of Appeals held a public hearing on one of the most curious subjects to arise in our community. Two local residents bought a home on Jerusalem Road with plans to complete extensive renovations. As construction work began and a second story was added to the single-floor ranch, all work was ordered stopped.

Neighbors banned together against the rehabilitation work, hired an attorney, and charged that the renovations were being completed against the town's zoning codes.

The neighbors argued that the renovations included an additional bedroom on the new second floor. Such an addition would require a special permit. But the developers argued in turn that there would be no additional bedrooms, and that was substantiated by the health agent and building inspector.

Area police chiefs give new law mixed review

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Millions of motorists who don't buckle their seat belts will soon face fines as officials from Beacon Hill to area communities gear up for the state's new mandatory seat-belt use law.

The law, championed by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, takes effect this week after months of legislative wrangling.

After Jan. 1, drivers and passengers who don't buckle up will be fined $15, but only if a police officer observes another violation of the traffic code.

The law is not without its opponents. Private citizens, groups and media personalities like WRKO announcer Jerry Williams have combined forces to put the issue before voters in a referendum question next fall.

The opinions of area police chiefs on the seat-belt law are as varied as those of the general public. Whatever their personal feelings, however, the chiefs say they're ready to implement the seat-belt law this month.

"There's no question in my mind that use of belts reduces the severity of accident injuries," said Marshfield Police Chief William Sullivan. "In my experience, we've never had to cut a seat belt off a deceased person after a crash."

Hanover Chief John B. Lingley said use of seat belts should be left up to individuals, but he stressed that his department is ready to implement and enforce the law "fully."

"It's something like cigarette smoking," Lingley said. "I gave up smoking several years ago because it's bad for my health. Should the governor sign a law banning smoking because it's unhealthy? It's something that should be left up to each motorist."

Sullivan said he and Capt. James Lopes attended an eight-hour seminar sponsored by the Criminal Justice Training Council on the new law and plans to hold inservice training soon for the rest of Marshfield's 40-member police force.

Verbal warnings will be issued to unbuckled motorists for the "first several weeks" of the new law in an effort to increase public awareness in Marshfield, Sullivan said.

We realize that it takes time to develop good habits, he said. "The intent of the law is to encourage this good habit, so the first several weeks will be used to educate the driving public."

Sullivan said he supports the law in part because New York, the first state to implement mandatory seat-belt use, experienced a 27-percent decline in auto fatalities in the law's first six months in 1985.

The few seconds it takes to buckle up is a small price to pay for the benefits involved, he added.

Both Sullivan and Lingley said enforcement of the seat-belt law, like many other non-criminal violations, can be left up to the discretion of individual officers. That's because written citations are unwarranted in some situations, they said.

"It has a lot to do with reasonableness of both police officer and operator," Sullivan said.

But Lingley said the law requiring children under five to be restrained in a 'toddler seat"—which has been in effect for several years—is "barely enforced now" by police across the state.

"Just because a policeman stops a car doesn't necessarily mean he has to write the driver up," he said.

Richard T. Wills, Pembroke's acting police chief, reserved comment on most aspects of the law, but added he "wouldn't be surprised" to see the issue end up before voters in a referendum next fall.

As with other chiefs, Wills said the Pembroke department is ready to fully enforce the seat-belt law. He also suggested it might be easier to be cited for not being buckled up than many drivers realize.

"There has to be another violation before we can stop a car, but the reason can be as simple as a broken headlight or taillight," he said.

The chiefs' opinions were also varied when asked whether drivers could be charged with the seat-belt violation alone. The motorist might not be charged with any violation if the primary violation is not serious, such as driving five mph over the speed limit. It has to be left up to the discretion of the officer, they said.

A driver cited for violating the seat-belt law, but not other laws, "has a pretty good defense against the (seat belt) charge in court," Hanover's Lingley said.

Wills and Sullivan both said police could issue written warnings or repair tickets to unbuckled motorists to legitimize a seat-belt citation.

"A written warning will document the officer's reason for stopping the car in the first place," Sullivan said. "That will eliminate court objections to the charge."

It's been a banner year for construction

town, observing construction or repair work without proper permission, and calling a halt to that work. All construction or rehabilitation work initiated without a permit will be stopped until that permit is obtained. The permit fee, by the way, is then doubled. A sure way, Poskus devised, to help builders and home repairers remember that permit before the work commences.

As the town's zoning officer, Poskus is also responsible for ensuring that all new construction is proceeding according to the town's zoning regulations. Inspector Poskus is becoming notorious for slapping Stop Work orders on residents and contractors who started work in violation of the town's zoning codes. He is a proficient writer, informs the violator to stop all work until the zoning board or the conservation commission reviews the planned construction. There have been many instances in the past year when Poskus has issued such orders.

Once in a while, these confrontations are continued in court as Poskus files a complaint against the violator. Poskus works in conjunction with the town counsel in such circumstances.

Poskus once stated that his continual observations throughout town are not accomplished solely for the town's benefit. Present and future property owners deserve nothing but the best from their contractor and the town, he said.

Poskus noted, "These contractors are not following anyone. They have to complete their work according to code and if they don't and are caught, it just means more labor costs and time lost on the project. It's just going to cost them more money."

A residential permit fee costs $10 for the first $1000, $3 for each additional $1000, $10 for the first $1000 for commercial property, and $5 for each additional $1000 worth of construction work.

Since his appointment, Poskus has assisted the town in many other ways. A registered architect, he was a partner in a Boston architectural firm with the late Horatio W. Beal of Cohasset.Beal designed the Deer Hill School and they both worked on the addition to that building. A resident of Brockton, Poskus was a member of that city's planning board for nine years and was a zoning board of appeals member for eight years. He also served as chairman of both groups.

His educational background includes studies at Wentworth, M.I.T., and the Graduate School of Design at Harvard.

Despite the hours and efforts he puts into his daily office work, Poskus had found time to help the town with various projects. He designed renovations for the Bates Building on Elm Street. One of his first projects was the design of a handicapped access ramp for Town Hall.

Those plans have been sidelined while a sub committee reviews plans for an addition and major renovation project to the Highland Avenue building.

His latest project included designs for the renovation of the police and fire stations. Together with input from the two chiefs, Poskus created a preliminary plan. A sub committee will soon review those plans, and begin the search for an architect to finalize drawings for an expanded police and fire department complex.

The office secretary, Marian Douglas, has been employed there for about a year. According to Poskus, Marian is his "right and left arm. She's indispensible."

The building inspector said that Marion is capable of fielding most questions and handling the office while he is out on inspections. That amounts to a great deal of time as Poskus is usually in his office a small portion of each day. He assigns regular office hours from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and noon to 1 p.m. The remainder of the day may be spent out in the field, or in appointments.

"If I am busy, Marian handles everything. There are very few questions she can't answer. And if she can't, she waits for me to return. This office could not function without Marian," her boss commented.

She is responsible for handling all the money brought into the office for permits and zoning maps. A Cohasset resident, Marian also provides secretarial services to the plumbing inspector, the personnel committee, the harbormaster, the park and tree department, and she helps the selectmen's office staff if they are in need of additional assistance. She is employed fulltime and can be found daily in the Building Inspector's office.

"She's terrific," according to Poskus. "She's capable of handling everything to do with this office. Marian is a very valuable part of this office.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

Home Center Realty

NEGOTIATING WITH THE SELLERS

One of the first questions many prospective buyers ask when they find the perfect house is "will they take less?" The agent can't tell you what the sellers will take, and the only way to test their bottom line is to make an offer. If you can negotiate a lower price or better terms than the original offering, you can save yourself a lot of money, but you could risk losing a home you really love in the process.

If you offer is below the sellers' bottom line, they will probably make you a counter offer. If your bid is very low, you run the risk of offending them. Your offer may not be taken seriously—especially if it is far below market value.

The other risk is that while you and the sellers are trading offers and counter offers, another buyer may come in with a more attractive bid. If this happens before your negotiations are concluded, your sellers may accept the competing offer. Before you decide what kind of offer to make, weigh the benefits and risks of going in with a lower price than what the sellers are asking. Do you love the house? Are similar homes available so you'll have a backup? Is the asking price in line with the local market and are other buyers interested in the same property? Can you afford to pay the asking price?

If you're planning a move, the full-service professionals at Home Center Realty can get your home sold and help you find a new one. Please call us at 749-8833 or stop by our office at 57 Water Street, Hingham.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

THE LUMBAR REGION

In the lumbar region, the spine is more flexible than in the chest area. It also has to bear a greater amount of the body's weight. It is the combination of these two factors which leads to lower back pain being such a common problem. There is an additional complication in the structure of the spine which increases the back's vulnerability. After the five lumbar vertebrae have made the bottom half of an S-shape, the lowest makes a very sharp angle as it joins to the sacrum or "tailbone." This sharp-angled joint has to carry a considerable burden. The spine's shape is maintained by muscles that lie beside it. Although powerful, when they are overworked, low backache can occur.

The burden of the spine can be affected by the way one sits, walks, runs, works or plays. Thus it is important to recognize and address such potential problems. A periodic chiropractic exam can serve to deal with existing difficulties as well as providing a preventive measure against developing situations. For attention to your needs to improve and maintain the state of well-being you deserve, we welcome your call at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Unusual and difficult cases invited. Tel. 383-1211, 2114. Daily by appt.

HINT

If the muscles beside the spine are unequal to a task, they may give way, resulting in a "slipped disc."

around town

☐ Hope you had a chance to see Marilyn and Dick Fessler while they were here for the week. They left the balmy coast of Florida to come and freeze with the Dalrymples and the rest of their Cohasset buddies . . . that sure is true friendship and shows how much they miss Cohasset, to leave the warm rays to try to catch a few Christmas snow flakes! Anyway, it was nice to see them, and hope their visit was a happy one.

☐ As the winter sports make their debut, one thing is evident. If you are looking for something to do this winter, take in one of the teams and watch them carefully, they will be sure to provide you with a lot of entertainment. They all show a lot of promise, and every team should have a winning season, so show your support.

☐ Congratulations to Kevin Mulcahy, who won the largest, Snoopy Santa that Cohasset has ever seen! I'm sure you saw it in the window of Sharon's Chocolate Factory, where the drawing took place . . . its great.

☐ For all of those that Santa left puppies to, be sure that you know about the Dog Obedience classes that will be held in Jan. It is put on by Ms. Laurie Clevland, for the recreation department. Call 383-6791 for more details as to time and place.

☐ Hear that Jim and Laurraine Hoy had all of their "children" home for Christmas, the first time in a while that they have all been able to get together. Bet there were a lot of stories all around the table last week, what fun that must have been.

☐ Congratulations to Damiano and Gulliana Truglia on the recent birth of their son. December 9th was the actual date, and South Shore Hospital was the place. Here's to a happy life for all.

☐ Nice to see Bruce and Clair Williams here for their annual Christmas visit. They look great as usual, and its always good to see them (Ian and Alison, their children, are here with them too) . . .

☐ Keep watching . . . the new skipper that will appear on behalf of the teams throughout the school will be around soon. He is to look rougher and tougher, stronger and more courageous. Should be grand, cannot wait to see the winning Skipper.

☐ Happy be-lated anniversary to one of the best couples that I know of. Ken and Sue Fone. And, may they have at least fifty more . . .

☐ Isn't it great to pick up the paper and read all of the ads that show the things you bought for Christmas at one half the price you paid? Next year, let's move it, and not tell the retail stores til afterwards!

☐ Hear that Ann and Kim Crawford had a wonderful time as they spent Christmas in California this year. When you see them, be sure to ask all about it, I'm sure they will have tons of thing to report.

☐ Good to see Scott Benbow around during the Christmas holidays, he hasn't been spotted "around town" in a while.

☐ Stephen E. Casey, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Casey, Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset, has been named to the Honor Roll for the first trimester at the Avon Old Farms School, a college preparatory school for boys in Avon, Connecticut.

☐ Cohasset resident Charles M. Bliss, M.D., recently was honored for 15 years of dedicated service to University Hosptial in Boston at the Hospital's Fourth Annual Medical Staff Recognition Brunch held at the Parker House.

The Plymouth County Multiple Listing Services officers and directors met recently. Among the 1986 officers are (seated): Director Pat Donahue of Hingham; Secretary/Treasurer Juliette Guild of Cohasset; President Mary Pecce of Cohasset. Other officers are: James Snowdon, Edwin Payton, Edgar Ramsey, Jr., George Kelly and Henry DeSantis.

Bliss, a member of the medical staff at University Hospital, was one of 109 physicians recognized for five to 45 years of membership on the Medical-Dental Staff of University Hospital.

☐ Bates College junior lineback Bob Donahue of Cohasset, is among the leaders in 1985 defensive statistics for the Bates College football team.

Bob, with 55 solos and 50 assists, paced the Bobcats in tackles during the season.

☐ Ann O'Connell, a resident of Cohasset, is spending first semester studying with the Drew in London Program in London, England. She is in her junior year at Wellesley College majoring in political science.

☐ Leslie E. Collins, daughter of R. Perry and Judith A. Collins of Jerusalem Drive, Cohasset, received a bachelor of science degree in physical therapy from Simmons College, Boston, at commencement exercises on December 15.

☐ That's the news for this week. Can't wait to hear from all you reporters, telling all about your vacation and holidays. Be sure to let us in on all of the fun that you had!

Housing units, water protection will linger in '86 gather public input and opinion regarding the proposed project, and they will make a decision by the second hearing.

Sawchuk said he has attempted to make the housing units appealing and affordable by constructing each unit for under $100,000. The total project will cost about $3.6 million. If costs rise far above that, Sawchuk stated, he will lose any potential profit from this development.

The state has been pressuring the town to obtain low and moderate housing units for several years. Sawchuk sees this development as a way for the town to meet its obligation through his efforts.

"If I don't get permission to construct, I think it will be sad for the town," he said, adding that many of the units will be designated for low and moderate income elderly residents.

WATER SUPPLY PROTECTION

It has been a year of action and inaction for the local Water Commission. Intent on its authority and responsibility to protect the public water supply, the commission has received a copy of an engineering study initiated last year which indicated the possible pollution of a tributary into Lily Pond.

Since the draft copy was released last February, the commission has been intent on stopping the source of that contamination, Cohasset Heights Ltd., the privately-owned commercial landfill located on Crocker Lane.

Since September, the commission requested the Board of Health and selectmen's cooperation in seeking legal assistance to shutdown the landfill. When no action was forthcoming from the town or the town's special counsel in the matter, the commission renewed its call to have the landfill closed.

At a meeting earlier this month, the Water Commission met in closed session with Town Counsel Richard Henderson and Special Counsel Michael Leone. Selectmen Chairman Frank England attended the meeting.

The commission will again be meeting in closed session with selectmen and the Board of Health to discuss possible strategy to close the landfill operation.

According to Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt, the commission has reached " a working consensus with the other town boards and our lawyers are proceeding on a course that the Water Commission has supported quite loudly."

The meeting between the town officials will be held to outline the legal case, he said. "The commission believes we have a resolution on this issue," Pratt added.

The call to shutdown Cohasset Heights Ltd. was initiated last September and revived again in late October when a Browning-Ferris Industries truck was stopped by police and fire officials from dumping toxic materials into the landfill.

At that point, the commission called for action from the state's chief executive. But the members were later reassured that special town counsel would continue to seek the closure of the dump through the court system.

The local Board of Health is involved in the matter because they are responsible for monitoring the procedures of all landfills within the town. Although the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) retains ultimate jurisdiction over landfill operations, the local health board is responsible for ensuring that all procedures are followed.

In regard to the BFI incident last October, the DEQE has sent the company a letter requesting more information about the alledged hauling violation. Pratt stated it is the state's responsibility to take any disciplinary action against the landfill operators regarding that situation.

Editorial

New beginnings

The new year approaches. Here's to fresh ideas, healthy outlooks, and new beginnings. To heck with resolutions. Let's just strive for the best throughout the year.

Without bitterness and resentment for those who treated us unkindly, let's have a year filled with understanding and forgiveness.

To start the new year right, we offer our apologies to longtime Cohasset Selectman Rocco Laugelle. In last week's editorial, we took aim at 'Rocky' and missed the target.

We made reference to Rocky's long hours of service at the George Mealy American Legion Post. It was apparently taken in the wrong context, and for that we apologize for our insensitivity.

Rocky has long been known as an advocate for the servicemen in this community. He knows most of the vets by name, and they in turn recognize him as their friend and ally in local government. He is a tireless worker on behalf of Cohasset's past and present servicemen.

We offer a humble apology and hope that Rocky continues to champion the cause of our hometown veterans.

Let's collectively wish Fire Chief Martin Dooley and his wife the best of new years. May Mr. and Mrs. Dooley find fame and good fortune in 1986. May they possess the serenity, good health and peace they were unable to find in Cohasset.

Continued good health to School Committee member Jack Langmaid. Notorious for his quick, dry wit, Jack usually has some thought-provoking comment on most subjects before the school board. His presence on the board adds insight and enlightenment to most discussions. Best of health and happiness to you, Jack.

Continued good luck to all our school athletic teams and drama clubs during the new year. There's not much to say about the 1985 teams except to thank them for such a brilliant year. They were a source of excitement, pride, and spirit in our community during a time when most other news was not always so uplifting. Whether it was football, basketball, softball or soccer, our teams were tops. Keep up the great work!

The members of the high school dramatic productions were nothing less than spectacular during the past year. They were finalists in state competitions last year, and thus far have performed two super productions. We are grateful to the wonderful talents of our young students, and the superior efforts of directors Bryan Marks and Ron Emmons.

Let's not forget those hours of unrewarded efforts by our town officials during the past year. For reasons difficult to comprehend, these people have surrendered hundreds of spare hours to devote to town issues. Although we may disagree with their opinions, they are the ones who took up the challenge, ran for public office, and devotedly served the town and its taxpayers.

When the majority of us become involved only in single issues affecting us directly, these people have continually offered their thoughts and assistance in a wide-range of situations. Whether it is protection of the watershed, our water supply, maintaining our streets and bridges, negotiating municipal contracts, or listening to a neighbor's complaint, our town officials have served us well this year. They deserve our gratitude and admiration.

Cohasset is a fortunate place. We are blessed with beautiful surroundings, strong friendships, and good fortune. Take time this week to remember those who are not among us today. Those who have died, those who have moved on to a new hometown, and those who have yet to become part of our lives in this small community.

Together we will direct the future of Cohasset, and they will share with us the rewards of our efforts. Unless we collectively work toward a hopeful future, there will be none.

The zoning board eventually ruled in favor of the neighbors, and denied a request by the developers for a special permit. The zoning board made its determination in late July, deciding the house was too close to the lot lines and was being made more non conforming by adding the second level. Although the building inspector was expected to order the demolition of the second story, his decision was delayed when the case went to court. This issue remains clouded as it is being appealed in superior court.

JULY

The Cohasset Community Center publicized its efforts to begin a major fundraising effort to restore and renovate the barn at its Main Street location.

The project, which is still underway, will include reconstruction of the barn for CCC classroom activities. With additional space provided in the barn, the nursery school will function solely for that purpose. Gynmastics, ballet, aerobic and karate classes are among the subjects scheduled for the renovated barn.

With fundraising activities planned throughout the winter and spring, the CCC board of directors is hopeful the total $125,000 project will be funded by the spring. Construction will begin as soon as the total amount is raised.

In addition to this change planned for Main Street, the South Shore Art Center announced its purchase of Tantillo's Auto Body for the future art center site.

The additional space at the corner location will provide South Shore artisans with more studio and classroom opportunities. Although all town boards have granted approval of the move, the art center is awaiting news from the state Division of Water Pollution Control. Before construction begins at the Ripley Road location, the state must overturn its initial disapproval to use the sewer system at the site.

AUGUST

Pollution inside Cohasset Harbor is no stranger. But the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering stepped up its efforts this month to find the source of the long-standing pollutant.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik and DEQE officials have been attempting on a monthly basis, to locate a definitive cause of the pollution which results in a prohibition of all shellfishing in the harbor breakwater to Bassings Beach.

As of this month, Cohasset was officially listed on the state's priority resurvey list. The DEQE completed testings of the water on a more regular basis in attempt to locate the source which causes unusually high bacterial and fecal coloform counts.

The town mourned the loss of two young residents, Mark Delaney, 16, and John Ryan, 20, who died after sustaining injuries in an early morning car crash on South Main Street. Delaney was a student at Cohasset High School. Ryan was a junior at Boston College.

Later that month, officials from the state Department of Revenue made local headlines as they closed a Cohasset business for non payment of taxes. Carmen Carlucci, owner of the Strawberry Parfait, admitted his guilt in not paying a "substantial" amount of employees' withholding taxes and meals taxes to the state. After the amount was given to the state, the Parfait opened its doors that same August night.

By the end of the month, the town learned its watershed construction moratorium approved by voters at the April Town Meeting, was denied by the state Attorney General's office. Because of a procedural snag, the AG's office disapproved the zoning bylaw amendment. Within hours of the town's notification by the state, developers were in the building inspector's office, requesting permits to build along the watershed property.

A stronger construction moratorium was later approved by the December Special Town Meeting.

SEPTEMBER

The first meeting of the French Exchange Committee was held this month. The purpose of the town's newest committee is to formulate and oversee plans to build an exchange program with our sister city of Souppes-Sur-Loing.

The French city had plans underway long before Cohasset became motivated. But members of the committee were determined to seek residents' opinions to begin an exchange program for students.

In previous communications with the Mayor of Souppes, it was difficult for town officials to comprehend the full message. The letters were written in French and an accurate translation was sometimes not possible.

While the exchange committee continues plans to formulate a student program, our French counterparts remain at least one step ahead of us.

In other news, the water commission called for the shutdown of the commercial landfill, Cohasset Heights Ltd. Saying the town has failed to act after a recent engineering study indicated possible contaminants from the landfill to the town's water supply, the commission voted to request legal action to close down the site. The landfill was proceeding "full blast," according to the commission members, despite the engineering study and their understanding that other town boards were attempting to resolve the situation.

The situation remains unchanged today, as the water commission has renewed its request to close the site. The commission will be meeting with the Board of Health and selectmen on that issue this Monday night, Dec. 30.

OCTOBER

What can we say, other than that Hurricane Gloria dominated the news throughout the last week of September and into October. We have located Gloria in our October section of the news events of 1985, because we felt that was when her impact was most felt.

It wasn't the most devastating storm to hit our coastline. But you couldn't say that to Eastern Edison. For days after the weekend storm, Cohasset

Fire Chief Martin Dooley, shown here with his wife Joyce, at a 1983 reception in their honor, will be leaving his post this week. Selectmen have appointed Daniel Brock Cohasset's new fire chief.

The controversy surrounding the financial hardship at Cedar Ledge has yet to be resolved. Families who intended to purchase the condo units remain without homes as their lawyer attempts to block a Hingham bank's takeover of the properties.

1985 saw the appointment of Donald Andrew as the town's acting Executive Secretary/Town Accountant. That post has been pared down and Don serves as selectmen's Executive Secretary. Selectmen will soon name a new accountant.

Barbara Bliss was unopposed in her first campaign for public office. She was elected in April to the school committee seat vacated by Martha Gjesteby.

Diane Sullivan was elected to the Board of Selectmen last April. The seat was vacated four months earlier by incumbent John DeBassio.

Eileen Mullaney of South Main Street spent the past year caring for the sick and dying refugees near Addis Ababa in Ethiopia. She returned home this past week.

Golden to speak in national conference

State Sen. William Golden of Weymouth has been invited to speak at the annual national conference of state legislators in Denver, Col., Jan. 3 and 4.

Golden, who is chairman of the senate committee on counties and of the special commission on hazardous waste liability, will talk about the issue of pollution liability insurance in Massachusetts.

Golden recently filed two bills which would provide that pollution liability insurance is available after Jan. 1.

The focus of the national conference will be on state strategies to control liability insurance costs. A recent national survey has shown that 40 states will address the issue in 1986.

"The issue of pollution liability is an extremely important one," said Golden. "If this type of insurance is unavailable to companies, then businesses and individuals will have no lawful means to cleanup hazardous waste.

"The fact that most of the country will take some kind of action on this issue and that the state legislators' conference will focus on the matter simply emphasizes the tremendous importance of it."

TAXES: We have no idea whether or not there will be tax reform during 1986, but some of our members and friends have chosen to make major gifts to the restoration of the Meeting House in 1985 believing that the present tax laws give more encouragement to generosity. Our Capital Fund Drive is not scheduled to begin until early spring, but should you prefer to make a gift in 1985, we want you to know that a Meeting House Restoration fund has been established by the Treasurer and advance gifts are certainly welcome.

USHERS NEEDED: Anyone willing to serve as ushers for Sundays in January and February should call Marilyn Hobson 383-6870.

CHOIR REHEARSAL: Thursday, Jan. 2 at 8 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 5, rehearsal at 9:30 a.m.

CHURCH SCHOOL: and Youth Group will both resume on January 5, 1986.

Special thanks to all those people who helped to make the Christmas Pageant a beautiful success: Sally Atkinson, Pat Baird, Jill Crafts, Carolyn Curtis.

Obituaries

Mary Ann Calorio

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday for Mary Ann Calorio, 35, who died last Monday, Dec. 23 after a long illness. She was buried in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham.

A lifelong Cohasset resident, Mrs. Calorio had been emloyed for seven years at the Paul Dever School in Taunton, and for the past four years at Wrentham State School.

A 1968 graduate of Cohasset High School, she graduated from Salem State College in 1972 with a degree in education. She also attended Boston College.

She leaves her parents, Pasquale J. Calorio and Helen M. (Bravo) Calorio of Cohasset; a brother, Thomas F Calorio of Scituate; a sister, Patricia E. Hagerty of Hingham; her grandmother, Carmella Bravo of Hingham; two nephews, a niece, and several uncles, aunts and cousins.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston, 02115, or to the Hospice of the South Shore, 400 Franklin St., Braintree, 02184.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Pyne Funeral Home in Hingham.

Kenneth E. Thayer

Funeral services for Kenneth E. Thayer, 67, a retired heavy equipment mechanic at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, were held last week at the Sparrel-McNamara Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Thayer died last week in South Shore Hospital after a long illness.

For 33 years, he had been employed as a mechanic at the Naval Air station. He had served under General George Patton in the European theatre during World War II, with the Army 69th Signal Ghost Corps, an advance unit.

A relative of General Sylvanus Thayer, founder of Thayer Academy in Braintree, and the United States Military Academy at West Point, he was born and raised in Weymouth.

He had been a member of the Oddfellows of East Weymouth.

Husband of the late Barbara (Laugille) Thayer, he leaves two sons, Kenneth E. Thayer Jr. of Weymouth, and Phillip A. Thayer of Abington; a sister, Esther Nolan of Weymouth, and three grandsons.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, 44 Binney St., Boston, 02115.

A musical trip around the stars Jan. 17

Would you like to "swing" on a star or catch a "glimpse" of Halley's Comet? Then join George Guilbault and the Wintersauce Chorale for "Sauce in Space,' a musical trip round the galaxy, on Friday, Jan. 17, at 8 p.m. at First and Second Church in Boston.

Boston's most eclectic choral ensemble sings of the moon, stars and Mother Earth in a program which includes works by Franz Joseph Haydn, from "The Creation;" Samuel Barber, "Adagio for Strings," Op. 11; W.A. Mozart, "The Farmer's Wife Lost Her Cat;" Galt MacDermot, "Aquarius;" James Van Heusen, "Swinging on a Star;" Leonard Bernstein, "This World" and more.

The premiere performance of Joseph Gianono's "Spatial Quantum," a work for synthesizer and chorus will be the highlight of the first half of the concert. Mr. Gianono, a noted composer and arranger, was commissioned to write this piece especially for "Sauce in Space" by Wintersauce Foundation.

Tickets are $12.50 and $10 and can be purchased at BOSTIX at Faneuil Hall or by calling Wintersauce at 523-4634. Discounts are available for senior citizens.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

A REASONABLE SETTLEMENT
The offer made by an insurance company in an injury settlement will vary from company to company, from adjuster to adjuster, and from region to region. The yardstick is derived generally from jury verdicts in the area. Determine what is a reasonable settlement in your area by consulting a lawyer who is knowledgeable in plaintiff's personal injury cases. This can be done by arranging for a consultation to review your case. The lawyer has facts and figures at his disposal that could well bolster the contention that you deserve more in the way of a settlement than has been offered to this point.
Whether in the courtroom or out, be sure that your rights are adequately protected by proper, experienced, objective and professional representation. In personal injury suits as well as in other legal matters, justice may be served and goals accomplished by out-of-court negotiations. LAW OFFICE OF RICHARD PRICE, SMITH, SMITH & PRICE, P.C., 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, Scituate, 545-6660. We are available daily by appt.

residents shivered without warm water, eating cold foods in the dark.

Although explainations have followed, few people who suffered through the aftermath of Gloria comprehend the reasons why we were left in the dark so long. Suffice it to say, plans are being developed to ensure such an occurence will not happen again.

Nature dealt a harsh blow to Cohasset during that storm as winds whipped downs trees, tree limbs, and electrical wires. The Tree and Park Department, assisted by the Highway Department, worked around the clock for several weeks, attempting to clean the fallen debris from properties and roadways.

The town received unofficial word from SEMASS, the trash-to-energy solid waste recovery program, that Cohasset was not likely to be accepted into the project.

We later received official notification that there was no space available for Cohasset's participation in the resource recovery program. After months of research by the disposal area study committee, SEMASS informed Selectman Diane Sullivan that there would be no room for Cohasset.

The study committee is currently reviewing other alternatives, including proposed recovery programs in Weymouth and in Hull.

In addition, members of the local police association refused a five percent pay increase from selectmen. The town officials said that was their concluding offer to the police officers, and added that contract negotiations ended. The association refused the last offer, and subsequently filed an unfair labor practice complaint against selectmen.

The complaint has yet to be decided by the state Joint Labor Management Committee. Town Meeting in December voted to implement the five percent increase, although the police officers insist negotiations are not complete.

Cedar Ledge, the town's second cluster development, ran into deep financial trouble. Many families who signed agreements to purchase the luxury condos, were without homes as nine of the 18 units were not completed. Five families banned together and filed suit against the developer, John Lanata, and the bank which intended to takeover title to the property deeds, Hingham Institute for Savings. The issues remains in land court at the Norfolk County Superior Court.

By the end of October, developer Wayne Sawchuk presented preliminary plans to the Housing Authority to construct 36 housing units, some for low and middle income residents. With the verbal support of the Housing Authority, Sawchuk is proceeding with plans to construct the housing on North Main Street across from Rosano Lane.

He is scheduled to go before the Zoning Board of Appeals in his first public hearing on the matter Jan. 9.

NOVEMBER

Executive Secretary/Town Accountant Don Andrew informed selectmen that the dual position created when he was appointed in June, should be separate once again.

Saying the responsibilities of the two staff positions were "too big for one man," Andrew told selectman he would remain as executive secretary and they would have to appoint a new town accountant.

Andrew served in the combined position for five months before deciding each position required an exessive amount of separate attention and effort. Selectmen heeded his advice and appointed Andrew executive secretary. They are currently interviewing three finalists for the position of town accountant.

Later that month, selectmen named Daniel Brock the new Cohasset Fire Chief. Although the fire chief search committee recommended Capt. Mark Trask, after thorough research and interviews selectmen unanimously agreed to offer the position to Brock, a captain in the Southboro Fire Dept.

Brock is scheduled to begin his duties in Cohasset Jan. 1.

Desite construction delays, septic and water problems, and denial of a beer and wine license, J. Bildner's and Sons opened this month in Cushing Plaza. Hailed as a gourmet grocery store, Bildner's opened to much fanfare. Windward Management, the parent company of J. Bildner's, also purchased Cushing Plaza during the past year and has planned several renovations to the property.

The planning board voted not to approve the site plan presented by Donald Staszko to construct a mega-supermarket on the former Ford Motor Co. property on Rte. 3A. After more than two years of revising plans and presenting them to town boards, Staszko filed suit in superior court against this latest denial. His plans call for a super-supermarket along Rte. 3A, which will include traffic signalization in front of the store at the King Street intersection. The developer has filed for a review of those traffic changes to the state Department of Public Works.

DECEMBER

The Cohasset Teachers Association ratified a three-year contract after more than a year of negotiations with the school committee. The teachers received an immediate five and a half percent salary increase, and a change in the contract's reduction in force clause. The school committee ratified the contract at its Dec. 16 meeting. Both sides said they were pleased with the results of the lengthy negotiations.

Special town counsel for the sewer commission informed selectmen this month that an agreement between Cohasset and the state was at hand. Although a week later, the state indicated its objections to that opinion, negotiations are continuing to obtain funding for the town's alternative wastewater treatment plan. Sen. William Golden and Rep. MaryJeanette Murray are working to help resolve the impasse with the state DEQE.

During this time, the water commission renewed its call to close down Cohasset Heights Ltd. Frustrated by the lack of action on the part of town officials, the commission said some action must be taken to preserve the town's water supply. The engineering study completed in February indicated tracings of leachate from the commercial landfill were found in Brass Kettle Brook, a tributary of Lily Pond.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A lot to be thankful for

Since the wave of immigration in the last century brought Massachusetts out of the Yankee-dominated tradition that had prevailed since the American Revolution, the occasion of year-end holiday festivals has tended to be a parlous time for good government. With stunning regularity popular legislatures and unpopular governors have seen fit to advantage themselves during the preoccupation of normal Christians and Jews with higher matters, and to trundle into law all manner of interest-serving perquisites and other outrages.

A memorable instance of this low form of democracy was the "Great Feeding Frenzy" at Christmas, 1982, when, with Gov. Edward King nearly a dead duck, the legislature put over measures that our grandchildren are likely to still be a-funding in the 2020's. I slip into history by way of pointing out that we enter 1986 relatively free of legislative chicanery.

To the contrary, the legislature and the governor spent the dying days of 1985 conjuring what (I here take their word for it) represents the largest state tax reduction in Massachusetts history: the repeal of the infamous 1975 income tax surcharge. For that to happen in a state with a liberal Democratic governor who had made many commitments to even liberaler Democrats than himself, and in a state with an historically irresponsible legislature, is proof, I believe, that all of us who depend on a strong economy (and that means nearly all of us) have much to be grateful for this January.

Of course, I would argue that if Gov. Dukakis were the giant he has the intellect and personal honor to be, the tax cut would be a full billion dollars, not the approximately 1/3 of a billion it will in fact be. The larger amount, together with the cuts in state waste that would have to accompany it, would, as I believe, assure our state's competitive advantage for years to come. As it is, "Taxachusetts" is, as that brilliant manager of men Raymond Berry said in a different context, "delayed, not denied." This tax cut, welcome though it is, is the product of extraordinary economic growth; it does not result of the curtailment of our "waste-fare" state in which a mountainous, unproductive public sector feeds off the energies and accomplishments of the private sector.

Massachusetts today is thus a little like a fat alcoholic: the fact that we are fat allows us to take a drink and still keep our blood alcohol below .10 . . . but any inference that our body is healthy would be false. In the economic sphere, if, as someday it surely will, the glow goes off our prosperity, and if state government shall not have mended its profligate "waste-faring" ways, our hard-crafted economic well-being could evaporate in a hurry.

What is needed to prevent this is, first, continuing vigilance on the part of the tax cutting forces which to date have done so much to save our beloved state from itself. We ought to be proud that Massachusetts, after California, was the second state in the country to adopt a major tax-cutting referendum (Proposition 2½). What a tribute that is to our people and to those who joined the lonely struggle against prevailing political opinion here a decade ago!

But with state government now in the black and the federal government deeply in debt, the focus of pressure to reduce government spending naturally shifts to the federal level . . . thereby taking some of the heat off the state to maintain its house in order. That's a very good reason for continued vigilance, for without continuing political pressure the state is likely to let its spending balloon again as it did between 1967 and 1980.

Beyond vigilance, I would recommend that tax cutting forces undertake to secure an unprecedented political alliance: tax cutters side-by-side the legitimate recipients of government services. If social service advocates, who traditionally have opposed tax limitation, can be persuaded that bloated and politicized state government robs the services they advocate as much as it robs the taxpayer and the productive economy, the combination of the two groups could politically isolate those who merely feed on state government.

The "mere feeders" — the unproductive political and bureaucratic elements in government, would blanch at an alliance that united advocates of limited government with advocates of better services to the mentally ill. Such an alliance would isolate the "mere feeders," and it would be beautiful to behold — perhaps too beautiful for the real world. But I believe such an alliance is worth pursuing, for as long as we tax cutters give the impression we are opposed to all government spending, even that which the broad center of the political spectrum accepts as necessary and right, we run the risk of isolating ourselves politically — an isolation that could bring about the failure of the tax limitation movement.

Whatever the future holds, the repeal of the 1975 surcharge is an enormous achievement. At the start of a new year it is well to remember that we now live in a state whose governor is honest, able, and a true if reluctant convert to the tax limitation cause. It is a state in which the legislature under Mssrs. Keverian and Bulger is better run than it was under their immediate predecessors. It is a state in which in place of our historic yuletide feeding frenzies our people have won a massive yuletide tax reduction.

That's a lot to be thankful for.

A special Christmas gift for the Mariner

By Mike Berger
Mariner Staff

On Christmas Day the thought of a miracle occurred to me while reading the Boston Globe sports story about recovering heart attack patient and former Boston Patriots runner Jim Nance.

Throughout the story, it is mentioned how Nance refused to quit on himself while others around him said he could never walk again. Now he is an assistant wrestling coach in Milton.

The same things were said of Judy Gilman, Hingham Mariner editor who suffered a serious automobile accident June 12. Judy did not wake up for over a month. Her legs were broken, tubes covered her whole body and her face did not resemble the happy, jovial Judy whose pose in the sailboat picture said it all.

Some medical experts predicted Judy would not come out of it. And when she awoke, there were those who said Judy would never again be in control of her faculties.

The Judy Gilman I found Dec. 23 was very much in control of her faculties.

Wearing a purple sweatsuit, Judy was writing a letter. She often talked about ballet and how her instructor paid her visits. Her favorite music station was on and posters surrounded her bed. Judy noted proudly how she could walk around her room without use of a cane.

Judy had recently completed reading the bold headlines in the Hingham Mariner and noted how the sewer situation and the population in the East School still led the news topics.

Judy noticed there seemed to be more ads in the paper but also noted there weren't enough pictures in the paper. This is a good sign because Judy was a noted critic of photography.

She was all excited because plans were in the works for her and John, her husband, to visit her parents' home in Maine.

Judy aims to be home by May or June. Within the next few months, she will be moved to new living quarters within the Greenery to acquaint her with more living situations.

Both of Judy's eyes have opened, although she sees two images. A patch is still over one eye to discourage the double vision. She enjoys reading and writing and plans are in the works to purchase her a new typewriter.

After Jan. 1, Judy has promised to send a letter to all Mariner readers, thanking them for their support.

Judy's willingness to make a full recovery is rampant throughout all of her conversations. Her diligence and dedication in bicycling has impressed all of her nurses.

Her command of the English language is impressive and she noted she may want to start a new career in speech pathology.

Her memory is still suspect as she was shocked to hear that Ronald Reagan was president. She last remembered Gerald Ford had the reigns of power.

Judy's spirits have soared and it is her spirit which has constantly kept her above the constant medical threats.

If Saturday Night Live's Fernando paid a visit to the Greenery in Brighton, he undoubtedly would have said, "Judy, you look Maarvelous."

This quote occurred to me while I was driving home. "Some people look at things and say Why? I look at things that never were and say Why Not?"

To remember Judy the day after the accident of June 12 and to remember her Dec. 23 is truly a miracle. Santa Claus did pay me a visit this year.

Gift for tax payers

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Third Plymouth District) said, "The taxpayers of Massachusetts are about to get a Christmas present," as the Governor signs a compromise bill this week to repeal the state's 10 year-old 7.5 percent income surtax.

Faced with growing state revenues and the threat of an intiative petition asking voters to repeal the surtax and cap state spending, Rep. Murray explained that both branches of the legislature proposed different versions of the surtax repeal and finally compromised on a bill that will eliminate half the surtax in 1986 and the remainder the following year, resulting in a total tax savings of $331 million.

The no-tax status will be raised to $6,000 for single filers and $10,000 for joint filers. A system of vanishing exemptions will also be implemented, favoring those in lower income brackets. Murray said that while the surtax is out of the way, she expects the other half of the successful referendum proposal imposing a cap on state taxes to be on the ballot in 1986.

"We still have to put a cap on the state's ability to tax to prevent overtaxing in the future. Whether or not the Legislature passes a similar proposal, I expect the voters will do so on the 1986 ballot," said Representative Murray.

Cohasset's plumbing inspector

Bob Leonard Sr. is the town's part time plumbing and gas inspector. He is also, according to Poskus, the town's unofficial "town historian."

Since he retired seven years ago from his local plumbing business, Leonard has worked for the town. According to this Cohasset native, he starts his day at 8:30 a.m. with phone calls and paperwork. He proceeds to the office by 9:30 a.m. "and I hang around 'till about noon." In between, he is busy with appointments and inspections.

A graduate of Cohasset High School in 1934 and the Franklin Institute in Boston, Leonard is a fixture in and around Town Hall. His son Robert Jr. currently manages the family's plumbing firm which began in 1891 when his father Manuel was the town's first plumber.

A harness racing enthusiast (he says 'nut'), Leonard was a former semi-pro baseball player during the Depression, playing throughout to crowds throughout New England. "During the Depression, you couldn't afford to go out, so everyone went to the ball games. If they had 1,000 people in the stands, they'd pass the hat and end up with about $25 for the night," he recalled.

Although he has never owned a harness racer, Leonard had stock in Hollywood Park in California When asked if he made much money from betting on the horses, he answered, "I do pretty good. But it's a secret I'll never tell. Let's put it this way, I've won more than I've lost," he stated.

The 69 year-old plumber follows the familiar state code for all plumbing and gas inspections. After his work is completed each day he goes over to the Common, feeds the hungry ducks, and travels home in time for "Days of Our Lives. Sometimes, if I have no further work for the day, I'll even get to see Dynasty later on," he chuckled.

Leonard and his wife, Lucie, have two sons, Roger, a Cohasset mailman, and Bob Jr.

Public notices

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
Office of the Commissioner of Banks

BAYBANK NORFOLK COUNTY TRUST COMPANY, Dedham, Massachusetts, has petitioned the Commissioner of Banks for permission to establish a branch office at 739 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset, Massachusetts. Any objections or comments relative to this proposal must be communicated in writing to the Commissioner of Banks, 100 Cambridge Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02202, no later than January 10, 1986. A public hearing will not be held unless the response is considered significant by the Commissioner. The petitioner's application, Community Renivestment Act statement, and all communications relative to the application will be available for public inspection at the office of the Commissioner of Banks.

PAUL E. BULMAN
Commissioner of Banks

1/2/85

TOWN OF COHASSET ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

Pursuant to the provisions of the Cohasset Zoning Bylaws and the General Laws, Chapter 40A, a public hearing will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Thursday, January 9, 1986 at 8:00 p.m. to hear and act upon an application for a Variance from Section 4.2 and 12.5 of the Zoning Bylaws and any other relief the Board deems appropriate or necessary for the project. The applicant, Wayne Sawchuk of Cohasset Housing Trust, P.O.B. 38, Cohasset, is seeking relief for the construction of 18 one bedroom and 18 two bedroom rental housing units at 320 & 330 North Main Street, according to the application and plan on file in the office of the Town Clerk (File 85-12-09A).

Crowell to retire; Hart named top administrator

It was a decision made over several months, but the announcement took but a few moments.

At the conclusion of the school committee meeting Monday night, Supt. Eugene Crowell publically stated what had been rumored for months. He will be retiring at the end of 1986.

Within minutes of that proclaimation, the school committee unanimously voted to appoint Assistant to the Superintendent Stephen Hart as his replacement.

It has been an emotional time for the school administration. One of the Cohasset school system's biggest supporters, Malcolm H. Stevens, died last week. Former high school secretary Dorothea Casey passed away Sunday. The meeting commenced with a moment of silence in tribute to the two longtime residents.

In announcing his resignation to the committee, Supt. Crowell noted, "this is one of the toughest decisions I have ever made."

In an interview earlier that day he had said, "If I wanted to continue in education anywhere, in any community, I would want to stay in Cohasset."

"I've written this three different times, and I've ripped it up three times." Supt. Eugene Crowell, announcing his resignation to the Cohasset School Committee.

Supt. Crowell will leave education, but continue to resident in Cohasset. After a year of travel with his wife Marie, the 60 year-old educator will decide whether to enter private business. He does not have any immediate employment plans.

Supt. Crowell will officially leave his position the end of December, 1986. However, it is expected that he will turn over the reigns to his successor by the end of August.

"Why am I retiring?" he asked himself Monday. "It's not my family, and I am not in ill health. This is my sixth year here. There's a lot of night work involved although that's not a factor. It's been tiring, but exciting."

Fire Chief Daniel Brock finished his first week in Cohasset. The 37 year-old chief signed a three-year contract with selectmen. (Bern Caughey)

A new goal - to stop world starvation

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Eileen Mullaney is home now. Her thoughts are thousands of miles away.

She is surrounded once again by comfort, family and friends. But she is constantly reminded of the suffering and sickness she left behind.

Mullaney returned home to Cohasset after a year in Ethiopia. One of four American nurses sent to the drought-plagued land, Mullaney headed a refugee camp outside Addis Ababa feeding the starved, healing the sick.

"It was the best thing I have ever done in my life," she says. "I received so much more than I gave."

Originally, Mullaney was told she would be working at an established medical and feeding camp. But shortly after her arrival last January, she was taken to a barren wasteland and told to set up camp in northern Shoa in the village of Geweha. It was one of 250 such camps in Ethiopia.

Her previous experience as a Peace Corps nurse in South America, and later as a medical volunteer in Somalia, provided the necessary knowledge she needed to construct a camp. She knew a fence must be erected around the parameter of the area and a registration tent must be set up to organize the refugees in need of assistance. A medical tent, a feeding camp, and an intensive care tent were eventually erected.

Living quarters for camp personnel were con-

Fire Chief Brock's impressions on his first work week

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

"It's only been a week," he answered, when questioned about his impressions of Cohasset. The new fire chief quickly notes that of the people he has met, and the places he has seen, his impressions have been positive.

Daniel Brock began his duties January 1 as Cohasset Fire Chief. He is aware that the position did not come without problems to be solved and changes to be made. But he is optimistic and confident that in time, past headlines of dissension within the department will fade like a forgotten memory.

At 37, Brock is a young chief. But his experience and education ranked him above other applicants for the position.

A member of the Southborough Fire Department call force since he was 18 years old, he was appointed a fulltime firefighter in 1976. He was promoted to Captain in January, 1982. This past summer he began applying for positions of fire department chief. Brock was the unanimous choice of the Board of Selectmen to fill the Cohasset post.

His grandfather, Patrick J. Brock, was a member of the call force in Southborough. He retired around 1932. His father, Southborough Fire Chief Edward F. Brock, died of a heart attack last March. He was 59 years old.

It was a difficult decision to leave his native Southborough, but Brock decided it was a necessary move to advance his career. "I was nearing the end of my degree," he said this week in his Cohasset office, "and I felt it was time last summer to start applying for positions. I applied throughout the northern part of the country, although I preferred to stay in New England."

At the time of his appointment in Cohasset, he was also a finalist in other towns. Once he was notified by Cohasset selectmen, he withdrew his name from contention in all other areas.

He is nearing the completion of a Master's degree in Fire Protection and Engineering from Worcester Polytechnical Institute. "I had expected to finish by June," he noted, "but with the move, hopefully I will finish, but it will be a little later."

Brock is one class and a thesis shy of the graduate school degree.

Two memorial scholarships in 1986

It was bitter mixed with sweet. With the passing of two well-known Cohasset residents, came news of additional scholarship awards available to Cohasset High School.

With the addition of the two latest scholarships, Supt. Eugene Crowell said the high school now grants between $50,000 and $60,000 in annual academic awards.

The John G. Carzis Foundation, named after the late owner of Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant and Kimball's, will award two $5000 scholarships this year to a deserving boy and girl from the 1986 graduating class.

The second scholarship will be an annual gift in honor of Malcolm H. Stevens, a former school committee member who died last week. The Stevens scholarship totals $100,000.

School committee member Richard Conley, a close friend of Stevens, announced the formation of the scholarship at the committee's Monday night meeting. Stevens was town accountant for almost 30 years. He was a past president of the Rotary Club. For many years he was a call firefighter.

Prior to a moment of silent tribute to Stevens (and longtime CHS secretary Dorothea Casey who died Sunday), Conley eulogized them as longtime public servants.

Months before his death, Stevens talked about setting up a scholarship foundation at the high school. School administrators, Conley and Town Counsel Richard Henderson worked to establish the scholarship award.

"Mr. and Mrs. Stevens enjoyed our children. He was the fellow in the front row cheering on our basketball team. He knew our kids. He'd point out one and say 'he's a pretty good student, or she's a pretty good student.' I'd like the school committee to

Meeting date change

There has been a change in the date of the next PSO Executive Board meeting. The meeting will now take place Thursday, Jan. 23 at 7:45 p.m. at the Cohasset High School studio.

Rte. 3A intersection

The state has submitted a preliminary redesign of the intersection of Rte. 3A and King Street, and has asked the town to respond to the plans.

Reacting to a complaint from King Street residents concerned with the numerous traffic accidents at the intersection, the state Department of Public Works (DPW) met with state and local officials in late November.

The preliminary plans show King Street intersecting Rte. 3A at an approximate 90 degree angle. State engineer Robert A. Smith designed a curve at the intersection which would force motorists to reduce speed before entering King Street. Also shown on the proposed plans is a new traffic island on King Street which would divide the exit and entry lanes.

The state engineer submitted the plans to selectmen two weeks ago. He also requested a diagram of the collisions which have occurred at the site in the past three years.

Selectmen have reviewed the proposed plans and will submit a response to the DPW.

King Street residents Daniel Cotton and Anne Hardie complained to selectmen several months ago about the number and severity of accidents occurring at the intersection. One of the latest incidents involved a car colliding with the front entrance of the Cotton residence.

Several accidents have resulted in personal injuries and damaged property. In November, the state DPW engineer, Sen. William Golden, Selectman Diane Sullivan and the two King Street residents reviewed the site. At that time, the state promised to have plans developed within two months.

This 1972 eight-cylinder Ford van was just declared surplus property by the town. Supt. Eugene Crowell is accepting bids on the van. For information, call 383-6111.

Changes in fire chiefs: changes in their styles

He holds a Bachelor of Science degree from W.P.I. and an Associate degree in fire science.

When Brock applied for the Cohasset job, he was unaware of any problems that existed. "I hadn't heard about any of it when I applied in response to the advertisement," he stated. "But after I sent in the application, I looked into the town and talked with people who knew Cohasset. I was aware there had been some problems with the fire department.

"Normally, with any department that goes outside for a chief, you realize there must have been problems. It is rare to look outside the department if everyone is happy with the department. You must expect that someone is not happy with everything that is going on."

Since his first day last week, Brock said he has been on several runs with his firefighters. He has met all 24 fulltime men, and his impressions are positive.

"It's an excellent department," he said. "They're a very professional group. The cooperation they've given me has been excellent."

When asked to describe his style of management, Chief Brock responded, "cooperation. I'd rather work with the men than work over them.

"The fire department is an organization that relies heavily on each other. It's a team effort. Although I am captain of that team, I am still part of it," he added. "Whether there is a grievance or a charge made, there's always two views to everything. I'd rather work with the men and not direct or order them."

The new chief said it was because "the selectmen seemed genuinely interested in supporting me as chief and correcting the problems that may have existed here," that convinced him to accept the position.

"I hadn't applied here because I was familiar with Cohasset," he noted. "It was a big step for me, and I have always wanted to be fire chief."

There are small changes already taking place within the fire department. They are not big changes, but they reflect a difference in style.

His predecessor always closed the office door behind him. Chief Brock leaves the door wide open, whether he is on the telephone or in an interview. His thoughts and conversation are never distracted, although the room is filled with the soft-rock music being played on a nearby radio.

At 37, Brock said he is not considered a 'young' chief. "I know of younger fire chiefs," he added. "A while ago, promotions relied heavily on seniority. Today the fire department is highly technical. Individuals learn that technology at an earlier age than traditionally. They have the knowledge to be chief at an earlier age."

Education is important to the new Cohasset fire chief. "My view of firefighting is that it is a highly technical department. Education and training is important. To buy a fire engine today that costs more than $100,000, you want to have a person who is capable of making that decision. You want to have an effectively-run department - one that is capable of saving homes that now cost about $200,000."

Chief Brock has reviewed the trucks and equipment used by the Cohasset force. The pumper, a source of continual aggravation for the department for several years, should be replaced, Brock agreed.

"The other front line trucks look good," he commented. "Reserve Engine 2 should be replaced down the road."

He is also aware of plans to renovate the police and fire station. He has reviewed the preliminary plans with the executive secretary, and will be an ex-officio member of that study committee.

Although he has lived in Southborough all his life, Cohasset has impressed him as "a nice town. So far, the people I've met have been very nice. It seems like a friendly town."

He and his wife Ruth, will be putting their home on the market and searching for a new residence in or near Cohasset. "I'd like to live in Cohasset," he said hopefully. "I'd like to be able to attend town meetings and vote on my own salary."

His wife, a medical technician at Framingham Union Hospital, has begun the search for new employment in this area.

"It's been hard leaving my friends in Southborough. But Cohasset looks like a nice place to live. It looks like a comfortable place," he added.

"This will be it for a while," he said, noting that any longterm ambitions might include an administrative position in a larger town or city, employment in the state fire marshal's office, or as a private fire service consultant.

For now, one of his more immediate goals is to learn the back streets and neighborhoods of Cohasset. Currently, he relies upon the department's dispatcher and a handy set of maps to help him navigate through town.

"When I've been out on a call, the dispatcher will give me directions. It's been very easy to find all the main roads. Now I have to learn where everything else is," he said.

Back from a land of death, she will depart again

structed above the camp site atop the majestic hills. Although much of the time the mountains were brown and burnt by the scorching sun and 105 degree heat, Mullaney said it reminded her of the Grand Canyon.

She had experienced the overwhelming emotion of seeing the desperation of dying children and adults, but "nothing could have prepared me for what I saw in Ethiopia," she says.

As soon as she arrived in the cursed country, wide-eyed children, no more than skeletal frames covered with a layer of opaque skin, would clutch at her legs for attention. Mothers and fathers, many of them wearing the hooded mantel of mourning atop their heads, would grab her arms and pray for food.

"I had bruises on my arms, they would hold me so tight. It was like nothing I had ever seen," she recalls. Yet, despite such memories of deprivation, Mullaney says the Ethiopians are among the bravest, strongest and kindest people she has ever met.

When a child dies, she cites as an example, the parents will scream, moan and cry for days. The noise is abundant as the emotions are released. But the moment the wailing stops, the mourning is done. The child is buried and life continues for the other family members struggling to survive.

"It may sound strange. But in that country, it is survival of the fittest," Mullaney says."No matter what happens to a father, a mother, or a child, life goes on and they must continue."

Strangers will embrace a mourning mother or father as they prepare the body for burial. Men kiss, women cry together. They touch each other physically and spiritually.

"These people are so wonderful. They taught me to be more sensitive to my feelings and to others. They gave me so much," she says.

As the months continued, and the camp administrator became a trusted and welcomed friend, refugees called her Mama or Sister. When she left in December, they offered her their clothing or articles from their makeshift huts. "They give pieces of themselves," Mullaney adds.

The experiences of the past year have taught her much. Mullaney will now work toward a single goal in her life - to end starvation throughout the world.

As she simply states, "If we are capable of throwing spaceships into space, there should be no hungry people."

Mullaney will begin working for the PAX Foundation, an organization whose single objective is to administer help to starving people and dying countries. Not only do they provide food and medical assistance, but PAX will fund and initiate rehabilitation and development project in the areas.

That is important to Mullaney. Not simply a food and medical relief organization, PAX works with the affected people, teaching them skills which will help them end their own suffering and scourge.

She will begin her task soon. Traveling from city to city in this country, Mullaney will talk with church congregations, students and businessmen. She will tell them how starvation and sickness can be stopped, and how people everywhere have a need to help themselves. They don't simply want your money, she says, they want knowledge.

There are some relief organizations around, Mullaney says, which provide great assistance to third-world countries. There are some that do not accomplish such feats.

USA for Africa, the well-known organization started by US celebrities last summer, was a great source of food and medical supplies to Ethiopians. "I'd say 80 to 90 percent of the money got to Ethiopia. We got all the drugs and IV's we needed," Mullaney says, adding, "I just wish someone had come out to the field and asked us what we needed. Instead of giving us $25,000 worth of Pedialite, they could have supported a six-month training program in oral rehydration."

What the nurse is saying, is that USA for Africa, like many other well-meaning organizations, would have better served the refugees by training them to prevent dehydration, rather than spending money on a temporary cure.

"We could have trained thousands of people on how to make replacement fluids to feed their babies. We could have shown thousands how to boil water, and to add flour and salt to the mixture. This simple training program could have saved a village for their entire history," she explains.

The concept of the PAX Foundation, she says, is to give hungry people everywhere the power and knowledge to feed themselves.

During her year in Africa, Mullaney was host to celebrities, politicians and reporters who traveled to the war-torn country. Starvation in Ethiopia was big news last year. Harry Belafonte, Sen. Ted Kennedy and a host of Boston and national television newsmen walked through the camps, witnessing the devastation of dying people.

"Most people were not prepared for what they saw. They had a hard time looking," she recalls. Belafonte politely declined an invitation to visit her camp. Ted Kennedy Jr. was traumatized by the site, but quickly pitched in and helped the medical personnel. Most reporters were unaware of their location, and why the starvation had reached epidemic proportions.

News value waned, Mullaney says, when the monsoon rains dumped water upon the lifeless land. Although the rain continued daily for two months, Mullaney said by the spring, conditions will reach the same barren conditions as before. Soils will be dried once again, and predictions are that 5 million people will starve in this new year.

"The rains came so fast and so hard, we couldn't get the oxen and tools out to the field fast enough. The harvest will yield only enough food to feed a small portion of the population for two to six months. There will be mass starvation by the spring," she says with despair.

It is a paradox of nature that the saving rain also washed away the topsoil and obstructed the transportation of needed tools and supplies to the fields.

"I am pleading for the US to take another look at Ethiopia. There is a problem that remains. When you are reaching for the extra bottle of Diet Pepsi, I want you to think about these people who will be dying this spring," she says, while picking up the ringing telephone in her South Main Street home. It is a call from her co-worker in Ethiopia. She will be returning home next week. Mullaney and her friend will reunite in Florida, and then begin their work for PAX.

During the conversation, she also speaks with an Ethiopian native who works at the camp. She assures him her thoughts remain in that tiny African village, that she wants to see him again.

Mullaney explains how strange it is to return to the abundance of Christmas in America, traveling from a country filled with disease and despair. "It's strange," she says quietly, "walking into the Stop and Shop here. It's very different."

Mullaney would argue that she is not working to save people. She is a teacher.

"These people in starving countries are becoming dependent on organizations that have kept them alive. We need to show them how to continue to live. These people are so independent. It kills them to take a handout," she says.

While Mullaney longed for New England apples and cold milk, the people she left behind pray for life.

"Ethiopia was the most positive experience of my life. I have only gained by being there."

Commission approves plans

In public hearings Tuesday night, the Conservation Commission approved a notice of intent for work at 66-68 Spring St. and signed a notice of Applicability for three lots on Ketcham Lane.

Bruce Cameron of Atlantic Associates appeared with a notice of intent to repair two porches, create two driveways and do some landscaping on the two Spring St. units, which are in a wetlands.

Cameron and his partner Ken Ekberg plan to replace the brick pilings on the two porches with concrete forms that conform to the present code.

They also plan to install two parking spaces of crushed stone and replace the rest of the macadam drive with seed and sod.

Neil Murphy, representing Dr. Patrick Morrissey, appeared with a determination of applicability for the septic systems on lots 3, 7 and 8 on Ketcham Lane.

The systems being installed are more than the required 100 feet from the wetlands, however, the grading required brings them within that distance.

Commission Member Bob Maki explained that as long as the system is not within 50 feet of the wetlands and is approved by the Board of Health, it is not the commission's responsibility.

Selectmen discuss additional mooring space

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

To resolve a dispute over mooring space in Cohasset Harbor, selectmen requested Harbormaster Harry Ritter to discuss the possibility of creating a new space with Cohasset resident Herbert Jason. Ritter will then make recommendation to the board.

Jason appeared before the board Monday night seeking the selectmen's approval to create a new space in the harbor.

In a heated discussion, Ritter maintained there was not enough room in the harbor to safely moor another boat.

Jason was appearing on behalf of his grandson, Gregory Small who was unable to attend the meeting.

Small has been on the waiting list for a mooring space for seven years, and according to Jason he was passed over for two other fishermen last summer.

"Greg was not contacted about the opening," Jason claimed.

Ritter said he did notify Small when he came for a permit last summer.

"I asked him if he was planning on putting a boat in the water this year and he said 'no'."

The Board agreed this was not sufficient notification. A new policy has since been put into effect which requires written notification to the applicants.

Showing snapshots of the boats in the harbor, Jason explained his plan to move the moorings of two boats to create a space large enough to accommodate another boat.

Jason also pointed out that originally four boats with a total length of 147 feet occupied the space now mooring three boats with a total length of 93 feet.

"That leaves 54 feet of space which can be used by adjusting the moorings of the other boats," Jason said

Ritter replied, "for the best interest of safety and maneuverability, you need this space to navigate."

Selectmen Diane Sullivan asked Ritter exactly how much space was needed for each mooring.

Ritter said it depended on different tides and times.

Jason said that the boats did move but that they all move in the same direction.

Chairman Frank England told Jason that the photos weren't sufficient evidence to show there was space available.

"You should come back with a chart of the harbor and circles on it showing how the boats will fit," England told him.

Sullivan disagreed with England, saying she did not think they should be required to do this.

"I've been in this harbor all my life," Jason said. "And I wouldn't tell you this if I didn't think it would work. I would look like a fool if it didn't."

After some discussion the board decided to request that Ritter work with Jason to determine if there is space available. Both Ritter and Jason left before the selectmen made their decision.

— In other business the board approved 3-1 the wire inspector's budget giving him an increased $600/year car allowance.

Inspector Steve Wigmore said he could no longer use his car for town work without an increase in the flat rate. This will put the figure at $1,800/year. Wigmore requested either an increase in the rate or a truck for the department.

Executive Secretary Don Andrews recommended the allowance, stating that he felt the request was reasonable.

The new budget also adds ten more hours of overtime pay and $400 more in part time wages.

— The board approved a proposal from Don Andrew to transfer a percentage of his salary and responsibilities for the day to day operation of the accounting department and computer system to Mary Ann Barbuto.

— Andrew also received approval to recruit qualified individuals for the office of Town Accountant.

— The board approved a $25 fee for street openings to cover the cost to the town. Town Departments are exempt.

— A statute was approved allowing the town to charge an additional 10 percent for off-duty details of police and firemen to cover payroll and insurance costs.

— The board is taking under advisement a bid for the fire alarm communication board from the R.D. Allen Company of Northampton, N.H. The $16,020 bid was the only one submitted. Funding for the project was appropriated at Town Meeting.

Ward Engineers & state officials are talking the same talk

For the first time, representatives of Ward Engineering are "talking the same language" as engineers from the state Division of Water Pollution Control.

The sewer commission is optimistic that an amended wastewater facilities plan will be developed and approved by the state, following a 'working' meeting with the state engineers last month.

Engineers Joseph Ward and Chuck Dauchy of Ward Engineering, met Dec. 30 with four DWPC engineers. At that meeting, they discussed and developed methods to amend the Ward plan for state and town approval.

"It was purely an engineering meeting," Sewer Commission member Ted Guild acknowledged. When questioned about the meeting, Guild said it was the first time engineers for the town sat down and worked with state engineers. Buoyed by the success of the first meeting, Guild said the commissioners are optimistic that a second scheduled meeting will lead to an amended plan acceptable to the town and the state.

"Everything went well with this first meeting," he said this week. "There is another scheduled this month."

The working session was set up following a round of negotiations between the state Attorney General's office and the town's special counsel.

"The meeting Dec. 30 was purely a working meeting, not a political meeting," Guild emphasized.

The engineers decided that another meeting was necessary to develop more specific details of an amended plan. Ward Engineering now has a scope of work proposed by the state, Guild added.

This latest meeting followed a series of talks between state and local representatives which began in late November. It was the commission's understanding at that time that the state would agree to an amended version of the Ward facilities plan.

When that was announced publically to selectmen, the state DWPC responded by saying no such agreement was reached.

Sen. William Golden and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray worked to establish communications with the state, and held meetings between town and state officials.

Guild said this engineering session was a direct result of the talks held recently between the state officials and the town's legal counsel.

"We are optimistic," Guild said, "that we are now speaking the same language. The engineers are now sitting down together and working it out. We feel we have something really concrete now."

Final voting for King Award closes Jan. 20

The ballots for the selection of the winner of the first annual Forrest E. King Memorial award have been mailed to chamber members.

The four nominees are Dan Leahy of Kimball's By the Sea, Andrea Merrill of the Consignment Shop and Jack Conway Co., Sue Straley of Cards and Shards and Frank Smith of Flemings.

President Wood is encouraging all chamber members to vote whether or not they participated in the nomination voting held last month. Each member is entitled to one vote.

The voting will close January 20, and the results will be kept secret until a dinner dance ceremony to be held Februrary 14 at Kimball's By the Sea.

Chamber members who have not received a ballot or who wish more information may call Valerie King, 383-1755 or Joe Quinn, 383-9753.

☐ Donald and Donna (Sargent) Davis of 14 Elm Street are celebrating the birth of their son, Dec. 11 at the Quincy City Hospital.

☐It certainly will be a happy new year, and a busy one, for Gregory and Jody Dowyle, who had a baby daughter on Dec. 16th at South Shore Hospital. Happy days ahead for this happy family!

☐ Have you seen the hottest item of the New Year yet? Take a peek at any one of the "Cohasset Townies" and see if you see the latest rage... Jean Salvador had T-shirts made up that refer to the "Cohasset Natives" as an "Endangered Species". Wonder who is entitled to wear them, just the natives or some of us "newcomers" too.

□ Liam Stanford has had a super year for the Cohasset Skippers to date! He was mentioned several times in the local papers for his talents on the football field, and the Gridiron Club rewarded him for his efforts by presenting him with the Most Valuable Player trophy at the end of the season. Now Liam is Wrapped Up (excuse the pun) in wrestling, and doing a fine job for that team. In fact, he started off the season with a bang when he came in first in the Holiday Tournament, held in Marshfield recently. Congratulations to you Liam, we will be watching for more "ink" as the season progresses.

□ The George H. Mealey American Legion Post # 18 of Cohasset has issued an invitation to the town, and wants to be sure that you know about it. They are holding a brunch on Sunday, January 12 from 9 to 12:30. The menu will include scrambled eggs, baked beans, sausage, muffins, coffee and juice. All of that food at the cost of $3.00! Everyone is welcome, so be sure you bring the family and be prepared for a delicious breakfast, as well as a grand view of Cohasset Harbor to enjoy while you dine.

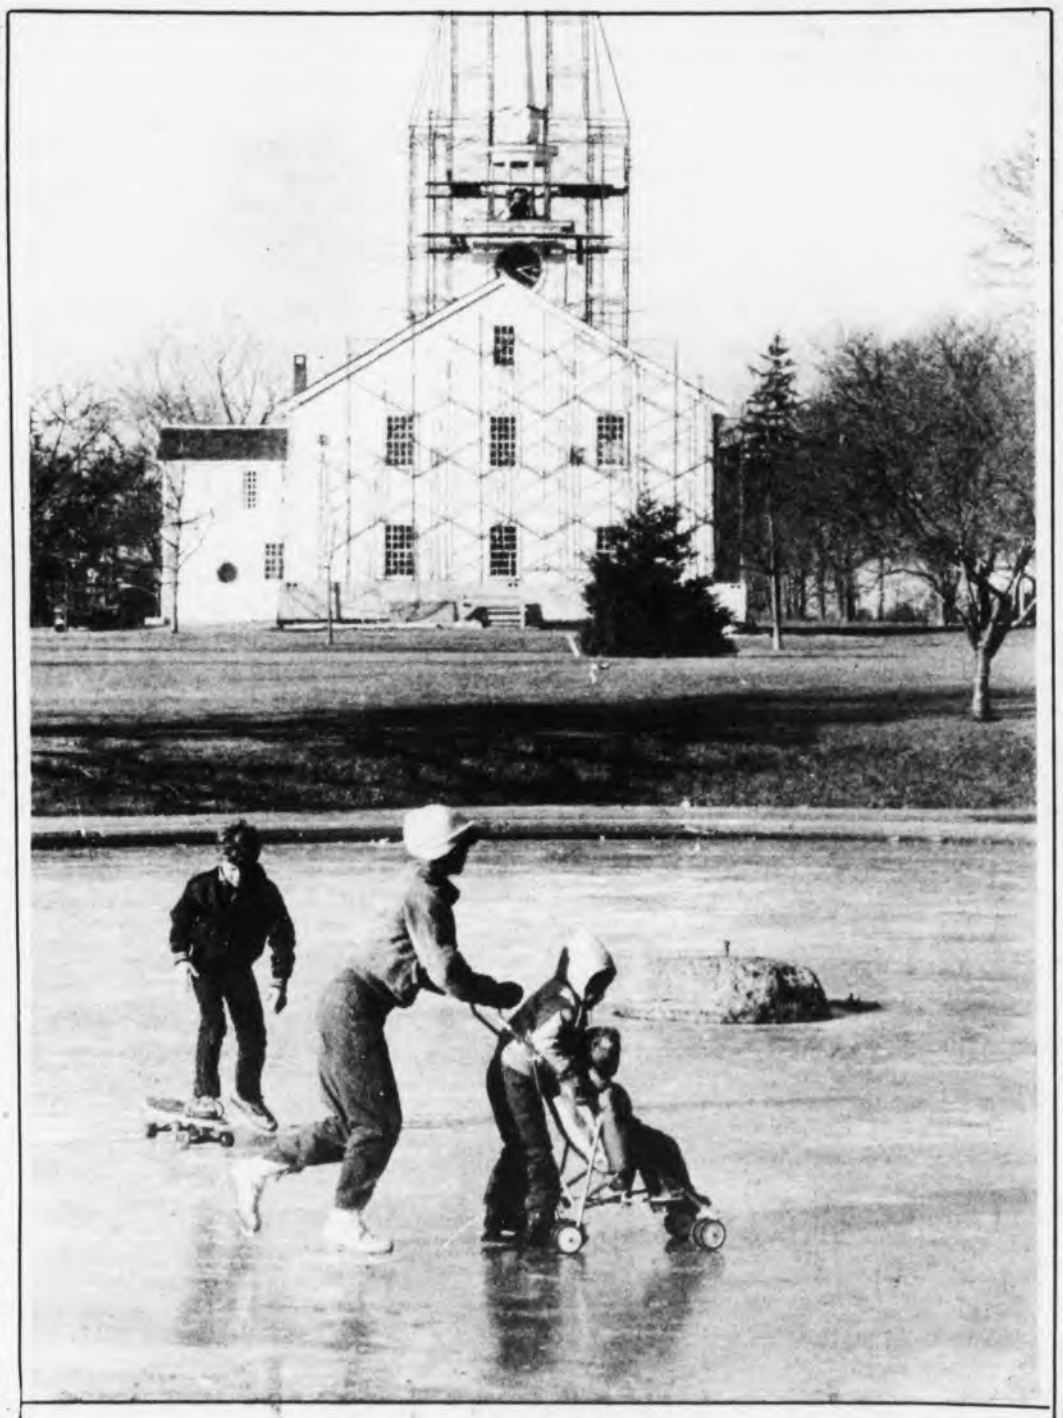
□ The Kirkendalls were spotted at a recent hockey game. Mrs. Kirkendall even jogged to get there! Must be a big attraction on the ice . . .



Where there's a will, there's a way. While Mark Beals attempts a tricky skateboard manuever on the frozen Common water, Joan Kovach attends to Stephen and Peter in the stroller.

(Bern Caughey)

□ The girls basketball team had a super weekend on the Cape, winning both of their games while they were there. There's a lot of talk that there will be two teams going to the States again this year, but I won't jinx anyone by saying who!

☐ We feel so honored living next door to an award-winning television star! Lincoln Bloomfield, author of the HBO presentation "Countdown to Looking Glass," will be flooded with calls from Hollywood now. The HBO dramatic special won the Venice Film Award and was honored as the top dramatic special from the Awards for Cable Excellence. Couldn't happen to a nicer and more deserving man.

□ Welcome home to Eileen Mullaney, who certainly will have a lot of memories and stories about her year helping the starving refugees in a camp near Addis Ababa. It must be a relief to Eileen's family to have her back safe and sound, even thoug it won't be for long as she will then go on a lecture tour telling about her experiences. It will undoubtedly horrify her to see the food that we seem to waste, after an experience like that . . .

□ Cohasset sure lost a wonderful individual last week, with the passing of Helen Barrow. One wonders what the town elections will be like without her, she was certainly a huge part of them for so long. Her smiling face will be missed around town, she was a grand lady.

□ "See you at Bildner's" was the phrase that was heard a lot over the holidays! The whole plaza was mobbed with cars and shoppers, and it was a wonderful sight to see.

□ The winter recreation programs are all lined up, and promise to be great ones. If you are looking for a good way to spend idle time, why not take bridge lessons or creative dramatics to name a few. For further information call the Recreation Department at 383-6791.

□ That's the news from here for the week, don't forget to call with your news. There should be plenty now that the holidays are over and you can relax long enough to remember all of the good things that went on. Share your family's current events with us.

MORTGAGE ALTERNATIVES

Many homebuyers resist Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARM's) on principle. Memories of soaring interest rates and jitters about the future make the certainty of knowing exactly what mortgage payments will be attractive to some buyers. In addition, ARMs' have received some unfavorable coverage in the consumer press.

While an ARM is not for everyone, it is certainly worth discussing with your leader. Most of the ARM programs now being offered have overcome the objections for which they have been criticized in the press. There are usually limits in the amount they can go up at each adjustment period and over the life of the loan, making the maximum amounts predictable. Depending on the program you select, the payments could be considerabley lower than the 30-year fixed mortgages during the first 2 to 5 years of the loan.

Do you plan to be in your new home for less than six years? Do you expect your family income to increase over the next few years? If the answer to either question is yes, an ARM can save you money or substantially increase your purchasing power.

If you're considering a move, contact the professionals at Home Center Realty. You can stop by our office at 57 Water St., Hingham or give us a call at 749-8833.

Planning Council proposes water supply district

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

South Shore towns from Cohasset to Plymouth will be included in a new regional water supply district if a plan by the Brockton-based Old Colony Planning Council becomes a reality.

OCPC is advocating a bill filed in the state legislature by Rep. Thomas Kennedy (D-Brockton) to create the Southeastern Massachusetts Water Supply District.

The bill would create an independent agency to ease wholesale water transfers between communities in Plymouth, Bristol and Norfolk counties. If approved in its present form, the agency would include 38 communities from the coastal towns to the Rhode Island border, including the cities of Brockton and Taunton.

According to OCPC spokesmen, the proposed region contains a number of aquifers and five major river basins — water sources which could help communities plagued by shortages.

The bill was filed in late November. It is currently being printed and will be assigned a number later this month for consideration by a House committee, according to John Waldron, an aide to Rep. Kennedy.

Creation of the agency would allow the smooth transfer of water between communities in the district, a mechanism which does not exist now, said Pembroke OCPC representative Gerard Dempsey.

Dempsey said member towns would have the means to buy water from others on an emergency basis.

"No such transfer mechanism exists now," he said in a recent interview. "That's really been our Achilles Heel on the South Shore — our inability to move water where it's needed.

"We as a region don't have a water supply problem, we've got a water distribution problem."

Towns faced with severe water shortages may buy water from other municipalities now, but must gain state approval before a water transfer may be made.

The legislation would also require member communities to complete management plans to project water needs over the next 20 years, according to OCPC Executive Director Daniel Crane.

"If a town finds out it doesn't have sufficient water to meet its expected needs, it will have the mechanism it needs to buy water elsewhere in emergencies," Crane said.

Dempsey and Crane both said the district would not supercede the authority of local water commissions.

"No community wants a regional body telling them what to do," Dempsey said. "What this will do is take these matters out of the courts.

"What's going to happen to our region in the next 20 or 25 years? Growth is a sure bet. Will we be fighting between communities or cooperating to find answers to our mutual problems?"

Dempsey was referring to current litigation between Brockton and Kingston. Brockton has asked state officials for permission to use water from sources in Kingston other than Silver Lake, the city's main source of water.

Both OCPC officials also denied the bill was filed for the sole benefit of Brockton.

Although no town would be forced to sell water to to its neighbors, Crane said the proposed agency could require members to enter into arbitration to settle disputes over supplies and sales.

OCPC began planning for the proposed agency more than three years ago, Dempsey said. As the legislature debates the bill, OCPC will meet with selectmen and water officials in each town to gain input on the proposal.

"This is just the initial stage, of course," he said. "We expect plenty of changes in the proposal, just as many bills get changed in the legislative process."

Crane said the bill would only create a water supply agency for the region and does not address the potential cost of a water distribution system between towns.

New distribution systems "are a question of engineering that will be answered later on," Dempsey said. "But first, we have to get the agency up and going before we can worry about distribution and capital costs."

Historical Society offers reproductions

Twelve works of art depicting scenes of historical importance relating to the town of Cohasset now are being offered as reproductions by the Cohasset Historical Society, suitable for framing for office or home, the reproductions are in the form of high-quality photographic prints which can be ordered through the Society.

Taken from the numerous paintings and prints of old Cohasset and associated subjects, most of which are on display in Historical Society buildings, the 12 pictures selected for reproduction represent diverse views of the town's past, ranging from an early farmhouse painted by an acknowledged master to a three-masted schooner under full sail to a pastoral primitive watercolor painted by a Cohasset schoolgirl of the early 19th century, and a powerful character study in the form of a portrait of an Assistant Lighthousekeeper at Minot's Ledge Light.

The photography for these Society reproductions has been done by Cohasset photographer Imants Ansbergs, professional museum photographer. The proof prints (of reduced size) and many of the original works of art themselves can be seen at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, Summer Street, Cohasset, by appointment, and orders for reproductions may be placed there. Call the Society at 383-6930 for appointment. The photo reproductions can be obtained at full size of the original, or at reduced size.

If you are intersted in obtaining one or more of these unique reproductions of historically important artworks, please contact the Society. The 12 works available are as follows: four different views of Cohasset Harbor and its environs showing it as it was during the 19th century, an oil painting of Christopher James' Farmhouse of 1704, the Barque "Kepler" in the harbor of Venice, an oil portrait of Assistant Lighthousekeeper Roscoe Green Lopaus at Minot's Light, an Audubon chromolithograph of the "Swallow-tailed Hawk," a Lothrop family primitive, an oil of "The Tern" (three-masted schooner), "Harold B. Cousens," and a print of the first Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

Smooth transition

There was a lot of news in Cohasset this week.

First, we welcomed a new fire chief to our town. Daniel Brock began his duties as Cohasset Fire Chief last week.

After three years of turmoil, Chief Brock will attempt to take the department out of the newspapers and return it to the community.

He is impressed with the department and the Cohasset firefighters. He said they are competent, professional and cooperative. We hope that spirit of confidence continues. At 37, Chief Brock has said he would like to stay here for some time. We could use a lot more of that confidence within the department.

Good luck to Chief Brock and the fire department. Let's continue that spirit of cooperation for the good of the community.

Secondly, we sadly note the retirement of School Supt. Eugene Crowell. He has been in Cohasset a relatively short time, but has been a fixture in this town since his arrival.

As school administrator, he has overseen the education of our children in a quiet, professional manner. He has great pride in our children, their teachers and parents.

Supt. Crowell avoided headlines and news-making comments throughout his career. He accepted the low-key approach in his decision-making process.

In a time when school systems around the state were thrown into turmoil and demise, he has directed our system with great success. In years when public education has declined in reputation and in reality, Supt. Crowell navigated our system to new heights. Our students are still accepted into the highest-ranked colleges, our athletic teams soar to greater achievements, and our staff, students and parents continually demand quality education.

It is a great achievement that Supt. Crowell kept our schools alive. But we have not simply survived. Cohasset remains an example for all to follow. We have our superintendent to thank for such outstanding leadership, guidance and support. Without his direction, it would be fearful to guess where our educational system may have wandered.

And finally, we welcome our new superintendent, Stephen Hart. He was the first and only choice of his predecessor. He is the best choice.

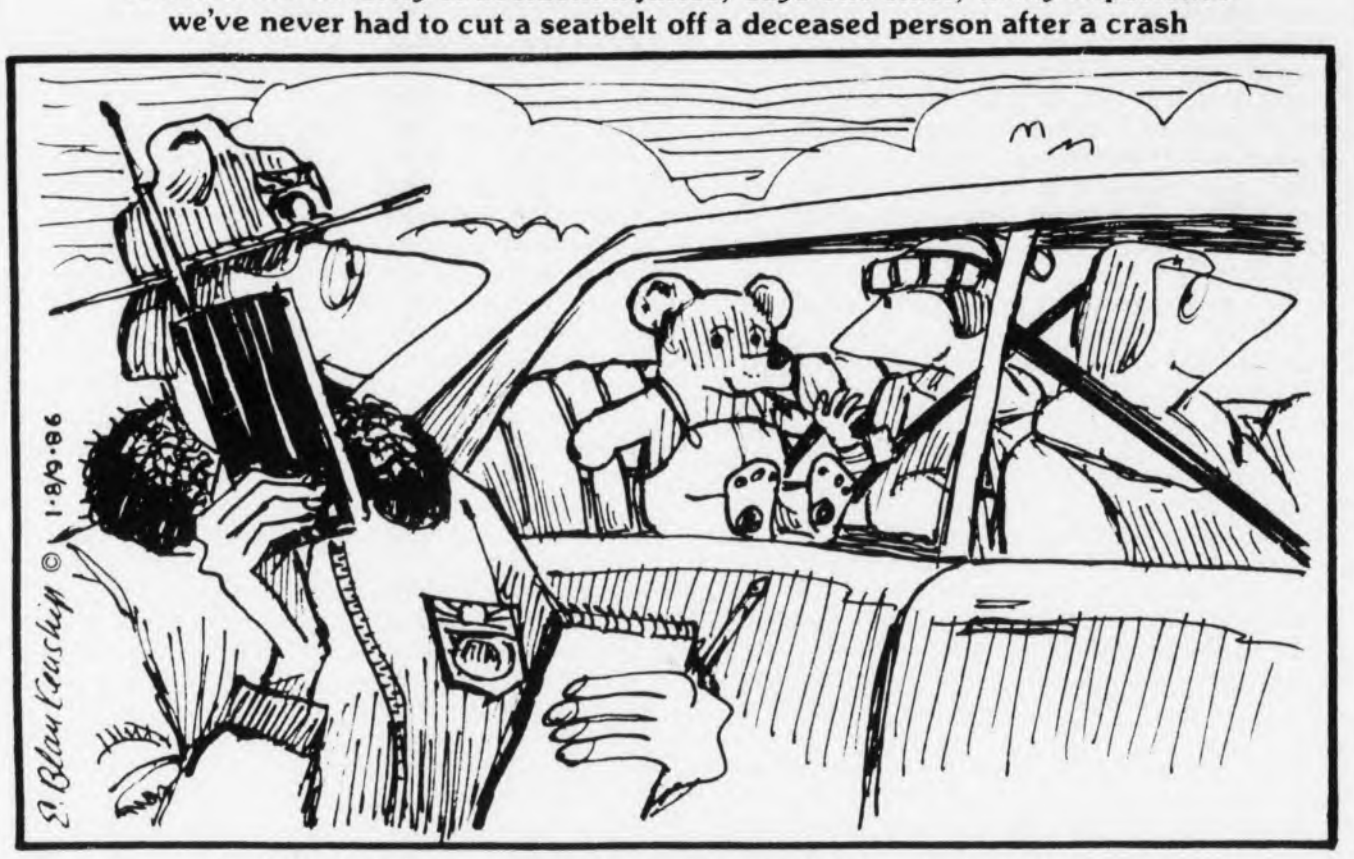
As one school committee member noted, why spend thousands of dollars and search the country for a new superintendent when we have the best one within our system?

He is knowledgeable of our past, and aware of the future. Mr. Hart is what Cohasset schools need in their continual quest to thrive.

He knows the students and their parents. He has been a part of the Cohasset teaching staff. He is director of special education for Cohasset, and has been the budget-watcher for many years.

Stephen Hart is a positive selection. With Hart at the helm, we can look forward to continued progress and an enriching education for all our children.

NEWS ITEM — Opinions of area police chiefs on new seatbelt law vary. Whatever personal feelings, however, the chiefs say they're ready to implement the law. 'There's no question in my mind seatbelt use reduces the severity of accident injuries,' says one chief, 'in my experience we've never had to cut a seatbelt off a deceased person after a crash



"...Little lady here wants to know if the seatbelt law includes her teddy bear...How do we stand on that, Sarge...?"

Morgan Memorial thanks holiday contributors

To the Editor:

We are grateful to local residents for donating time and money to Morgan Memorial Goodwill during the holiday season. Sharing our good fortune contributed to the gift of self help for the handicapped and less fortunate people we traditionally serve.

During the year, Morgan Memorial Goodwill trains more than 700 handicapped clients in vocational rehabilitation programs, sends more than 1,000 city children to our Fresh Air Camps in the country, educates troubled youth at the Hayden Goodwill Inn School in Dorchester, and serves more than 10,000 hot lunches to senior citizens. These programs are year around.

During the holidays, we try to help make it a real holiday for children, senior citizens and people with handicaps by reaching out with special holiday dinners, children's parties and gifts of toys and warm clothing. All this is made possible through your generosity.

For most of us, the holiday season is a joyous time of hopes and dreams. For the growing number of poor children, the elderly, and people who cannot work because of handicapping conditions however, holiday joys are diminished by the struggle to survive. We hope our special holiday celebrations make it possible to temporarily forget the problems of unemployment, lack of affordable housing and poverty.

We are grateful to you for what we consider a partnership in giving and serving. Your support is crucial. Thank you.

Dennis R. Midgorden
President
Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries

Campbell challenges Kasperowicz

To the editor:

In a letter published December 26, Ms. Kasperowicz claims that I objected to sitting in the non-voting section and insisted on sitting in the voting section. That is untrue, and I challenge her to name even one individual to which I "objected" or "insisted". There isn't any. I sat in the back at the left, where the non-voting section was indicated to be, but apparently one or two rows too far forward. (There were many voters sitting in the reserved seats). At any rate, I did not participate in voice votes, and I did speak to the moderator before the meeting to remind him of my non-voting status.

Anyway, I apologize for the consternation that Ms. Kasperowicz alleges was suffered by the town officials and the voters. However, it's doubtful that many of the objections were related to where I was sitting — that's an after-the-fact rationale that makes people feel less petty about having objected.

I'm aware of some of the chatter around town about my motivations and right — or lack of it — to speak out, some of it by a neighbor, and I'm not surprised that Ms. Kasperowicz's objections are ad hominem in nature, rather than challenges to the factual content of my missives.

What baffles me is that no one seems willing to examine the matter objectively, and to do a little hmework. Democracy should be more than following the person with the most glowing promises — it should include examination by knowledgeable participation, and it should include a willingness to stand up and speak against a popular trend.

Two new 1986 scholarships accept the Malcolm H. and Helen C. Stevens Scholarship Fund."

Supt. Crowell noted that with the addition of the Stevens' award and last year's Margaret Mary Hardy scholarship, the high school is "fast approaching $50,000 - $60,000 in funds available to our students each year."

He explained that committee member Conley has been involved in the creation of the Stevens award for the past two years.

Last Friday, the superintendent received a check from the Carzis Foundation, with a letter stipulating the conditions of the scholarship award. Supt. Crowell stressed this is a one-time award given to two 1986 CHS graduates.

The superintendent will appoint a committee who will name the recipient of the award. The school committee has not yet reviewed the conditions of the scholarship.

"This is a one-time grant to two deserving students. It will certainly make two students very happy and give them the possibility of attending a particular university they may not have been able to attend before," he said.

Details of the Stevens' scholarship will be announced at a later date as they are finalized by the school administration. They will be awarded to students of academic merit, Supt. Crowell stated. It is the committee's intention that the scholarship grants "reach as many students in need as possible."

Committee member Conley remembered John Carzis as "generous beyond what a lot of people knew. It is nice to know he still remembers us."

CHS Principal Richard Streeter noted that for several years the Carzis Foundation donated an anonymous scholarship each year to the graduating class. It was an annual grant of $1000, he said.

Crowell's recommendation to appoint Hart

There were four factors, Supt. Crowell told the committee, which made this a most difficult decision to make.

The geography of the town - "where is there a better place to live?" he asked. He also emphasized the numerous achievements of Cohasset students and the close involvement of their parents in the educational system. "I couldn't ask for a more eager group of young men and women. They never fail to amaze me," he noted.

Supt. Crowell said he has been "privileged to work with the best teachers I have worked with in my 36 years of education. There is not a better, more professional group of people than those found here. They are a fine, caring group of teachers."

He also complimented the school committee members, noting they have "always considered the welfare of the children" in their decisions and policies.

"It has not been an easy decision," he emphasized. "But I would like to do other things outside the public (sector). Maybe I'll look to college teaching or consulting, or private industry. I'll take a year off, reacquaint myself with my bride, and take some trips."

Stephen Hart

A graduate of Tufts University with a master's degree, he also holds a certificate of advanced studies in administrative supervision. He began his teaching career 36 years ago in Somerville. After obtaining his master's degree, he was employed in private industry as a quality control engineer in Medford.

He returned to the classroom in Woburn, Topsfield and later in Danvers. In Danvers, he was named director of guidance, then Assistant Superintendent of Secondary Education Curriculum Development and Assistant Superintendent of Schools. He remained in Danvers for 20 years.

"It was tough leaving there too," he recalled Monday, "but I will not renege on what I said. Cohasset has been the high water mark of my career."

Reflecting on his years as Cohasset's top administrator, Supt. Crowell said he would give himself good grades "for working things out and being able to survive at the level we have in the face of (Proposition) 2 1/2. We did some really wild things (naming the Sammy Davis fundraiser as one) because we faced a whole syndrome of cuts. But we never reduced our number of buses, our college placements did not slip, there was no decimation of the athletic student activity program.

"With the help of the staff and the school committee, we were able to get through without losing our standards. We kept that standing academically and athletically," he added.

"My proudest point is that I was associated with a group of people who allowed this to happen," the superintendent noted.

In reply to his announcement Monday night, school committee members individually praised the school administrator. "Now, let's not get maudlin," he warned them.

"You've made it very easy for us to do the many things that you've credited us with," Richard Conley told him. But he chided Supt. Crowell about his inability to master the game of golf.

Member Diana Kornet noted there wasn't a worse time in the past 50 years for a superintendent to administer a public school system. "But you stepped in and did a good job. And you have done well in unique circumstances - circumstances no other administrator had to face. You did a fine job," she stated.

Vice Chairman Jack Langmaid also issued his support of the superintendent. "This school system has continued to improve under your administration. That's about the finest thing I could ever say to you."

Member Barbara Bliss, elected in April to the committee, said she looked forward to working with Supt. Crowell the remainder of the year.

At the conclusion of the announcement, Langmaid explained that for several months, the committee has been aware of the pending resignation. "I know what is in Gene's mind," he said. "He has been working very closely with (Assistant to the Superintendent) Stephen Hart. He has been under his tutorlege for the past four or five years. I know he hopes that Hart will be the man to replace him as superintendent.

"We as a committee have come to know for several months that Gene was retiring and we have been thinking about a replacement. We have talked with each other, and have been watching Steve develop for the last four or five years.

"For that reason," Langmaid continued, "I move that we appoint Stephen Hart the Superintendent of Cohasset schools."

Kornet seconded the motion, adding, "if looked from coast to coast and found someone with Mr. Hart's qualifications on the surface, we would not find a better person with as diverse a background, with better people-handling skills who does not lose sight of the essence of what he is involved in. He has a marvelous ability to achieve and is familiar with the things our own system is going through."

Eugene Crowell

Hart, a Hingham resident, is a graduate of Merrimack College and Wesleyan University. He was a doctoral candidate at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

He has been associated with the Cohasset school system since 1970 as a guidance counselor, assistant superintendent, director of special education and as the system's financial manager. Langmaid noted, "we are fortunate to have him on staff."

Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow, who was out of town during the meeting, communicated his sentiments in a letter. He was recorded in favor of appointing Hart as superintendent. "His efforts have prepared him well," Nedrow stated.

In reply to his appointment, Hart thanked the committee and noted, "I have worked for 80 percent of the superintendents in Cohasset during the 16 years I have served here. I'd like to say that I don't think there's been a superintendent so concerned on all levels (as Eugene Crowell) and I have learned a lot. I will always appreciate the support of the school committee. Without their support, in special education in particular, it would be an impossible job. You have shown insight into the concept of education."

The new superintendent added, "I am optimistic about the future in Cohasset and the quality of the staff and the involvement of the parents. I feel they have been a positive influence.

"I look forward to working with all the people of Cohasset. I have found them to be tremendously supportive of the school system. Overall, their involvement has been positive. The efforts of everyone associated with the school system has been positive."

Preliminary school budget to cut five teachers

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Supt. Eugene Crowell proposed a six percent increase for the Fiscal 1987 budget, twice as large as the recommendation set forth by the advisory committee.

But in his presentation to the school committee this week, Supt. Crowell noted that 80 percent of the budget involves salaries, most of which were increased five and a half percent by negotiated contracts.

In the face of declining enrollment, particularly at the junior/senior high school, Supt. Crowell recommended the reduction of five positions. He has proposed the addition of a third grade teacher, resulting in a total net loss of four teachers from the staff next year.

The total budget proposed for 1986-1987 is $4,507,397. Last year's appropriation totaled $4,264,911.

The preliminary budget proposal, which will be reviewed and revised by the school committee before the April Town Meeting, does not include a $80,000 Capital Budget request for three new or "new/used" buses. The school committee has discussed for several months the need for a newer fleet of buses. Supt. Crowell said purchase of the three buses will be less expensive than the town reverting to a private contract busing system. He said the lease arrangement will cost the town $50,000 -$60,000 annually.

Sixty five percent of the depreciation value of each bus will be reimbursable by the state, Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart explained.

Another possible capital project will be a major repair project to the high school windows. Sills and glass work on the decaying windows throughout the school will be a contract-bid item, he said, which will probably cost around $300,000.

The projected budget, Supt. Crowell said, is a budget of maintenance. There are no new programs added to the budget, although there are requests pending from school administrators. "I can't find a way to support the programs we have and come to a three percent level," he told the committee Monday night.

Committee member Jack Langmaid praised the administration's efforts in preparing a budget. "I think six percent is fantastic," he said.

Supt. Crowell noted that aside from the near-standard five and a half percent salary increases, the annual step raises do not account for a large portion of the budget. "We are a senior staff," he explained. Most of the teachers within the system are currently at the top of their salary schedule.

In an attempt to equalize the number of teachers with the number of students, Supt. Crowell said he was forced to reduce the faculty staff by five. Although the likely candidates have been notified of their possible reductions, there are factors which may change that situation. There are no names of teachers "set in cement" for possible reduction, he said.

Those staff members who may be laid off next year include a half-time special needs teacher, one fourth grade staff member who will be transferred to a sixth grade staff position, a high school math teacher, a social studies teacher at the high school, a high school science teacher, and a high school music teacher.

Supt. Crowell emphasized it was a preliminary budget. Although it was compiled by the school administration, it will be further reviewed and revised by the school committee before it is submitted to town meeting.

There will be a copy of the budget available at the Pratt Library.

The superintendent explained the need for an

Literary fundraiser

Our invitation goes out to all of Cohasset. We, the Literary Committee of the Joseph Osgood School, invite you to share with us an evening of hospitality, fine wine, cheese, and local art.

This pre-Valentine function is to help fund a literary magazine at our school, containing one piece of work from each of our children — grades K-3. It is hoped that through this publishing effort our little children will, by seeing their work in print, be even more eager to be creative and will feel very positive about themselves as individuals.

Many of our Cohasset residents have supported our efforts thus far. The Cohasset Arts Council has awarded us a grant to help defray our costs. We have held monthly bottle and can collections, which have been minimally successful. And we received donations at the Open House. All these things have helped to reach our goal. However, we need your support so that this evening will be a success.

The Wine and Cheese Party promises to be a lovely event. The wine is being selected by Oeter Logan of Cohasset Liquors. Sea and Cheese and the Strawberry Parfait each will provide a cheese platter to tempt your pallet. Art, by local artists will be on display and for purchase. There will be several raffle items available to tempt you.

Tickets are limited to under 100 and are available on a first come-first served basis by calling Mary Larson (383-0775) or Carol Bishop (383-6944). Upon receipt of the money your ticket will be mailed or delivered to you.

Signing and Singing

Ms. Antonette Jillson's special needs class at the Joseph Osgood School has been learning sign language since September.

Ms. Catherine Harkins, the speech therapist, has provided the class with several hours of instruction, and the results are impressive.

The six young men and their teachers have taught Christmas carols to more than 50 percent of the entire Osgood student body. The children performed their songs at the annual Osgood Christmas sing-a-long Wednesday, Dec. 18.

Being able to share their special talents has been a special joy this Christmas season!

Holiday wonderland

December 20, the sixth grade classes of Betty Cisineros and Joseph Becker held a delightful Christmas Party. The children brought in decorations and transformed the school library into a Holiday Wonderland. There was even a magical locker in the hall that lit up.

The children were all dressed in their party finery as were all their invited guests. Music was provided by several of the sixth graders in the form of instrumentals and singing . . . all our favorite Christmas Carols were heard.

Mrs. Claus visited and brought all the gifts for the children. Then a buffet of goodies was provided in the hall for all to enjoy.

This was a lovely afternoon and all who attended had a wonderful time. Thank you Sixth Graders for spreading the Christmas Spirit in such a nice way.

Kindergarten registration

Children who will be 5 years of age on or before December 31, 1986 will be eligible to enter Joseph Osgood School kindergarten in September.

Registration will be conducted throughout the week of January 20. A birth certificate must be presented at the time of registration if the parents were not residents of Cohasset at the time of the child's birth.

Kindergarten changeover

Please note: Current Osgood kindergarteners will change sessions on Monday, January 27.

Basketball victory

The Deer Hill fifth grade girls beat the six grade girls in a basketball game by one basket. The score of the game, eight to six, was the lowest scoring game in the history of Deer Hill School basketball.

In the first five minute shift the girls who jumped were Maria Kierce of the fifth grade and Stephanie Eno of the sixth grade. Maria had more height and got the ball to Alison Ludlow. The fifth graders were the first to score.

In a jump between sixth grader Kathleen Conroy and fifth grader Sara Douglas, they missed the ball twice. On the third try the sixth grade got the ball and Laurie Bronstein scored. The fifth grade came back to score after a couple of misses. Lisa Schramm scored this one.

The fifth grade got a lot of attempts to score but missed them all. In the last seconds of the game Stephanie and Alison scrambled for the ball. Lisa attempted to pass but failed. Alison made her famous one footed shot and missed. Kathleen was all over the floor and so was the ball. Laurie shot for the sixth grade but it went off the rim. Fifth grader Jen Knowles got the ball and made a shot and the sore was then 8 to 4. Vannesa Jones recovered the ball and shot once more for the sixth grade, and made the score 8 to 6.

And the ball went in! Action shot during the recent Deer Hill girls' basketball game.

Sixth grader team:
Amy Gallant, 0 points; Laurie Bronstein, 2; Stephanie Eno, 0; Michele Woodland, 0; Kathleen Conroy, 0; Bridget Leung, 0; Vannesa Jones, 2; Ali Welz, 0; Heather Breenock, 0; Kim Steimle, 2.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Try cooking at home during the snowy, winter months

Now that the tree is down, the decorations packed away and the last drop of eggnog only a memory, we can all settle down to a long winter's nap as Clement C. Moore once wrote. Speaking of sleeping, Santa and such, I've been awakening to the sounds of music since the jolly old elf left me a clock radio under the Christmas tree. In the stupor between sleep and awakening, I heard Dave Maynard making a call to wish a happy birthday to a man in his 70s.

When asked if he was going out to celebrate, the birthday "boy" replied: "No, we'll be at home. It's where we spend our happiest hours." No take-out food for him, no burger at the drive-in, no nouvelle cuisine down the block. Perhaps his wife would prepare his favorite dish, the children would toast him with a glass of wine and flowers and candlelight would make even the simplest meal festive. With little effort, one could prepare Millie Carr's

SHERRIED BEEF

2 lb. lean stewing beef
2 T Lipton's onion soup mix (dry)
1/4 c. sherry
1½-2 can cream of mushroom soup
1 small can mushrooms
Freshly ground pepper, smidge of garlic and seasoned salt

Place in a casserole in the order given. Cover tightly and bake about 3 hours at 350 degrees.

With nearly 40 percent of all food money spent in restaurants, home cooking, the basis of hospitality for friends and family, is fast becoming a thing of the past. All too seldom do families find the time to gather together for the evening meal, to linger over the chocolate cake Mom baked that very day. Young couples tend to stop on the way home from work to pick up a sub, both so tired that eating out or buying out saves precious time.

However, home cooking doesn't mean gourmet feasts. For some, puttering in the kitchen on weekends can seem relaxing and satisfying; more so than rushing out to a meal that can sometimes be expensive and unpalatable. Where, but at home, could you enjoy this old-fashioned dessert which the Scituate Historical Society includes in a collection of recipes for use with their corn meal ground at the old grist mill in Greenbush.

INDIAN PUDDING

4 c. milk boiled in top of double boiler. Stir in:
1/3 c. corn meal and cook for 15 min. Stir 3/4 c. molasses into this mixture and cook for 5 min. longer. Remove from heat and stir in:
1/4 c. butter
3 T sugar
1 well-beaten egg
1 tsp. salt
3/4 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. or 1/2 tsp. ginger

Pour batter into well-greased baking dish. Bake at 325 degrees for 1½ to 2 hours. Serve hot with hard sauce, cream or vanilla ice cream.

One bachelor we know finds it relaxing to change into comfortable old clothes when he gets home, turn on the stereo and raid the refrigerator. In no time at all, he has a supper that might cost $20 or so in a restaurant. A stuffed omelet and salad, leftover pasta and chicken, a broiled steak and baked potato, or perhaps a casserole, freezing the remains for another easy meal. Here is what Mary McLean does with a can of tuna:

CHINESE TUNA

1 can tuna, drained and browned in margarine
2 c. undiluted cream of chicken or mushroom soup
1 large can pineapple chunks
1 can water chestnuts
1 large can fancy mixed Chinese vegetables
3 T soy sauce
1/2 tsp. Tabasco sauce
1 large can Chinese noodles
Mix and heat. Serve hot over Chinese noodles.

TUNA SPAGHETTI SAUCE

Large can tuna, drained. Mash and brown in margarine. Add two small cans Hunt's tomato sauce. Season with Italian seasoning, chopped onions, green peppers. Serve hot over favorite pasta. Sprinkle with parmesan or grated cheese.

THEATRE REVIEW

'The Fantasticks' open Nickerson Theater's new year

The Nickerson Theatre opens the new year with a musical, "The Fantasticks," which has been running in New York for 25 years. The long-running musical opening Jan. 3 - Feb. 8, is the fourth production of the second season for the professional theatre company in Norwell.

New York director, Jay Binder will stage the Nickerson Theatre production. The cast includes Boston, as well as New York area actors: Ted McAdams as The Mute; Bob Cucciolo of El Gallo; Glory Crampton as Luisa; Kim Moore as Matt; Scott Richards as Hucklebee; Michael Dell'Orto as Bellamy; John Davin as Henry and Jared Waye as Mortimer.

Set and lighting is designed by James Hoff and costumes are designed by Elaine Bresnahan. The Musical Director and Pianist is Vinnie Trovato and the Harpist is Celia Hollander.

Performance times for "The Fantasticks" are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday at 8:30 p.m.; Saturday at 4 and 8:30 p.m.; Sunday at 2 and 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday prices are $16; all other performances are $13.

CHS teams have successful trips during break

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls were given their Christmas presents late as they won the Christmas Tournament in Cohasset for the second year in a row. Cohasset dominated the entire tournament and were impressive, especially in the first game when they blew Avon out of the gym, 79-16. Avon was a weak team, but the Skippers had a great game on both ends of the floor.

Maureen O'Leary had the hot hand for Cohasset and led all scorers with 20 points. Anne O'Leary pumped in 12 points followed by Sarah Dickerman who had 10.

Coach Bill Fallon felt Anne O'Leary played well on both ends of the court. Fallon was also impressed with Marueen O'Leary's offensive contribution and cited Cindy Spooner as having a good game.

Cohasset had a tougher time in the second game with Blue Hills, but finally pulled off a victory, 46-39. Fallon said the girls played well for the first three quarters, but there was somewhat of a letdown in the fourth quarter. Regardless of the letdown, this victory gave Cohasset yet another prestigious title.

Maureen O'Leary and Margie Murphy each had 18 points. Margie was named along with Anne O'Leary to the All Tournament team. Maureen, because of her tremendous offense in both games, was honored as the M.V.P. of the tournament.

Thursday, the girls ran into a talented Sandwich team and suffered their first loss, 56-44. Fallon attributed the loss to his team's sluggish start which allowed Sandwich to jump out to a 23-12 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Fallon feels both Sandwich and Cohasset are very comparable in talent, and next time around the contest should be much closer.

Sarah Dickerman led Cohasset offensively with 10 points followed by Melissa Shea who added in eight. Anne O'Leary had a great game off the boards and grabbed 20 rebounds.

This past weekend the girls took an overnight trip to the Cape and faced Provincetown on Friday and Chatham on Saturday.

Friday, Cohasset beat Provincetown decisively, 52-27. Fallon feels the key to this victory was his team's hustling pressure defense.

Maureen O'Leary picked up 19 points for the Skippers and Anne O'Leary had nine to lead all scorers. Maria Cahill had a strong floor game, according to Fallon, and ran the offense well. Melissa Shea did an impressive job underneath the basket as well.

Saturday, the girls annihilated Chatham, 57-16. The victory was a team effort and Cohasset ran its fast break well as the high score might suggest.

Once again Maureen O'Leary led Cohasset in scoring with 14 points. Melissa Shea, Karin Anglin, Sarah Dickerman and Cindy Spooner each had six points as well.

This week the girls face a tough Rockland team Tuesday. Fallon believes this game will be a challenge for Cohasset, and the team must play very well in order to win. Friday, the Skippers travel to East Bridgewater, a game which Fallon is confident to win.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The boys were honored during Christmas vacation by being invited to the 20th Benedictine Capital City Classic in Richmond, VA.

Cohasset was not only representing Massachusetts in this tournament, but New England as well. Top division one teams in the country participated in the event in which Cohasset proved it belongs on a national level.

Friday, December 27, the boys played Archbishop Wood of Philadelphia, PA, and were dealt a disappointing loss after overtime, 66-62. Cohasset was leading toward the end of regulation play, but Archbishop Wood came back to tie the game. The Skippers had a couple of opportunities to score and win the contest, but unfortunately they could not capitalize and lost in overtime.

James Creed led Cohasset in scoring with 23 points, followed by Brian Edwards who had 17, and Tony Bogarty with 12. Coach Ed Minelli cited Bob Schultz as having an excellent game defensively.

Sunday, the boys showed how they are capable of playing and walked away with a victory over Monsignor McClancy of New York City, 82-66. Minelli was pleased with the great team effort and felt everybody played hard.

Tony Bogarty led the team offensively with 26 points, followed closely behind by Brian Edwards who pumped in 20. Minelli was pleased with the efforts of Bob Shultz and Mike Smith in this game.

Monday, Cohasset played a burly Penn Charter team of Pennsylvania and lost, 67-57. Minelli was pleased with the fact that his team led for three quarters but Penn Charter were further along in their season and were physically stronger than Cohasset.

The Skippers were only down by five with about five minutes left, but Minelli cleared the bench in order to let all his players participate in the tournament. Thus, the score is not indicative of how close the game really was.

Overall, Minelli felt the trip was very successful. Although he was disappointed with the losses, Minelli was happy with the efforts of his team for the most part.

Minelli is also quick to point out that over the three days his team scored 199 points and gave up only 195. Minelli feels his team faced the best competition in the country and can only benefit from the experience.

The team must have benefited for they came back and killed Sandwich, 89-37. Sandwich was previously 4-0 in the league, but Cohasset quickly put a stop to their winning streak and outscored them, 30-4, in the second quarter. Minelli felt the victory was a team effort and points out that 11 of the 12 people who played in the game scored.

Minelli was impressed with the way Mike Smith, David Shumaker and Todd Trautwein played coming off the bench. James Creed and Brian Edwards both had good offensive nights with 18 points apiece.

Tuesday, the boys travel to meet one of the toughest challenges of the season, Rockland. Friday, the boys take on East Bridgewater, away. East Bridgewater is Cohasset's strongest opponent in the Small Schools Division.

WRESTLING

The boys also had a successful Christmas tournament in Marshfield, placing sixth which is the highest they have ever placed in this tournament. The tournament involved 13 teams from the South Shore area from divisions one and two. Coach Torin Sweeney was pleased with the way in which his team wrestled and especially with those who placed in the tournament.

Liam Stanford did the best on the team and won the 157 pound division by pinning his last three opponents. Brian Leary came in second suffering his only loss in the finals. Sophomores Doug Bennet and Glen Froio both picked up fourth places in their weight classes and impressed Sweeney with their performances. Sweeney also cited John Riley and Randy Reid as wrestling well.

Saturday, the boys faced both Plymouth-Carver and Cape Cod Tech. Cohasset split the contest beating Cape Cod Tech and losing to Plymouth-Carver.

Randy Reid picked up two wins along with Glen Froio who also pinned one of his opponents. Both Doug Bennet and Liam Stanford pinned one of their opponents. Sophomore Greg Baker also was a match for the Skippers.

John Froio pinned an opponent to boost his record to 3-0. John Riley continued to keep his winning streak going by picking up two pins.

Sweeney also mentioned Patrick O'Connor as wrestling well and coming along in his first year of competition. Matt Deveny and Chip Muncey are also showing tremendous improvement according to Sweeney.

Overall the team is two and two. Two more wins would give Cohasset the best record it has had in three years. Sweeney believes his team is capable of reaching this goal this week. Wednesday, the boys face Norwell in which Cohasset should have more talent. Thursday, the Skippers take on a competitive Franklin team.

HOCKEY

The boys started off their Lobster Pot Tournament during vacation with a disappointing loss to Hull in overtime, 6-5.

Cohasset was winning by a goal with 24 seconds left but a penalty allowed Hull to tie the game and send it into overtime. According to Coach Dennis Walsh, his team outplayed Hull and could probably beat them the next time around.

Todd Fitzpatrick had two goals and Jamie Roy, Jeff Hartwell and Greg Ferreira each picked up one. Todd Fitzpatrick, Jeff Hartwell and Danny Pompeo all had good games. Walsh was especially pleased with his defense and the efforts of Craig Mulcahy, Philip Mahoney and Kevin Leary.

Saturday, December 28, the Skippers fell asleep and lost to Hanover, 8-3. Walsh said Cohasset is capable of beating Hanover, but just had a bad game.

Jeff Hartwell scored two goals for Cohasset and Danny Pompeo fired in another.

Monday, December 30, the boys bounced back and won the second half of the Lobster Pot Tournament by beating Scituate, 5-1. The victory was a team effort, according to Walsh, and all three

Obituaries

Malcolm H. Stevens

Malcolm H. Stevens of Beechwood St., retired Cohasset Town Accountant and for many years prominent in civil, sports and professional organizations, died Dec. 30 at the South Shore Hospital after a brief illness.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, Mr. Stevens was a graduate of Cohasset High School. As a young man he was an outstanding athlete, starring in high school and later on local semi-pro baseball teams when that sport flourished throughout the South Shore area.

In the 1920's he was employed at the Oaks Farm, when it was operated by the Barron-Bancroft family as a registered Guernsey cattle farm. Under the management of the late Walter Kerr, the farm attracted many well-known visitors including sports figures such as the former Washington Senators baseball team during the Walter Johnson era and with whom Mr. Stevens became well-acquainted.

During the 1930's he was an insurnace company representative in the adjoining town of Hull and in 1949 was appointed Town Accountant in Cohasset, a position which he held until his retirement in 1968. For many years he was a call fireman in the town and also was self-employed as an income tax accountant.

He was a past president of the Massachusetts Municipal Auditors and Accountants Association, and, as auditor for the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association of which the late Cohasset Chief Hector Pelletier was secretary, was active in that organization, especially in fund-raising for the Jimmy Fund. He was a past president of the Rotary Club of Cohasset, serving in its early years; a 50-year member of the Konohasset Lodge, A.F. & A.M., a member of Old Colony Lodge No. 108, Odd Fellows, of Hingham; and a member of the Old Goats luncheon group of Cohasset retired men.

His wife, Helen C. (O'Hearn) Stevens, died in 1982. He leaves a nephew, Thomas R. Jerome of Norwood; and two nieces, Marjorie Stevens and Grace R. Short of Wakefield.

The funeral service was held Jan. 3 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory may be made to the Jimmy Fund, 44 Binney St., Boston.

Dorothea Casey

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday, Jan. 7 for Dorothea (Oliver) Casey, 67, a lifelong resident of Cohasset. She was buried in Woodside Cemetery.

Best known as the secretary to the principal at Cohasset High School, Mrs. Casey worked there for almost 15 years prior to her retirement.

In a tribute at Monday night's school committee meeting, member Richard Conley remembered Mrs. Casey as a perfectionist in her position at the school. "It was not a job to her, it was a privilege that she did the job she did. She loved the kids. She was a high-principled person," Conley stated.

Mrs. Casey attended Cohasset schools and graduated from the Pierce Secretarial School in Boston.

She had been a part-time teacher at Louise Higgins Nursery School for five years.

Mrs. Casey was a Girl Scout, Brownie and Cub Scout leader and volunteered for the Red Cross.

She was also a member of the American Association of Retired Persons.

She leaves her husband, George E. Casey; a son, George E. Casey Jr. of Louisville, Pa.; a daughter, Debora A. Casey of Hingham; a sister, Marjorie Toombs of Florida, and two grandchildren.

Donations may be made to the American Heart Association, 1104 Chestnut Ave., Brockton, 02401.

Helen Louise Barrow

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church this week for Helen Louise Barrow, 66, a lifelong Cohasset resident and political activitist. Miss Barrow died last week at the South Shore Hospital following a brief illness.

She was buried in Woodside Cemetery.

An employee of the Cohasset Savings Banks for the past 30 years, Miss Barrow was previously employed at the Hingham Institute for Savings.

She was a longtime active member of the Cohasset Town Committee and was noted as the only woman ever elected to the Cohasset Charter Committee.

She was also a member of the South Shore Suburban Democratic Women, the South Shore Democratic Women on Wheels, and other Cohasset town committees. She worked for various Democratic candidates for local and state offices, including Michael Dukakis, Robert Quinn, Kevin White, and George Burke .

A veteran of the US Navy during World War II, Miss Barrow was a yeoman second class.

She leaves three brothers, Richard P. Barrow, a Cohasset Police officer, Edward P. Barrow, a Cohasset firefighter, and Robert E. Barrow of Cohasset; a sister, Jean Salvador of Cohasset; ten nieces and nephews and two cousins.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Children's Hospital, 300 Longwood Ave., Boston, or the Angel Memorial Fund, 350 Huntington Ave., Jamaica Plain.

We just landed a number of big ones.

It takes more than a great menu to make a great restaurant.

It takes talented people to bring it all together.

We've got it all.

We've brought back most of the original items from our menu that won all sorts of awards 30 years ago (some things you just can't improve).

And in the past few months we've brought on board the kind of seafood restaurant people we need to help guarantee you catch some of the finest seafood and steaks to ever land on a menu.

Come and enjoy the light fantastic.

Rec. Dept. to offer dog obedience & aerobic classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer three levels of instruction for Dog Obedience Classes, to be taught by Ms. Laurie Ann Clevland. All classes will be held at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, and will begin Sunday, Jan. 11. Beginner training classes will be held at 6:30 p.m.

The purpose of these classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered: proper use of voice, corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience.

An intermediate/advanced class will be held at 7:30 p.m. This class is designed for dogs that have had some prior basic training or have completed the Recreation Dept. beginner class.

For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed! It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

For all classes: the fee is $17 per dog for the eight-week, one hour program. Dogs should be a mimimum of three months of age, and there is no limit on maximum age. To register please call the Recreation Dept. at 383-6791. Classes will be limited in size.

lines played well. However, Walsh is also quick to point out that the game was closer than the score indicates.

Friday, the boys squeezed out a victory against Duxbury, 6-4. Walsh thought his defense did a nice job but feels his team must work on minimizing their penalties.

Bobby Durkin led all scorers with two goals. Both Todd Fitzpatrick and Todd Henry had a goal apiece. Jeff Hartwell fired in another goal for the Skippers making him the most consistent scorer on the team. Philip Mahoney added in an insurance goal which took the pressure off goalie Peter who had an excellent game and made 38 saves.

Saturday, the boys pulled out a victory over Scituate, 4-2. Walsh was pleased with the win, but felt his team did not play up to its potential.

Bobby Durkin pumped in two goals for Cohasset. Philip Mahoney and Todd Fitzpatrick each scored one apiece. Walsh cited Peter Sandbloom as having a strong game in net.

Wednesday, the Skippers face Hull for a second time and hope to take revenge in the last game. Saturday, the boys travel to Sandwich, and are expected to win.

So. Shore Art Center open house slated for Sunday

Come to the South Shore Art Center's winter open house and discover the variety of courses offered in the little red building in Cohasset's downtown.

The open house Sunday, January 12, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Center, 103 Ripley Road, will feature an art demonstration by Louise Kalish, a student art exhibit and a chance to meet instructors and enroll in courses offered on the winter schedule.

The new winter semester begins January 20 and offers such courses as Winter Window Landscape taught by Judeth Van Hamm Weirs, New Adventures in Acrylics by Phyllis Murphy Szerejko, a Virginia Avery Watercolor course, and many other old favorites. Advanced registration is required for all courses and workshops at the Center.

Szerejko's acrylics courses meet Monday beginning January 27, from 3:30 to 6 p.m., and will concentrate on overcoming problems encountered when using acrylics. Sessions one and two will explore pastel and acrylic, sessions three and four will work with form, sessions five and six will use the Old Masters' technique and sessions seven and eight will work with collage.

Szerejko will also teach a composition with collage course on Mondays from 7 to 9:30 p.m. beginning January 27. Painters and non-painters are invited to take this course and learn the elements of composition with collage. A totally non-objective approach will be used so the power of compositional elements can be grasped with maximum clarity.

Do landscape through the windows of various class members is the basis for Wiers Winter Window Landscape on Thursdays, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. beginning January 23. Workshop members may use their own choice of medium; sessions will concentrate on creating a fresh viewpoint while limiting subject matter.

Avery's Watercolor for all levels of artistic ability will meet on Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon beginning January 22. Her course is a series of lessons in watercolor designed to help the artist to better develop needed painting skills and to encourage their own personal expression.

A familiar face around the Center, David Tandy will instruct three courses — Evening Watercolor, Wednesday from 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. beginning January 22; Introductory Drawing, Thursday, 7:15 to 10:15, January 23; and Introductory Painting, Thursday, 7:15 to 10:15 p.m. His courses are all designed for various levels of artistic ability and are recommended for the beginner.

In Evening Watercolor the student's technical knowledge of watercolor as a medium will be developed through involvement with both traditional and contemporary arts concerns. He will acquaint students with the basic process and materials and he will encourage them to experiment with their work.

Two portrait classes are being offered — one by Katherine Smit, Basic Portrait, on Monday, noon to 2:30 p.m. beginning January 27, and one by Constance Flavell Pratt, Pastel Portrait for the Advanced Painter, on Tuesday, from 9 a.m. to noon, and 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. beginning January 21. Pratt's course will work from a model with emphasis on light and shade, color and likeness. The objective is to encourage students to produce a saleable pastel portrait.

Smit's course teaches the students the structure of portraiture by learning how to make a sound, accurate drawing. Charcoal or pastel may be used.

In the design department, Louise Kalish will teach Update Your Imagery on Fridays, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning January 24. Discover creativity and imagination through Kalish's creative color and design course.

She will explore the theories of the interaction of color and composition. Composition and design will be emphasized and developed in both abstract and realistic problems.

The photography department offers two John Droege courses — Beginning Darkroom on Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Beginning Darkroom is a step-by-step instruction in the basics of darkroom skills beginning with "how the camera works." Students will work with black and white film and learn developing, printing, dodging and matting.

His intermediate darkroom course teaches the more advanced darkroom techniques with concentration on methods of creating finer prints and improving compositions. The students may use the Center's darkroom for individual assignments.

Many opportunities for young artists are available such as Susan Rodgerson's Junior High Workshop, Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman's Painting and Drawing I for ages six to eight, Serena Brundige's Painting and Drawing II for ages nine to 12 and Brundige's Moms and Tots. The children's courses are offered after school on various days and are designed to inspire young artists to explore their imaginations and express themselves through the visual arts.

The Moms and Tots course is a series of creative projects moms can repeat at home with their children. The courses are geared to three and four year-olds and mothers. Brundige will explore batik dip designs, magic color circles, plastacene and other creative processes.

Take an art course and learn to develop your creativity. For further information on classes, workshops, trips and memberships, call the Center, 383-9548.

Hingham's Wildlife Center plans to expand

The New England Wildlife Center has recently concluded its second full-year of operations and has announced plans to expand its programs and facilities to meet the growing demands of the Greater Boston South Shore area.

The Center's goals are to: "improve the conditions under which man and wildlife of the region co-exist" and fills the large void between the existing services of humane societies, municipal animal control officers and environmental education centers.

The New England Wildlife Center offers a unique combination of programs which include: the diagnosis, treatment and documentation of wildlife damaged by human-activity and by disease; the rehabilitation of animals for their return to the wild; the environmental research necessary to determine the causes of wildlife disruption and the education of school children and the public regarding wildlife appreciation, issues, and attitudes.

The NEWC works in cooperation with organizations such as the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Massachusetts Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, the South Shore Natural Science Center, and the Manomet Bird Observatory.

The New England Wildlife Center was incorporated as a private, non-profit organization in 1983 and receives no funding from state or federal agencies. It has a current operating budget of $75,000; generated entirely through membership and program revenues, private and corporate donations, and foundation support.

Special grants received within the past year have enabled the Center to develop library and audio-visual resources, integrate wildlife education into pre-existing science curriculum in the Hingham Public Schools, and construct three, large outdoor flight cages for convalescing hawks and owls.

Future projects targeted for funding include a public visitor's center; a mobile wildlife assistance service, and the completion of Prehab, North America's largest (indoor) wildlife treatment, pre-release habitat and study center.

For further information about Center programs, call 749-5387.

Contributions to the New England Wildlife Center, Inc., are tax-deductible and can be mailed to the NEWC, 146A Justice Cushing Highway, Hingham 02043.

The next frontier: Peace

Six selected articles on the naturalness of peace. Introduction by Kurt Foell, Editor-in-Chief of The Christian Science Monitor.

This booklet challenges the inevitability of conflict. It shows how peace can be waged and won in individual lives. In your life.

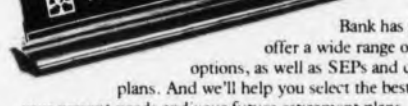
DOES PLYMOUTH SAVINGS BANK OFFER MANY DIFFERENT IRA PLANS?

THE ANSWER IS CRYSTAL CLEAR.



When it's a question of retirement plans, Plymouth Savings Bank has many answers. We offer a wide range of IRA investment options, as well as SEPs and qualified pension plans. And we'll help you select the best one to suit your present needs and your future retirement plans.

Save two ways with an IRA. Besides savings for your retirement, you're also saving on federal income taxes today. With an IRA, you can deposit up to $2000* each year. Federal taxes are deferred on both the amount you deposit and on the interest it earned, until you retire, when you'll probably be in a lower tax bracket.

Free lead crystal glasses. You can also get these lovely Towle full-lead Austrian crystal tumblers or tulip champagne glasses free. New or current IRA customers who deposit $1000 or more will receive one set of either style free. Deposit $5000 or more and receive two sets of either style free. And if you like, you may purchase an additional set of either style for only $15.95 (including tax, retail value $25/set; 4 glasses per set). Our supply is limited, so do hurry!

Today is not too soon to think about retirement. Open your IRA today at one of our nine convenient offices, or if you have any questions, please call your local branch manager.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SACRO-ILIAC SYNDROME

The pain associated with sacro-iliac syndrome is always felt over the sacro-iliac joints. These joints are located very low in the back where, in most people, there is a dimple. The most common cause of sacro-iliac strain is childbirth. The reason is that nature arranges to increase the elasticity of the sacro-iliac ligaments to facilitate the birth. This may be a marvelous provision of nature. If the baby is large, however, or the birth is difficult for other reasons, the strain on the sacro-iliac ligaments may be more than they can take. The ligaments then elongate and remain weak. This extra elasticity persists for several weeks. In normal conditions, the ligaments regain their previous length and strength.

Chiropractic attention can serve to deal with discomforts brought on by natural activities as well as unusual situations. Chiropractic allows for Mother Nature to send her natural healing instructions to all parts and organs of the body. Thus most all ills and difficulties can be addressed and, with such natural attention, relief and a return to a comfortable state of well-being can be achieved. For the chiropractic exam and applications that will serve your needs, please call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today. Tel. 383-1211, 2114. Daily by appt.

Monoprints, mixed media exhibited at Center

Berj and Syma—two prominent South Shore artists—come together for a unique exhibit of their work—Berj's monoprints and mixed media and Syma's clay and mixed media.

The South Shore Art Center's invitational gallery at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset will come alive with the unusual forms and figures created in the works by these two artists.

Opening January 6 the exhibit "Inward Explorations" continues through January 31 with a formal reception on Sunday, January 12 from 2 to 4 p.m.

"Inward Explorations" aptly describes the artists' interpretation of their works. Syma views her recent work as becoming "an exploration, a mirror of my innerself, sometimes reflecting some part of me I'm wishing to know more of," she said.

Berj Kailian works in oils, watercolors, acrylics, pastels and creates collograph plates which are as interesting as the prints they produce. From time to time she has also made her own paper from discarded prints. She believes that painting is a language, "a form of thinking and communications using shapes, forms, textures, patterns and other symbols in place of script." For her the mind and hand of the artist become the instrument of this communication.

Currently, Syma is working on four low-relief mural pediments for a Boston townhouse complex. She has been commissioned to do this work by the architects on the project. Her one-person shows include exhibits at the Newton Free Library, Hingham Public Library and the Scituate Art Association. Her honors include first place in sculpture at both the Duxbury Art Museum and the South Shore Art Center; an artist-in-residency at the Cotting School for the Handicapped, at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset and for the Boston Public Schools; and has won numerous awards in juried exhibits at the South Shore Art Center.

Her work is included in the public collection of Salem State College and in several private collections. She has given numerous adult and children's pottery and clay workshops; has appeared as a guest speaker for panels and workshops; and has taught regularly for the South Shore Art Center and other art associations.

Berj is currently on the board of advisors for the South Shore Art Center and is often a judge for area art associations and scholastic awards. She has served as a vice president of the Copley Society.

"Inward Explorations" is open to the public Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m.. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Art Center receives council grants

The South Shore Art Center has received arts lottery funds totalling $1,250 from the arts councils of nine surrounding communities on the South Shore.

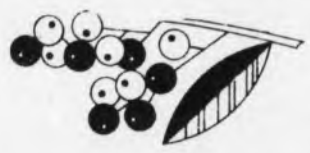
Grants for expansion of the ever popular Children's Vacation Drop-in program have come from Hingham and Norwell, to support the Drop-in workshops in their communities. These will be held during February and April vacations and are designed to let the children explore various art techniques and to experiment with their artistic creativity.

The Drop-in is open on a daily basis for young artists seven to twelve years old at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, and the satellite locations in Hingham and Norwell. Children may "drop in" on a leisurely basis and work on art projects with a staff of instructors from the Center's Young Artist Department.

Other grants have been awarded to the South Shore Art Center from Hingham, Brockton, Weymouth, Marshfield, Braintree, Plymouth, Hanover and Scituate to fund prize money for two annual exhibits this winter. The All-New England Juried Photography and Art shows in the Center's gallery are recognized by New England artists as major shows in which to enter their work. The Center offers cash awards to encourage the best of New England's artists to enter these shows.

The exhibits are open to all artists and photographers in the New England regions, and are curated by well-known gallery owners and professional artists.

These grants indicate the commitment of the surrounding communities to supporting the work being done by the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. The Center has become a major vehicle for bringing arts to the residents of the South Shore of Boston.



Writer series

On Sunday, Jan. 12, at 2 p.m. the Friends of the Scituate Town Library will welcome mystery writer Linda Barnes as the first guest in the 1986 Tea With The Authors series.

Born in Detroit and now a resident of Brookline, Linda Barnes is a graduate of Boston University and a former drama teacher at Chelmsford High School. She is also the creator of the Boston-based debonair actor-private investigator, Michael Spraggue who has appeared in her novels Blood Will Have Blood, Bitter Finish and Dead Heat.

Spraggue's adventures, through Linda Barnes' careful research and active imagination, have taken him into the wine country of California's Napa Valley and behind the scenes of the Boston Marathon. Her characters also include Spraggue's wealthy, resourceful Aunt Mary and her unlucky-at-cards butler Pierce.

After the lecture refreshments will be served and the authors will meet informally with the audience. As an added attraction, there will be a drawing for an autographed copy of Bitter Finish.

All are invited to view these pieces at the Center!

Riding club activities

The Cohasset Riding Club has scheduled an evening of instructional videos dealing with dressage on Friday, Jan. 24. These videos feature well-known dressage instuctors and competitors Bill Woods, Beth Jenkins and Renata Lansburg.

They will be shown at the Cohasset High School Video Room and will begin at 7 p.m. There will be a $2 donation at the door, and the public is welcome to attend.

The annual banquet and awards night for the Cohasset Riding Club will be held this year on Friday, Feb. 28, at the Unitarian Parish House. Following dinner and awards, there will be a film featuring Bruce Davidson, USET member, on the topic of developing jumpers. All members are invited.

Meetings of the adult members of the club will be held on Feb. 5 and March 3.

The riding club sponsors many activities throughout the year of interest to horse owners and horse enthusiasts. The club is open to adults and children, and it is not necessary to own a horse to be a member.

Anyone interested in becoming a member or learning more about the riding club and its programs can contact Sally Davenport, 383-1932.

Five teachers cut for school budget additional third grade teacher next year. He said the kindergarten, first and second grades contain classes of 22-25 students. If the additional third grade staff position is not included, there will be class sizes of 28 students. "That teacher is the only new addition that this budget contains," he stated.

There are requests from school principals which have not been included in the preliminary budget. Those requests include a youth adjustment counselor for the elementary grades, and an increase in the gifted and talented program. The youth adjustment counselor position was discussed during last year's presentation of the budget. The concept was taken out of the budget in order to reduce the total budget figure. The director of the gifted and talented program was reduced to a sixty percent position in last year's budget.

Looking through the budget, Supt. Crowell noted that if three news buses are not added to the current fleet, "there should be another $5,000" added to the maintenance account. That total is currently $25, 000, the same amount appropriated in the current year's budget.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Edward Harrington : The man and his world

By David A. Mittell, Jr.
Mariner Correspondent

A Massachusetts politician I truly admire is Edward Harrington, the former United States Attorney and former Democrat who plans to run for the Republican nomination for Attorney General this year. What brings Harrington's name to mind is an extraordinary item from last week's news to the effect that he has undertaken to represent a public school teacher accused of molesting several special needs students.

Speaking politically: if Harrington's chances weren't already sufficiently miniscule running as a Republican against the corpulently-funded, thrice elected Democrat Francis Bellotti, Harrington has now associated himself in the public consciousness with an accused molester of handicapped children. That's a candidate I can relate to, for such a candidate must either be ga-ga (as Harrington's enemies have suggested), or, as it appears to me, cut from a finer cloth than the majority of our statesmen.

Harrington's taking on the case of an accused child molester in a political year doesn't surprise me; it is typical of the highly principled, warm, Irish-American, liberal gentleman that he is. To understand him (and many in public life do not), one needs to appreciate how thoroughly all of those words describe him.

The word that probably fits him best is "gentleman," although the rough edges of his exterior can fool the uninitiated. This happened once when I had called him about a column I was working on about Myles Connor, the once and future convict whom Harrington had devoted a great effort to putting behind bars. When Harrington returned my call, our receptionist, hearing his gruff voice and unpolished accent, reported with some concern that she thought the caller was Connor the crook of renown, not Harrington the prosecutor of renown.

Notwithstanding his rough edges, Harrington is a true gentleman in that he is gracious and polite whether one is friend or adversary, and he is kind to all, whether to rich and famous or down and out. That sounds trite, but it is true. It simply wouldn't occur to Harrington to allow the political ramifications of a professional representation to deter him from helping a troubled client.

In calling Harrington a "liberal Irish American" I don't mean "liberal" in the narrow contemporary political sense. I mean it in the more general sense that he is open-minded and tolerant—qualities, it seems to me, that some Irish-Americans lack. Such people can be enormously generous within a defined pale that includes family, church, and neighborhood; but they tend to xenophobia when it comes to accepting people and ideas beyond the pale.

I don't mean to criticize such people unmercifully—if you had a tradition of England coming down on your people every century, you might be a little "xenophobic." Nevertheless, it remains a fact that can only be denied by the unseeing that there is bigotry in Irish-American xenophobia, and that debacles such as the visitation of mandatory school busing in Boston came about primarily because of the bigotry of the Boston Irish.

I go into this by way of pointing out that while there has traditionally been bigotry among Irish-Americans (as among other groups), there is also the different and countervailing tradition of the liberal Irish-American, a tradition that has given us some of the most delightful human beings of our time.

It is in this lively and very much alive tradition, I believe, that Harrington falls, a tradition that includes President Kennedy and Richard Cardinal Cushing, as well as Sec. of Human Services Philip Johnston, Boston Election Commissioner James Killilea, and Middlesex County Sheriff John McGonigle, to name a few I've encountered while kicking around politics. Put in one room such men couldn't agree on the color of the wallpaper, let alone a political issue; yet I would define them as "liberal gentlemen" because a debate among them would be at once funny and serious, insulting and respectful, and utterly inconclusive yet profoundly productive.

I suppose the liberal Irish-American gentleman takes naturally to politics because he loves ideas in the abstract, but people he loves as they are. Puritanical politicians (Jimmy Carter was one) can be principled but tend to be cold, to demand of the huddled masses that they jog to energy efficiency with a seat belt on, if you'll pardon mixed metaphors. Jimmy Carter's smile came to be caricatured less because of the grin itself than because of the icy eyes that gave the grin the lie. Edward Harrington, like President Kennedy and the others I mentioned, is a principled man, but he is also a warm man. He is quick to show kindness, quick to be blunt, and quick to temper bluntness with more kindness.

Harrington's combination of high principle and emotions that bubble not far beneath the surface has always been used against him by his enemies in the world of crime, punishment, politics, and intrigue in which he labors. A couple of years back Gov. Dukakis almost dared to make him a judge, but his enemies and their shills in the press convinced Dukakis that Harrington was "temperamentally unsuited" to be a judge.

What really prevented Harrington from becoming a judge was his unbending integrity, which, much like the integrity of Robert DeGiacomo, who investigated the Boston Common Garage scandal in the 1960's, strikes petrifaction in the sleazy corners of Beacon Hill. Such fear does Harrington's integrity, like DeGiacomo's before him, strike in such other men as like to feed freely at the political trough, that the prospect of his becoming a judge set his enemies to frenzy. As it is said in the Book of Isaiah, "the wicked flee when no one pursueth!"

The reason in my opinion that Harrington wasn't made a judge was that in aggressively seeking to prosecute Myles Connor on a murder charge (Connor was convicted in one trial, acquitted in a second), he embarrassed both Atty General Bellotti and Norfolk County District Atty. William Delahunt, both of whom had not favored prosecuting Connor.

Facing Harrington when he went before Gov. Dukakis' Judicial Nominating Committee were people long associated with Bellotti, people friendly to Delahunt, and in what would appear to have been a most curious state of affairs if not a conflict of interest, Myles Connor's own attorney! According to Harrington, the attorney queried him about the Connor case and nothing else, then voted against him. So did most of the rest of that peculiar band of judge-makers, finding Harrington (as reported later by former Bellotti employee Peter Lucas of the Herald and the frequently pro-Bellotti David Farrell then of the Globe) "temperamentally unsuited" for the judiciary. Gov. Dukakis, who created the Judicial Nominating Committee, and who ought to have seen the sham, acquiesced. He withdrew Harrington's nomination.

The "temperamentally unsuited" rap is apparently going to be the tactic used both by Bellotti's people in defending the Attorney General against Harrington's coming political challenge, and by the Dukakis people in defending the Governor against the charge of spinelessness. Alcohol, which I take, is a wonderful lip-loosener, which is why I never take it at political parties. I take a notebook instead, and based on several parties during the holiday season, I can report that there is a full-blown whispering campaign at hand around Beacon Hill, the only eight words of which are: "Ted Harrington isn't quite right in his head."

There is a world out there that neither you nor I understand. It is a world of crime and graft and corruption and cruelty and manipulation. It's a world I've had a few fleeting glimpses of kicking around politics and a newspaper office the last 20 years, yet I know I don't know the half of what really goes on.

Honest men who have come to know this world well haven't fared very well. Robert DeGiacomo had his own feeble run for Attorney General in 1966 and now lives in Spain. William Ward, Chairman and energy force of the Ward Commission, has committed suicide. Warren Brookes, journalist, found his Boston Herald columns "spiked" (i.e. not published) with increasing regularity, and chose to leave town. Edward Harrington is said to be "not quite right in his head."

Don't believe it. Believe that if "the wicked flee when no one pursueth," when an honest man really does pursue them, the wicked play dirty.

Footnote: Except for the one telephone conversation alluded to in the text, which took place in December, 1984, I did not use Mr. Harrington himself as a source for his column.

'Pirates of Penzance' director has a lot to be thankful for

By Bryan Marks
Special to the Mariner

In the afterglow of our recent production of "Pirates of Penzance" my thoughts run in three stages. I am thankful, pleased, and proud.

I'm first thankful for a caring superintendent, Mr. Eugene Crowell, who in our first "get acquainted" meeting heard my dream of someday producing a Music Department sponsored all-school musical. Then, much to my surprise and delight, a few months later getting called to his office for the news that some "seed" money might be available through block grant funds.

That brings me to thanks number two. None of these productions would haveoccurredhad not the school committee, some four years ago, given the project a green light and myself a vote of confidence.

Thanks number three encompasses the many administrators, teachers, secretaries, custodians and community people who help provide the talent and expertise essential to a large scale, successful show. Involvement is key. And for most it is involvement without pay. Those few receiving pay are asked to provide many hours of service off school time and for sums of money that amount to tokens of their worth. Some of the people that deserve special thanks for their help with "Pirates" are:

Andrea Millis, Pirates choreographer, CHS gymnastics coach.

Jo-Ellen Wood and Donald Reade, Pirates directors, CHS English teachers.

John Packard, Pirates technical director, CHS AV director.

Colleen Lucas and Patrick Plante, Pirates set and prop production, CHS Art and Shop teachers.

Steven Shirosky, Pirates orchestra arrangement, CHS band director.

Jeffrey A. Rhind, Pirates lighting and video, cable production, CHS graduate now director of Cohasset Community Television.

Commentary

Karin Bartow, Sue McNamara and Tanna Kasperowicz, Pirates publicity, program layout and ad book, PSO and Arts Boosters groups.

These are just some of the main contributors to Pirates success.

My last thanks has to go to parents and students. The cast of Pirates is to be commended for their hard work and talent. We worked through an unbelieveable number of set backs. (Example: lead scores arrived very late and "in stock" chorus books never came and were indeed not "in stock") Our tight production schedule became tighter as problems forced my rehearsal plans A to B and often to C. However, the cast showed their true mettle and the results speak for their triumph. They're a "neat" bunch (inside joke).

I can't thank all parents of the cast enough for supporting our efforts, especially during our hectic final two weeks.

Afterbeing thankful for all the efforts that made "Pirates of Penzance"successful and possible, my thoughts run to the progress and gains realized by all-school musicals. I'm understandably very pleased.

For example, one of the first projects of the Parents School Organization was assisting our first all-school musical "Grease." Our success was mutual and a special community bond was formed which has now spawned an Arts Boosters group.

I'm delighted at the cooperation among teachers and students that such a large project demands. I'm pleased that we can provide assemblies for the children at Deer Hill and Osgood schools.

I see cast members mature and gain confidence before my eyes. I enjoy seeing new students friendships form. It's great to see teachers, and entire departments working so closely toward a single goal, in short, tremendous teamwork on all levels.

I'm very pleased that our goal of producing quality musicals has succeeded. "Grease" became the talk of the town four years ago and "Pirates of Penzance" is having similar success today. There was strong encouragement to reproduce "Grease" for the Music Circus. Thereisstrong encouragement to reviveselectionsfrom "Pirates" for our Valentine Dinner-Theater which appears to be moving to Kimball's this year thanks to our Arts Boosters. Encore requests are great compliments.

I'm honored to hear many comparisons to college shows. I'm equally honored that alumni hold our efforts in high regard even though they've gone on to star in and produce various college shows.

I'm amused and flattered that a fellow teacher commented upon my entrance to the main office, "Hey it's Cecil B. DeMille."

Certainly the school department is pleased, as I am, that no money has come from school funds and our musical fund is alive and well. We continue to provide awards to graduating seniors (totalling over $2000. from the previous three shows).

It pleases me greatly that key personnel and directors are excited about helping with our next show.

But I'm most pleased that we've provided quality entertainment for so many.

My pleasure is mixed with a great deal of pride. I'm proud of the reputation we've establshed for well run, quality musicals. I'm proud that this reputation reaches far and wide. I get calls from other school directors asking questions about our productions. I also hear reports from reliable sources such as the following. A teacher in Hingham High's teachers room recently questioned, "How come Cohasset has so many fine singers?" Such reports obviously make me very proud. Our music department is proud. Our entire school can be proud. In fact, I hope the whole town of Cohasset is proud of this reputation.

Not only have our musicals provided such intangibles, but they have also upgraded our school facility. For example, just this year "Pirates" purchased a new blue backdrop (cyclorama) for the stage. Also, because of exhausted school funds, bought gels and frames for our new auditorium lights. We also replaced a broken PA amplifier for the AV department. These items total nearly a thousand dollars.

Finally, I'm proud to say that I've had a special part in all of this and have been blessed with the cooperation, approval and talent to make it all possible.

Cohasset news briefs . . .

Landfill zoning permits

Edward Poskus, the town's Building Inspector and Zoning Officer, will begin reviewing the operation of Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill.

The water commission recently requested Poskus' assistance in reviewing the private landfill operation in regard to the special permits granted Cohasset Ltd. by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

After conferring with town counsel, Poskus has agreed to review the situation for the water commission.

In a letter written two weeks ago, Water Dept. Superintendent Benjamin Curley requested Poskus' "advice and opinion as it pertains to operations being conducted at Cohasset Heights landfill."

The water commission, he stated, is "particularly concerned whether they are functioning within the limits of their permits with the appropriate uses permitted by the zoning bylaw."

The commission requested that Poskus issue a cease and desist order "on those functions at Cohasset Heights Ltd. not in compliance with the issued permits and the Zoning Bylaws."

The water commission has been working for several months to close the privately-owned Cedar Street landfill. After receiving in February a draft copy of the watershed engineering study, the commission remains convinced that leachate from the site will eventually run into the town's water supply source.

Although the Camp, Dresser and McKee study has yet to be made public, the commission has based its order to close the dump on the results of that survey. Commission members contend that leachate tracings have been found in Brass Kettle Brook, a tributary of the town's water supply at Lily Pond.

Since September, the commission has attempted to enlist the help of other town officials to close down the Cedar Street landfill. They renewed that order in October after a truck which contained toxic materials was stopped from entering the site.

The commission met last week with selectmen and the Board of Health in a closed session to discuss the matter. At that time, Commission Chairman Peter Pratt said the town is proceeding on a course "supported quite loudly by the commission for some time."

Zoning Officer Poskus talked with Town Counsel Richard Henderson this week about the commission's request. After agreeing it would be a proper function of the town's zoning officer, Poskus said he will proceed with the request.

"I'll check to make sure the landfill is operating properly under the permits issued by the zoning board in past years," Poskus said last week.

It will take some time and research, he agreed. The first permit issued to Cohasset Heights Ltd. probably occurred around 1976. Poskus will have to look back in the town's files and review the permits and attached conditions.

"They just want me to double check - to make sure they are operating the way the town intended," he added.

The zoning officer will also visit the site "to make sure they are not exceeding their permits. At this point, I don't know how many conditions the town set down there. But I'll start this week to find out and take a look there."

Ramp for Town Hall

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee requested that plans for a handicapped access ramp be revived in time for the April town election.

Committee Chairman Donna McGee also extended the committee's financial assistance to construct a ramp at the Town Hall.

In a letter written to selectmen two weeks ago, McGee inquired about the status of the wheelchair ramp at the Town Hall.

"We feel strongly that the Cohasset Town Hall should be accessible to the handicapped. These citizens should be able to exercise their right to vote, to conduct their business and address issues of concern to them without the embarrassment of being carried into the Town Hall," Chairman McGee wrote.

Plans for a handicapped access ramp have been stalled while the town studies proposed renovations to Town Hall. Preliminary plans call for an addition to the present structure with access for handicapped residents, and an elevator to the second floor.

Two years ago, there was a push by residents to construct a wheelchair ramp outside the Town Hall. Building Inspector Edward Poskus drew plans for the ramp, but they were set aside until definitive plans were made for the renovation of the entire Town Hall building.

McGee said the Democratic Town Committee "would like to work with the selectmen and the Historic District Commission to expedite the construction of the ramp." She also noted that they would be willing to financially contribute to the effort.

"We hope we can resolve this problem and have the ramp completed before the April 12, 1986 town election," McGee added.

No more car lots

The planning board has strongly urged selectmen to deny plans for another used car lot on Route 3A.

James Hoban, manager of the Cohasset Winter Gardens skating rink, told selectmen last month he was planning to request a license to sell used cars on their property adjacent to the rink. He said soaring insurance costs forced him to add a second business to his property.

He has not come before the board with definitive plans. Executive Secretary Don Andrew said he was told the plans were being drawn by engineers for the property owner.

In a letter written to selectmen, the planning board said it discussed at its Dec. 18 meeting the request to maintain and operate a used car lot on the Winter Gardens property.

"The planning board has endeavored to upgrade the Route 3A business area through its support of zoning bylaw changes and in the site plan review process. The request of Winter Gardens for a license to sell used cars on their site is not consistent with the upgrading of Route 3A. We strongly urge you to deny this request," the letter stated.

Plans for exchange

The French committee which is working toward an exchange of residents between Souppes Sur Loing and Cohasset, has submitted names of English teachers with whom the Cohasset committee can communicate.

There are three professors of English at the Souppes Sur Loing high school, the French committee stated in its latest correspondence. They will be responsible for communicating between the two town committees which are charged with "establishing a good liaison" between the communities.

The French committee extended its appreciation to the Cohasset Cultural Exchange Committee for the invitation to visit Cohasset this spring. The French citizens' committee said they would respond to the invitation, and hope to involve many representatives of the community in the exchange program.

The Dragon's Dungeon

By Claire McDonough

A list to top all the best and worst lists

By Claire McDonough
Mariner Correspondent

"I'm really sick of all these lists," the Dragon moaned.

I took his newspaper from him.

"Then stop reading them," I suggested.

"No, really," he wrested the paper out of my hands, "look at this — 'the ten best dressed women; 'the ten best dressed men;' 'the ten worst dressed women;' 'the ten worst dressed men;' 'the ten worst motion pictures;' 'the ten best motion pictures;' 'the ten most eligible bachelors;' 'the ten least eligible bachelors.'

"The ten best and worst television comedies;' 'the ten best and worst television tragedies.' 'The ten most admired women.' 'The ten most loathed extra terrestrials.' Where will it all end?"

"I think you're taking it all much too seriously," I told him. "Some people love the lists. They wait all year long for them to come out. If they bother you, just ignore them."

"That's the trouble with this country," the Dragon retorted. "People ignore too much. I say it's time to fight back. This is war."

I looked at him nervously. "What do you plan to do?" I asked.

He smiled fiendishly. "I'm going to fight fire with fire. I'm making my own lists."

I shuddered. "You're pretty tough," I conceded.

"Look," he said, "someone has to do it. It isn't pretty, but it's war."

"What lists are you making?" I asked.

The Dragon took a notebook from his pocket and consulted it.

"Let's see," he mused, "I have the ten most tasteless seat-belt jokes; the ten least memorable defectors to the Soviet Union; the ten most rage-provoking remarks made by the President of Libya; the ten most frequently broken campaign promises; the ten most forgettable T.V. commercials; the ten hardest-to-forget-but-you-wish-you-could T.V. commercials; the ten most startling presidential bon mots.

"The competition is going to be awfully tough in some of those categories," I warned him. "How are you going to choose?"

"It won't be easy," he admitted, "but I figure some entries will practically disqualify themselves because they make too much sense. Others will be too esoteric for the general public. And I'll work night and day sorting out the others until I come up with the winners."

"It appears to me that you're wasting an awful lot of time," I said. "Couldn't it be put to better use finding a cure for sand fleas or something?"

He looked at me. "If I were you," he said sweetly, "I'd be careful. After all, we could have a few more categories. Like the 10 women with the most grease fires in their ovens. Or the ten women who have interrupted their husband the most times in 1985. Or the ten women most likely to drive their husbands bananas in 1986."

"How about the ten men most likely to fill their wives with unmitigated terror?" I suggested.

"Very funny. Maybe we should have a list of the ten comediennes most likely to be stoned."

"You really are going mad with power," I told him. "What are you going to do with these lists once they're compiled?"

He shrugged. "The same things everyone else does. I'll call a press conference and get coverage in the print and electronic media. When people see my dumb lists, they'll realize how really stupid all these lists are in the first place."

"You have me there," I admitted. "I hadn't been aware that your purpose was to demonstrate dumb. I guess you're a success with your lists after all."

"I will be," he replied smugly, "just as soon as I complete one last list."

"You mean . . .?" I asked.

The Dragon nodded. "The ten most useless lists."

ON THE SOUTH SHORE, THE AVERAGE OVERNIGHT TEMPERATURE IN WINTER IS 20 DEGREES.

Winter.

It can take a bitter grip on this town. Step outside for more than a few minutes, and all you can think about is getting back inside.

But you're lucky. You've got a place to go.

Thousands of Massachusetts citizens, on the other hand, have no place to go. They're the homeless. And they're not who you think.

We're talking about families, forced out by spiraling housing costs and cuts in Federal aid. Men, battered women, kids, the elderly, and the mentally ill. What can you do about this?

You can give to the Fund for the Homeless. Contribute your money, to help renovate shelters, and build new ones.

Most of all, don't wait. Because right this second, somewhere downtown, or maybe even down the street, people are stranded outside.

Don't leave them there. Fill out the coupon and mail it immediately.

Or pick up the phone right now, call 1-617-227-6348, and charge your contribution to your VISA, MasterCard, or American Express Card.

World of Weather: Look for a major storm

During January, a weather phenomenon occurs, usually between Jan. 20 and Jan. 26. It is called the "January Thaw" and is most pronounced in the northeast and midwest. It is a brief break of the bitter cold winter.

Though it does not occur every year, it is looked forward to by hardy New Englanders.

Two recent years in which it failed to make an appearance were January of 1977 and 1978, when blasts of Arctic air continued unabated.

Jan. 2 the earth is at perihelion, or closer to the sun than on any other day of the year. To be exact, the earth will be 91,400,000 miles from the sun, but because of the earth's axial tilt the temperatures continue to fall, reaching a low point soon afer mid-month.

Caribou, Maine, for example sees the temperature drop, from a mean of 12 degrees to an average low of 10 degrees from Jan. 18 to Jan. 28, then it rises to 11 degrees by Jan. 31. At the other end of the Eastern Seaboard, Key West, Florida begins the month at 71 degrees, drops one degree between Jan. 6 and Jan. 15 then regains the one degree by months end.

The notable January holiday, of course is New Years Day. This first day of the new year has been celebrated on various days, dictated by religion and the calendar in use.

The ancient Romans celebrated Jan. 1 with Pagan ceremonies and the giving of gifts to relatives and friends.

After Rome embraced Christianity, the church decided on Dec. 25 as the beginning of the new year because it coincided with the winter solstice.

In the late Middle Ages the church shifted the date to March 25, which was the day they believed Jesus was conceived.

All partying was banned. This continued until the adoption of the Gregorian calendar in the year 1582. The calendar change was accepted in the American Colonies in September 1752, when eleven days were dropped, Sept. 3 became Sept. 14.

A powerful hurricane struck Charleston, South Carolina the next day (unpredicted of course) and the superstitious people of the day blamed meddling with the calendar for the devastating cyclone.

Thinking of superstitions, while doing some research I came across an interesting notation in the Monthly Weather Review for January 1900. The editor of the review recalled a passage from "The Land Beyond The Forest" by E. Gerard which was published in New York in 1888. The book gave an account of the natives of Transylvania.

Transylvania is located in northwestern Romania and is associated with the legend of Count Dracula. So it is not unexpected that a strange weather story originated in the shadow of thick forests that reverberated with the wailing cry of werewolves and the flutter of vampire wings.

The book's passage reads: My old village oracle told me many stories about a man she had known, who used to go about the country with a small black bag in which were a little book, a little stick, and a bunch of herbs. Whenever a storm was brewing he was to be seen standing on some rising piece of ground and repeating his formulas against the gathering clouds.

"People used to abuse him," she said, "and to say that he was in league with the devil, but I never saw him do any harm, and now that he is dead there are many who regret him, for since then, we have had heavier hailstorms than ever known in his time."

Instances of weather makers are also common in Germany. We are told that there used to live in Suabia long ago a pastor renowned(sic) for his proficiency in exorcising the weather, and whenever a thunderstorm came on, he would stand at the open window invoking the clouds till they had all dispersed.

But the work was heavy and difficult to do, and the pastor was frequently exhausted afer dispersing a storm that large drops of perspiration would trickle down his face.

We are also told that many years ago, in the village of Wermesch, there lived a peasant who, whenever a thunderstorm was seen approaching, used to take his stand in front of it armed with an axe, by which means he always turned the storm aside.

One day, when an unusually heavy storm was seen approaching, the weather maker, as usual, placed himself in front of it, and hurled the axe up into the clouds.

The storm passed by and the axe did not fall down to the earth again. Many years later, the same peasant taking a journey farther into the land, entered the hut of a Wallachian, and there, to his astonishment, found the axe he had thrown into the thunderclouds several years previously.

This Wallachian was a still greater sorcerer in weather making than the Wermesch peasant, and therefore succeeded in getting the axe down again from the sky.

Weatherlore can be fascinating. In a future article, when I will bring you questions and answers about the weather, I'll include the most unusual weather story I have ever heard. it is a true story that happened in India following a flood.

JANUARY OUTLOOK

Following a major winter storm on or about Jan. 1 (which I predicted last month) the weather should become fair and somewhat mild for the season.

This weather pattern will prevail with showers or snow flurry activity until Jan. 10. During his period there could be a frontal storm development. This is only a possibility.

From Jan. 10 to Jan. 17 a major storm will develop. This could be the most important storm of the winter. The date of most likely occurrence is about Jan. 14 or Jan. 16.

From Jan. 17 to Jan. 25, fair weather is indicated, but there is always the chance of precipitation as fronts pass, though I see no major activity. From Jan. 25 to the end of the month, the atmospheric conditions will become unstable with frequent fluctuations.

Precipitations should be below normal (melted) but snowfall, depending upon the major storm I foresee, could be above average. The temperature will be a bit below normal.

Senior director sees busy future for Cohasset

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It began just months ago, but already there are future plans set for the Cohasset Senior Center.

What evolved from the efforts of the Council on Aging may develop into one of the busiest locations in town. Ideas are being sought to build the foundation of a successful, active senior center program.

That's the job of Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton. She began her duties Jan. 6, and already she has proceeded with plans to expand the programs and services available to Cohasset's elderly population.

A Hingham resident, the 39 year-old Bryanton is the town's first senior center director. Formerly a program planner with South Shore Elder Services, Bryanton was familiar with Cohasset and its Council on Aging. She was eager to apply for the position, and happily accepted the employment.

Seated within her Community Center office, Bryanton talked this week about her responsibilities to Cohasset's senior residents, and her aspirations for the future.

"From my work with elderly people, I find them to be an extreme wealth of information. They are so interesting to talk with," she said. "Over a period of time here, I'd like to see a permanent home for the senior center where we can hold creative crafts, poetry classes, ceramics, and other programs. Everything could be held under one roof and we could offer a limitless variety of programs and classes."

According to the director, this is not an elusive dream. Other area towns have devised such centers with a lot of imagination, dedication and funding.

"I hope this can be a reality for Cohasset," she added. "I'd like to have as good a program as Braintree and Weymouth. I'm sure we have the interest."

It's been Bryanton's experience that in order to draw the participation from the community, the center must provide programs of interest to that population. Senior center programs must not focus completely on sewing circles and painting classes.

"I'd love to have a men's morning where they could play chess and talk with each other. They could participate in informative discussions and then have lunch together. The more you offer what they want, the more people you will attract to the center. We need the appropriate programs to attract that participation," she added.

In her first weeks, Bryanton is attempting to gather that information and develop plans and programs around it. She is actively seeking input from senior residents, asking what they want from a center and what programs they will attend.

She talks about the participants as the center's 'resources,' the basis of the program for Cohasset's elderly residents.

With assistance from the Council on Aging, Bryanton has already planned a major event for February. There will be a Senior Center Open House Week from Feb. 10 to Feb. 14 at 3 North Main Street. Bryanton is extending an invitation to all seniors to attend the various discussions and programs available at the Community Center that week.

Cable set to tape selectmen's meeting

The Cohasset studio is one of the smaller franchises operated by American Cablesystems. But with four programs produced from the studio, and a possibility of more, the Stagecoach Way office is one of the busiest in the state.

Although Program Coordinator Jeffrey Rhind has yet to hear any complaints, the studio will be making one significant change in its programming.

Beginning March 3 for eight consecutive weeks, American Cablesystems will video tape the weekly selectmen's meetings. After meeting last week with the Cable Advisory Committee, it was decided that coverage of local government meetings was a facet lacking from Cohasset's channel 3.

When cable television first arrived in Cohasset, the selectmen's meetings were a regular feature of its weekly programming. But as Rhind explained, the volunteers who filmed the meetings met with scheduling conflicts, and there was no one else available.

"We've tried for a year and a half to get someone to film government meetings. John Ronan (former program director) and I both have tried, but there is no interest," he added, noting that most of the volunteer camera operators are about 19 and 20 years old and their interest in sports and entertainment is significantly greater than in local government.

"We're going to have to use our volunteers on a rotating basis to get the meetings filmed," Rhind said. "And we want to publicize that we need people to video tape them. It would be great if someone is really interested in town government, to volunteer to tape these meetings."

The office manager explained that hundreds of residents have been trained in use of the video and recording equipment at the studio. The interest in filming community and school sporting events is great. Entertainment shows, featuring guest commentators or musical productions are also popular with the volunteer personnel. But government is not as intriguing to the young production assistants.

"I like to do town meetings," Rhind said. "We've done those since cable first came to Cohasset. I think they are interesting and unpredictable. I remember one town meeting ran about three nights and we had two four-hour reels of film. We ran the entire length of film altogether once, and we started in the afternoon and it finished sometime around 11 that night."

The audio-visual director for the Cohasset schools, Dr. John Packard, is now attempting to film school committee meetings. He video-taped one of last week's budget sessions, and will attempt more on a regular basis. There are several students at the high school who assist Dr. Packard, but Rhind said the interest in filming night-time, lengthy school board meetings is not as great as taping a high school basketball game.

"These are volunteers we are working with, not paid employees. We can't force them to film anything. They want to work on something they like,

A choice between good care & cost

For Dr. Steven Golden, it's a choice between sound business practice and his patients. It's a decision whether to pay uncertain insurance increases, or continue to provide quality obstetric care to his friends and neighbors.

Golden is a family physician in Cohasset who practices obstetrics. He is affliated with the South Shore Hospital, where he delivers between 25 - 30 babies each year.

"It's not a large part of my practice, nor is it a lucrative one," he said this week. "But it is an enjoyable, fun and gratifying part of my practice."

It is also a portion of his practice that will likely be terminated. There is no date set, no threats made to apprehensive patients. "I'm simply telling all my obstetric patients that I may not be the doctor who delivers their baby," he said. "I'm saying it's conceivable I may not deliver their baby - discussing that possibility with them."

Although no final decision has been made, Dr. Golden, like so many local physicians, may be concluding a portion of their practice they find personally satisfying.

"They aren't just my patients. They are my friends and neighbors. I care about my patients. It's really nice that I can deliver babies for my patients I have been seeing for years. I can continue to see those babies in my general practice," he noted.

With the heavy hand of malpractice insurance premiums looming over physicians, coupled with the the state's balanced billing formula, many doctors are eliminating obstetric care from their practices. Dr. Golden is one local physician carefully considering that option.

"The basic issue is that good doctors who care about people will be forced out," he said. "It's a terrible situation and this is just the tip of the iceberg. The issue here is that the doctor-patient relationship has now taken a back seat to insurance coverage, and dollars and cents, not the quality of care. It's not who provides the best care, but who's cheaper?"

Dr. Golden decries the situation, noting that the doctors and their patients are the ones paying the price for the health insurers' decision to hike retro-

Education reform meeting

The Cohasset League of Women Voters will hold a meeting Thursday, Jan. 23 on Education Reform.

The Guest speaker will be Ms. Sue Harris whose credentials include State League of Women Voters Education Specialist, Advisor and Board Member of the Board of Education for the Implementation of Chapter 188 and member of the Search Committee for the new Commissioner of Education.

The meeting, which is open to the public, is scheduled to begin at 9:15 am at the Unitarian Parish House on Main Street. Coffee will be served.

Call Jeannie Schneider at 383-6140 for baby-sitting.

Watershed planning

Jeffrie Bettinger, chairman of the Watershed Protection Area Committee, notified town counsel that a change in the zoning bylaw is being prepared for the April Town Meeting.

Bettinger was informing town counsel in order to avoid any procedural mistakes. The committee is in the midst of developing a permanent zoning bylaw regarding the limitation of construction within the town's official watershed area.

According to state law, the committee must submit the proposed bylaw to selectmen who have 14 days to submit it to the planning board for review. The planning board must then hold a public hearing within 65 days of receiving the bylaw. They are responsible for having the text available to the public, and notification 14 days prior to a public hearing.

Town Meeting will vote on the proposed bylaw after the planning board submits a report with a recommendation to Town Meeting, or if 21 days have passed without a report. The vote must occur within six months of the public hearing.

Bettinger also noted that the watershed committee is preparing a general bylaw regarding hazardous materials and their handling in Cohasset.

Capt. Trask, fire prevention

Fire Chief Daniel Brock designated Capt. Mark Trask the department's Fire Prevention Officer.

According to state statute, Capt. Trask will be responsible for the enforcement of all laws and regulations in regard to Fire Prevention of the Commonwealth. "These shall include, but limited to, 527-CMR - Fire Prevention Regulations Chapter 148, and State Building Code Article 12," he stated in a letter to selectmen.

According to the chief, Capt. Trask will conduct inspections, issue permits and maintain records as required by the stated laws and regulations.

Personnel changes

The personnel committee unanimously voted Jan. 14 to approve revised salaries for the assistant harbormaster and the night patrol.

The assistant harbormaster will receive $6.50 per hour, effective July 1, 1986 and the night patrol will receive $5 per hour. The rates will take effect, pending approval of the April Town Meeting.

Town flag dispute

Peter Laugelle, who for 13 years supervised the lowering and raising of the town flags, has asked selectmen to find a replacement.

In a letter to selectmen, Laugelle outlined a dispute which occurred earlier this month. Against his recommendation, the large town flag and the Bi-Centennial flag were lowered to honor a resident who recently passed away.

Laugelle, who volunteered his service since 1974 to raise and lower the town's flags, said he was surprised at this action "as it is not the policy." Earlier, Laugelle said he conferred with the executive secretary and advised him that the flags were lowered by order of the governor or president, or chairman of the selectmen. When a town official died, the flag would be lowered, he noted.

"I now feel it was a decision made for certain people and I also ask if this will be a policy for all town citizens," Laugelle asked, regarding the January flag-lowering.

"I feel that after volunteering my time for thirteen years, especially without pay, even on holidays and weekends when the town would have to pay time and a half and double the time, the Board has over looked my recommendations," he wrote to selectmen. "This is why I am asking the Board to find a replacement for these responsibilities."

Insurance budget tabled by advisory board

Citing skyrocketing premiums, the advisory committee postponed recommendation on the insurance budget Tuesday night.

The committee passed budget recommendations for the sewer department, the Dog Control Officer, executive secretary, accounting office, town reports and the building inspector.

According to Committee member Bill Lean, the growth in liabilities has pushed up insurance premiums everywhere. The general expense request for insurance is 104 percent over last year's budget.

Chairman Jacqueline Dormitzer decided to table the recommendation until further information regarding the rate hikes could be obtained.

Following discussion of a $500 water cooler item, the committee also tabled a vote on the Town Hall budget.

The committee called the cooler, which features hot and cold Poland Spring water, an extravagance.

"What is wrong with the sink?" Dick Horne asked.

The cooler is already in use at the Town Hall.

Other Town Hall budget requests include a $200 increase in electricity and a $400 increase in maintenance.

After cutting $1,000 from the electricity and $2,000 from contract services, the committee passed the sewer department budget; $61,976 was recommended for personal expenses and $51,615 for general expenses.

The general expense budget totaled $8,665 for the Building Inspector. The board cut a request for architectural supplies used for remodeling Town Hall.

"That is a one-time thing," Dormitzer said. "We do not want to build that into the budget."

The committee decided to grant the dog control officer a five and a half percent raise, rejecting his request for a 12 percent raise. The animal disposal request was cut from $300 to $200. The committee recommended a personal expense budget of $3,292.

A recommendation for $32,500 for the executive secretary is 26 percent over Fiscal '86.

"I will say he is working extremely hard," Dormitzer said of Executive Secretary Don Andrew.

The accounting department budget was recommended as it was submitted; $60,136 is under personal expenses and $7,859.50 is under general expenses.

Arne Gjesteby presented a request that additional part-time hours not be reflected in the budget. The committee decided to leave it alone.

CHS drama workshop, Feb. 8, 9

"New" and "unusual," "real"and "meaningful" — these tired adjectives are given new life at Cohasset High School Feb. 8 and 9 when the Drama Workshop presents two new one-act plays.

Solicited from writers in a nation-wide search, these plays were brought to a finished state by a collaborative effort of directors and young actors from all parts of the country working with the playwrights last summer in Discovery '85 at the Choate Summer Theatre School. What has emerged is a pair of exceptional playwrights.

Presented under the joint title of "Family Portraits," the works are close examinations of two different families with a common problem - lack of communication. Both plays deal with the problem in a sensitive manner, but neither is without its share of humor. Instead of melodrama or farce, the audience is presented with realistic situations that provoke real tears and real laughter.

An earlier draft of Michael Scanlon's "Candid", the second of the two one-act plays, won the Rhode Island Drama Festival. In this revised version of the play, T.J. Toeffler, (senior Andrew Glasfeld) traces his family's break-up through a slide presentation prepared for his photography class. His mother will be played by junior Karin Anglin and his father by senior Glen Hochkeppel. Senior Erin Browne plays T.J.'s younger sister. His two best friends are played by junior Jenna Emmons and senior John Kuntz.

Performance of "Shel's Sister" and "Candid" will be given Saturday, Feb. 8, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Feb. 9 at 7 p.m.. All seats are reserved and are priced at $3. Both plays are directed by Ron Emmons.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

HOW MUCH CAN YOU AFFORD

Before you start to look for a home, it's important to be able to know how much you can afford to spend. First, consider the amount you can pay for housing each month. Then you can weigh the pros and cons of the many mortgage options available, such as fixed rate and adjustable rate loans.

A lender will look at your monthly income, as well as payments you're making on any long term debts. As a general rule, monthly housing costs should be no more than 28% of your monthly pre-tax income. This includes the mortgage payment, real estate taxes and insurance. If you do have long term debts (student loans, car payments or anything else that will take more than six months to repay) debt service plus housing costs should be less than 36% of your pre-tax monthly income.

Your monthly payments can buy varying amounts of house, depending upon which mortgage option you select. Usually an adjustable rate mortgage plan will enable you to qualify for a higher loan amount. Your Realtor can help you make some of the basic calculations or refer you to a lender who will be able to pre-qualify you for a mortgage.

Home Center Realty is happy to serve all of your real estate needs. You may call us at 749-8833 or stop by our offices at 57 Water St.

New director envisions lots of activity for seniors . . .

Among the crafts and exercise programs offered throughout the week, will be informational discussions featuring local professionals. Dot Zarba from the Norfolk County Extension, a former nutritionist for Angelo's supermarkets, will discuss "shopping for one." According to Bryanton, there is a concern among senior citizens about shopping in large supermarkets where meats are packaged for large families, and many produce items can not be selected individually or in small amounts. Zarba will discuss how the shopper will find such novelties to "shop smart" in the local markets.

"Right now," she noted, "I am looking for people who are willing to share their talents and abilities in handicrafts. I would love to have a poetry day, or something like a housing options day. There's a lot of interest in that subject and there are a lot of options open to senior citizens. It would be helpful to know about new housing for the elderly in our neighboring towns and what's available in Cohasset. This would be a forum that would interest a broad range of senior citizens."

The center will sponsor a program on Social Security at the Community Center office Feb. 6. Social Security representatives will answer individual questions from 11 a.m. to noon. That time will be extended if there is sufficient interest, Bryanton noted.

"A woman came down here the other morning. She had just received a Social Security form in the mail and didn't know how to answer it. I helped her with some of the questions and she said she'd come back Feb. 6 for clarification.," Bryanton explained.

The center will also provide income tax assistance this winter. Any senior requesting help in filing the tax form may contact the center and make an appointment. Two women, trained by the American Association of Retired Persons, will be available to complete the forms at no charge.

Bryanton, who formerly organized the nutrition programs for the 11 towns serviced by South Shore Elder Services, explained that the senior center should be a focal point of activity and information for the town's senior residents.

Kathy Bryanton

"It's a referral center, and it will also be a social outlet," she stated. "I always felt a town must provide its senior residents with comprehensive services."

The center's director will work alongside the town's various senior organizations, including the Social Service League, the 60 Plus Club, and church groups. The popular shuttle bus, currently sponsored by the Social Service League, will be under the direction of the center beginning in February.

The idea is to centralize all services offered Cohasset's senior residents. Rather than trying to recall what agency sponsors which event, a resident may call the center for times and dates of all services.

"I have always felt a senior center should be a comprehensive center. A senior citizen should be able to call one location and get information on any senior activity," the director explained.

"I'd like the seniors to tell me what they want," she continued. "I want to meet their needs now, and to eventually expand even further. I'd love to have support groups for cancer victims, Alzheimer patients, widows and widowers, and diabetics. Eventually we will offer all the programs they are interested in, and they will continually utilize this center."

The senior population of Cohasset, which comprises twenty percent of the total number of residents, "is mobile, interested and supportive of an active senior center," she noted. A comprehensive study conducted last year indicated a need and enthusiasm for a senior center.

"This is our chance to create a new and vibrant center for Cohasset," Bryanton said. "I have always found Cohasset to be a very warm community with very interesting people. Cohasset is an active community."

Before realizing such ambitious plans however, Bryanton assessed this as a step-by-step process for the town. One of her priorities now is to establish contact with the senior population, and to seek volunteers from their ranks.

A senior newsletter will need clerical supervision and someone to compile the monthly information. Office help is needed so Bryanton will be able to leave her desk and integrate herself into the community.

"I'd love to see a number of programs for the residents here, but I need volunteers to generate those activities," she stated.

Anyone interested in helping develop programs for the senior center is invited to contact Bryanton at the Cohasset Senior Center, 3 North Main Street, at 383-9112.

Soccer registration

Registration for the Cohasset Spring Soccer League ends Saturday, Jan. 26. All registrations with the $20 fee must be in by that date. Teams are filling up fast so players must have their registrations in and paid for.

Please send player information and check to 178 South Main St., Cohasset, 02025.

Volunteers thanked

The Northeast Region, American Red Cross Blood Services, conducted a reception for all Cohasset Bloodmobile volunteers on Jan. 15.

This reception showed a brief educational film of the overall Blood Program and allowed all of the Cohasset Volunteers to become aquainted with one another, socialize, and be recognized.

It was also an opportunity to pay tribute to Corinne Cahill, a special person who has contributed so much to Cohasset Bloodmobiles over the last twenty years, ten of which she served as chairman. Corinne has now decided to retire as Chairman.

Catherine Pray gave Corinne an award from the Northeast Region Blood Services, and acted as hostess for the evening.

We all thanked Corinne and acknowledge the time and effort that she put in on behalf of all of us. Thank you to a fine lady.

Wine and cheese party

The literary committee of the Joseph Osgood School cordially invites you to a wine and cheese party, Saturday, Feb. 8 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Lothrop House.

Tickets are $10 per person, and the reservations are limited.

The invitation is extended to all of Cohasset. The literary committee of the Joseph Osgood School invites you to share an evening of fine wine, cheese and local art.

The children of the Odgood School need your support to enable them to publish their literary magazine. The evening promises to be an enjoyable event. Please help to make this event a wonderful success.

Tickets are limited to under 100 and are available on a first come-first serve basis. Contact Mrs. Mary Larson, 383-0775 or Mrs. Carol Bishop, 383-6944 for your tickets.

Deer Hill science competition

You've heard of the "Pepsi Challenge, but have you heard of the most recent "Becker Challenge"? Sixth grade science teacher, Joe Becker, is challenging students to design an insulation system that will fit in a shoe box. Jan. 31, any student accepting the challenge will be given an ice cube to put into his shoe box. The students whose ice cubes survive the longest will be declared the winners. Watch the Mariner for further news of this exciting competition.

Jan. 31 sports auction

Remind your family and friends to mark their calendars for the upcoming PSO Sportsmarket Auction, which will take place immediately following the C.H.S. varsity basketball game vs. Norwell at the C.H.S. gym at 8:30 p.m., Friday, January 31.

Auctioneer, Linton H. Young, will auction off a unique collection of sporting equipment, events, instructions and outings.

The Cohasset Boosters will provide refreshments. Admission to the auction is free!

The PSO plans to use the Sportsmarket proceeds to purchase a balance beam for the C.H.S. Gymnastics Team. The team is currently without a useable beam, therefore gymnasts are unable to train or compete in that event.

Come to the Skipper's basketball game at 7:30 p.m., Jan. 31 and stay for the Auction action!

☐ Berklee College of Music has accepted Randolph S. Kravette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Kravette of Cohasset, in its Freshman Class of Summer of 1986.

Kravett's curriculum will encompass unique course offerings that emphasize improvisation, recording studio techniques, popular vocal/instrumental arranging, songwriting and composing music for films and other media productions.

☐ Hats off the Corinne Cahill, and there certainly is a good reason for that! Corinne retired as chairman of the Cohasset bloodmobile after serving in that capacity for ten years! There was a reception held last week at the Unitarian Parish Hall, and Catherine Pray gave her an award from the New England Regional Red Cross, who she represented. During the twenty years that Corinne has been involved with the Bloodmobile, 9,000 pints of blood have been donated! That's what is called hard work and dedication. She surely will be missed.

☐ If travel is educational, Joy Pratt (daughter of Helen and Burt Pratt of Ripley Rd.) should come up with high honors. Joy is a Junior at Colby College, majoring in economics, and spent her first semester at the University of Warwick in England. While at Warwick, Joy made the 90-mile trip to London, to tour the city and meet friends (among them Ann O'Connell, a CHS classmate, who was studying there.) She also managed a weekend in Paris and a short trip through Wales (Joy even surprised her mom with a birthday call to her from Ireland on Dec. 13). After finishing at Warwick Joy spent Christmas with a family in Glasgow, Scotland. Then back to London to team up with two Colby students for a whirlwind tour of the Continent, starting with New Year's Eve in Munich, then on to Innsbruk, Vienna and Salzburg where they were to have met Krissy Ralff (another CHS grad). When last heard from (Jan. 11) Joy and party were in Florence, Italy. They spent a day in Rome and another in Venice (where they finally met up with Krissy Ralff). What's left you ask? They are planning to go to Madrid and Salamanca, Spain (to visit more Colby pals), with possible stops in Monaco, Nice and Cannes. Then back to London for a two-day visit with Jill Grant (CHS again). Joy will leave for home on the 28th, just in time to repack her gear and be in Waterville by Feb. 5 for the second semester. WOW! Amazing how many of the colleges are making it available for their students to participate in these programs, what grand geography lessons! If I sound envious, I am. Hope that Joy and all the rest of the gals mentioned let us know all about this tour on their return.

☐ On the same subject, Bon Voyage to Joanna Fone, who leaves for Rome to study at the Trinity campus there for this semester. Keep in touch Jo, we'll miss you!

☐ Sara Bishop and Amy Hobbs are products of their hard work and hours of practice. Sara plays the trumpet, and Amy the flute, and both were selected to perform with the Junior Southeast District Band. The festival is to be held on March 7 and 8 at Durfee High School in Fall River, Mass.

☐ Election time is rolling around again. It's time to take out papers if you wish to run for an office. If you do, good for you and best of luck. If you don't, don't critize those that do!

☐ There was a wonderful crowd in Wheelwright Park last Saturday, as the boy scouts held a District Klondike Derby. Nine towns were involved, and had to pull sleds through the park trails (without benefit of snow to ease the way for them). The boys demonstrated their skills in first aid, orienteering, survival, fire starting, knot tying, and pioneering. Run by Merle Brown and Arthur Lehr, it looked like a grand time was had by all.

Last Saturday the Cohasset Boy Scouts hosted a successful Klondike Derby at Wheelwright Park. Here some Scouts are busy pulling their sled through some rough terrain. Scouts from nine towns participated. (Paula Brackett)

☐ The First Parish Church looks super! The "January Thaw" that we had last week allowed them to paint the doors and other spots and make the church look wonderful!

☐ Don't forget the Cohasset Community Bloodmobile, to be conducted on Monday, Jan. 27, from 2:30 to 7:30 at the Unitarian Parish House. Mr. Odermatt (Donor Promoter and Acting Chairman) reminds us that everyone in good health age 17 and over, and weighing at least 110 pounds, is urged to "donate the gift of life". Call Mr. Odermatt at 383-1283 for further information.

A graduate of Cohasset High School and a Bates junior, Buckley is one of 32 junior advisors (J.A.'s) at the Lewiston, Maine, college.

First-year students may choose to reside together either in several dormitory sections throughout campus, collectively known as the Freshman Center, or with upperclass students in various residences and dormitories.

☐ Kay McNeill was spotted "around town" recently, and looking marvelous! She reports that she and "the crew" are all well and happy, something that is always good to hear! We'll never stop missing that family, at least they do all pop back to say hello!

☐ That's it from here. I hope that you have a news item to report this week. I'm awaiting it...

Senior services

Senior citizens comprise more than 20 percent of this town's population.

That's a significant number of people. It's difficult to imagine that such a large number of people could possibly be forgotten. But it happens.

Senior citizens are often not the most vocal portion of a population. Society has a tendency to forget or ignore our older residents. While we busily occupy our lives with children, education, activity and entertainment, we tend to leave out this silent group.

While we praise the efforts of our young - "our future" we ignore the richness and wisdom of our elders - our past. How wrong we are not to learn from their experiences, listen to their advice, heed their tempered warnings. Without our past, we can never appreciate the present and anticipate the future.

In Cohasset we have a number of diverse groups and organizations serving our elderly population. They offer a number of needed services to a great many residents.

Now, with the addition of a senior center and a senior center director, we will be able to provide more services to more residents. The director's goal is to provide diverse services, programs, informational discussions, and creative workshops under one roof. The senior center will be the major resource, the one location seniors can call to find information and assistance.

Director Kathy Bryanton is aware that Cohasset contains a large, intelligent group of senior residents. They should demand much of this community, and Bryanton is willing to provide it.

The key to a successful senior center is to reach as many residents as possible. Bryanton fully understands she must help not only the woman interested in a sewing circle or a dance class, but the widower who wants help with his income tax form, or a morning of chess and conversation with some male companions.

The director is eager to confront the challenge ahead - to provide services to our elderly residents. To give them the satisfying future they deserve.

Mariner quote of the week

In response to a request for a water cooler at Town Hall . . .

"Why can't they use the sink?"

How will the Pats do Sunday?

"Of course the Patriots are going to win!" Fred Hopkins (on left)

"There's not a doubt in my mind, the Patriots are going to win. They have the spirit and the momentum. I feel it. I really do. Their time has come."
Peg Miller (on right)

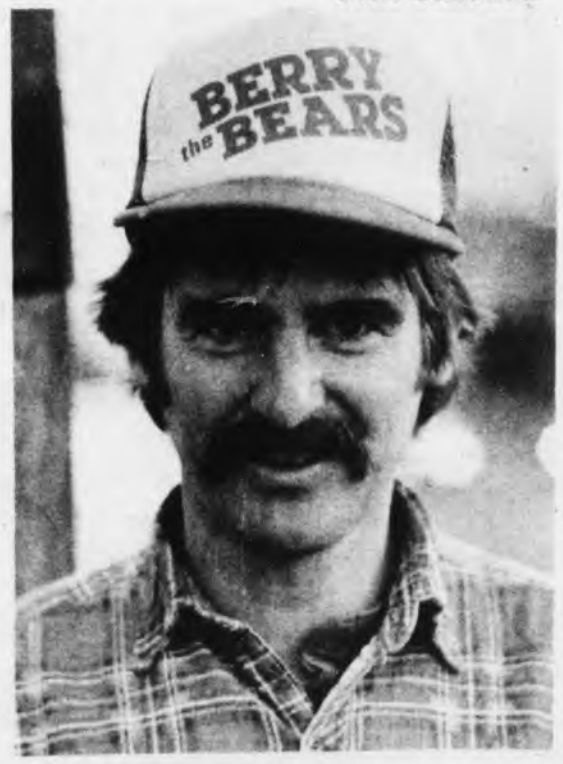
Ted Reardon (6) and Matt Kane (12), (on left) agreed with Tom Reardon (12) (on right) that "Patriots will win because they have a good defense and they are getting Irving Fryer back for offense and Tony Eason is improving."

"The Patriots Berry's a good coach and I think Craig James will be able to run against them." Jeff Martin

"Chicago is going to win. I just think they are a better team. If my husband heard that, he'd kill me."
Shelanne Derkin & John (6 mos.)

"I'd like the Patriots to win but that would be too nice for them. I don't think they will."
Richard Demers

"I think the Patriots will win. They have the spirit and they really want it. Of course, I just got into football about a week and a half ago."
Jane Callanan



"Is there a question in your mind who is going to win'? The Patriots of course. I totally agree that we have to berry the Bears." James L. Gallagher

A 'classy' way to spark an interest in books

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The goal was no more ambitious than this - to make reading exciting and interesting.

Deer Hill reading teacher Dorothy McDonald struggled with ways to make her students love reading. Book reports have been the tried and true method of testing the comprehension of a book - but were the children bored by it?

This year, she tried something new. Rather than writing book reports, the children tackled new projects. One month they looked and studied comic strips from the newspapers. After finishing a selected book, they wrote their own comic strip detailing the main events and characters within their book.

They became assistant teachers in another project. After finishing their book, the children created transparencies outlining the most important elements within the story. The transparencies were used on overhead projector, just as a teacher would do, to visually explain the book to the classroom students.

This month's project began when the children studied the classified advertisement section of the newspaper. They learned what an ad contains, and the complete, concise method of including all information in a limited amount of space.

Their assignment: write a classified advertisement about the classic novel they had just completed. Make the ad reader react, go to the library, and read the same book. Like a newspaper ad, the classroom ad was meant to entice customers to the product.

According to Mrs. McDonald, the students selected a title and took notes on every chapter they completed. Two or three rought drafts were created before the final product.

The fourth grade class developed ads under various titles, including Lost and Found, Public Notices and For Sale. "I think the children like these projects much better than the traditional book reports," Mrs. McDonald stated. When she asked the students their opinion, an overwhelming majority resounded with approval.

Eager to express their individual sentiments, many of the students discussed why the visual projects are more fun than written book reports.

"I liked this project," Priscilla Goff said. "When I read my book, I wanted others to read the same thing."

Sarah Kirk commented, "it makes everything so fun. Now I go to the newspaper and read the ads, too. Maybe when I grow up I'll work in newspapers."

Johanna Horn noted that she started to read "Heidi" but later switched to "Summer of the Swans."

"I really liked it. Now maybe I'll go back and read 'Heidi'," she said.

Jennifer Foulke said she couldn't decide what book to read. After consulting with her sister, she went to the Paul Pratt Library. "Mrs. Pope thought 'Black Cauldron' was a good book. So I got that, and I really liked it," she said.

She intends to keep a list of the classics and Newbury Award books "and I'll try to read them all," Jennifer added.

While the children chatted excitedly about their new adventures into the classics, one student remained quitely behind, sitting in a large rocking chair at the far end of the classroom. She was silently reading, seemingly unaware of the commotion within the room.

"That's a rocking chair I brought from home," Mrs. McDonald said. "As you can see, this is a very relaxed classroom. I thought the rocking chair would be a nice addition. The children spend a lot of time reading there."

It seems her goal has been attained.

Competition forming in selectmen, school board races

The competition looks keen for the April 12 election. Nomination papers became available Jan. 15. Within hours, several persons had entered the Town Clerk's office with the intent to file for local office.

Some new faces will appear in what promises to be a competitive election. Contrary to past contests in which most incumbents were not challenged, there are several newcomers testing the political waters this spring.

James Leonard of 245 South Main Street took out nomination papers for a three-year seat on the school committee.

Dane Hahn, 44 Black Rock Road, also took out papers for a position on the school committee.

Incumbent Diana Kornet has publically declared her intent to run for re-election, although she has yet to obtain the nomination papers.

The other seat is currently held by nine-year school board veteran Jack Langmaid. Last week Langmaid said he was seriously considering a re-election bid, although he had not made a final decision.

John K. McNabb Jr., 53 Pond Street, has obtained nomination papers for a three-year seat on the Board of Selectmen.

David Spencer Duncombe, 2 Sheldon Road, also filed for a position on that board.

Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Road, obtained papers for a seat on the Board of Selectmen.

Vito Conte of 18 Hillside Road, has taken out nomination papers for a three-year seat on that board.

There are two three-year positions available this year. Incumbents Frank England and Cliff Mitman are undecided as to their re-election bids.

Five-year planning board incumbent Daniel Cotton has obtained nomination papers for his re-election attempt.

Ronald Goodwin of 196 Pond Street has obtained nomination papers for the three-year seat on the water commission. Incumbent Peter Pratt has announced his plans not to seek re-election.

Incumbent Gerard Buckley has obtained papers for the five-year seat on the recreation commission.

Board of Assessor Thomas S. Duggan has declared his intent to seek re-election by obtaining papers for that three-year position.

Michele A. Buckley of 247 Forest Avenue will seek re-election as Trustee of the Paul Pratt Library.

Anne C. Bowdoin, 17 Atlantic Ave., has taken out nomination papers for a three-year seat on that board.

There are three, three-year seats available on the library board of trustees. The positions are currently held by Buckley, Barbara Power and Lucia Wood.

Candidates have until Feb. 27 at 5 p.m. to submit the nomination papers to the Town Clerk's office.

active premium rates and initiate balanced billing.

"It's inconceivable it will only affect seven out of 14 physicians at the South Shore Hospital, " Dr. Golden stated. "And I'll tell you this is not a power play or a strike. This is a financial burden."

Considering his own situation, the Cohasset resident said he could possibly "take out a major league loan to pay my malpractice insurance, but with no end in sight, it would be a never-ending cycle. I can't afford it. And no one has told us what the rates will be, what they are based on."

The physician described it as an "extremely upsetting situation. I didn't spend medical time and my residency and 15 months convincing the South Shore Hospital that I was well-trained, to give up this part of my practice. But I assure you, I doubt if I'll be able to continue."

Four obstetricians with offices in Hingham and Scituate are refusing new patients, saying they're squeezed between spiraling malpractice-insurance premiums and a state legislature which refuses to allow higher obstetrical fees.

And if the doctors receive no relief, a spokesman for South Shore Hospital says it's quite possible that the hospital may be forced to do away with delivering babies, a service upon which women from 50 area towns depend.

Donald Fraser, director of community relations for the South Weymouth hospital, said seven of 14 obstetricians associated with South Shore can no longer afford to meet insurance-premium payments and are discontinuing their practices for the time being. The seven include the obstetrics and gynecological practice of Susan V.G. Lincoln, Richard D. Monsees, James F. Penza and Richard R. Smith, which has offices in Scituate, Hingham and Duxbury.

In a recent interview, Dr. Monsees said the major problem has been retroactive premium increases dating back to 1983.

The new rates have increased premiums from about $13,000 to over $40,000 per doctor, he said.

"You don't find out about the rate increases until the year is half over," Monsees said. "It's sort of like signing a purchase-and-sale agreement for a house that has blank spaces, but you're still expected to meet the mortgage payments, whatever they are."

The practice will continue offering gynecological services because, while premiums are nearly as high for that specialty, retroactive rate increases have not been as severe, he added.

The sudden insurance increases are also affecting muncipalities, bars, liquor stores and a host of categories now considered high risks by insurance carriers. Analysts say the carriers cannot keep increases down because of a decrease in returns on investments in today's low-inflation economy.

Monsees said malpractice-coverage rates are determined by the Judicial Underwriters Association, a state agency of doctors, lawyers and judges. The number of suits and size of settlements determines the rates obstetricians pay.

"It's not a matter of the insurance rates as much as it is our ability to pass these increases along," Monsees said.

Massachusetts is the only state in the U.S. that dictates what obstetricians may charge for natal care, he explained. This fee has increased from $500 to $670 in the last five years — barely enough to cover inflation, let alone pay for the insurance hike, he said.

Another factor which has hurt doctors is the state's refusal last year to allow 'balanced billing' — the difference between the amount major health insurers like Blue Cross—Blue Shield will pay for services and the costs incurred in delivering those services.

Obstetricians wouldn't be refusing new patients if a fee increase and balanced billing were allowed and retroactive premium hikes were ended, Monsees said.

"Perhaps we'll get these changes in the future, though it may be just wishful thinking."

Monsees acknowledged that obstetrics generates the highest number of malpractice claims in medicine today. That's because the state has a 21-year statute of limitations on malpractice claims connected with childbirth.

"I had a deceased colleague who was recently

Cohasset school sports roundup . . .

Tuesday, the boys started off the week by creaming, Hanover 91-42. Coach Eddie Minelli thought his entire team played well and was pleased that he was able to give everyone considerable playing time.

Minelli also pointed out that Cohasset shot 41 for 50 from the free throw line which is a record for any Skipper team.

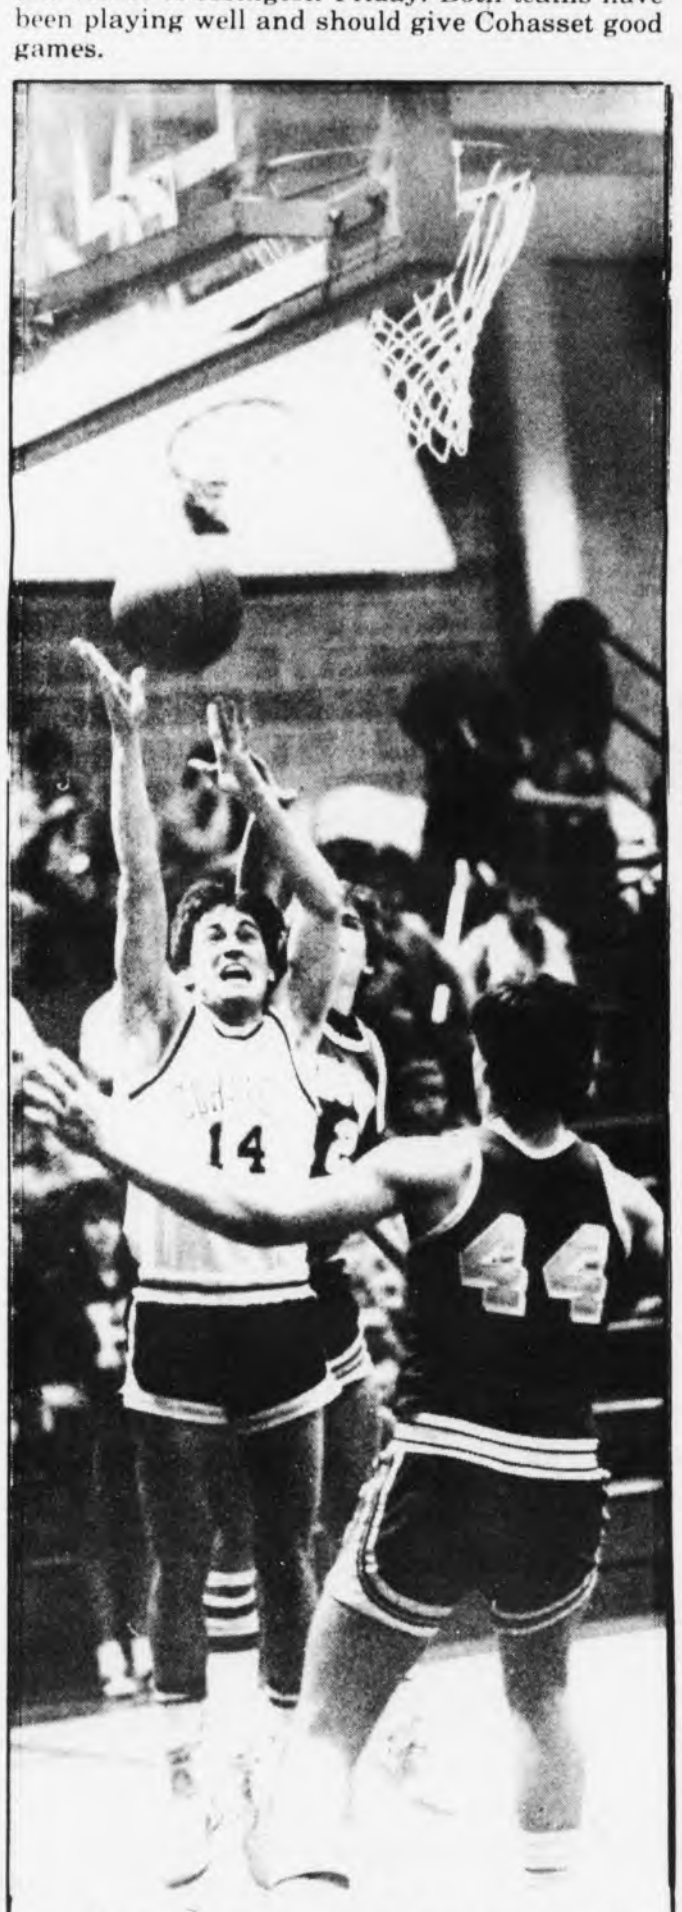
Tony Bogarty led the team on offense with 23 points, followed by Brian Edwards who had 13 and Bob Shultz who had 9. Todd Trautwein, Floyd Hardwick, David Shumaker, Matt Maloney, and David Shultz all hit career highs in scoring. Todd Trautwein was also 8 for 8 in foul shots.

This victory marked Cohasset's 30th straight win in the South Shore League. The record now stands at 36 victories in a row. If Cohasset keeps on winning, they should break this record by the time they play Sandwich Feb. 7.

Friday, the boys traveled to Hull and demolished the Pirates, 74-43. Once again Minelli attributed this victory to a team effort and said that everyone who played in this game scored.

Brian Edwards was Cohasset's high scorer with 17 points. Tony Bogarty pumped in 16 points and James Creed had 14. Tony also had 11 assists and 10 rebounds 6 of which were offensive rebounds. Bobby Shultz also contributed 10 points and 9 steals to the Skipper's winning effort.

This week the boys expect to find better competition as they face Whitman/Hanson Tuesday (away) and travel to Abington Friday. Both teams have been playing well and should give Cohasset good games.



Bobby Shultz goes for the shot against Hanover High School. Cohasset won (naturally) two weeks ago by a score of 91-42. (Carol McCann)

HOCKEY

Wednesday, the boys were defeated by Abington in a disappointing loss, 4-3. At one point in the game Cohasset trailed Abington 4-1, but came back to come within one and were close to tying the score, when time ran out. Coach Dennis Walsh praised his team's efforts especially the front line, and felt Cohasset did an excellent job of sticking with one of the strongest teams in the league.

Either Craig Mulcahy or Greg Ferreira scored the first goal (there seems to be a dispute as to who really scored it so I'll just mention both of them). Jeff Hartwell and Philip Mahoney picked up the second and third goals for Cohasset.

Thursday, the boys blew past Bishop Fenwick 4-1. Walsh said his team played an excellent game and adjusted well to some changes he had to make in the line up.

Todd Fitzpatrick, Bob Durkin, Jeff Hartwell, and Kevin Leary all scored for the skippers. Peter Sandbloom had a great game in net. Chris Ridge and Dan Camardo also played well defensively.

This week, the boys face a talented Rockland team Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Winter Gardens. Walsh feels his team has a tendency to play well at home, and Cohasset might be able to use this to their advantage Wednesday. Saturday, Cohasset is expecting a victory over Whitman/Hanson, a team whom they have beaten once already this year.

WRESTLING

Thursday, Cohasset gave Scituate its toughest challenge this year but still came up short, 35-26. Coach Torin Sweeney was pleased with his team's performance and feels this meet gained respect for Cohasset from the other teams in the league.

Brian Leary, Liam Stanford, and Jeff Soltesz all pinned their opponents. Sweeney was impressed with Jeff's performance especially since this was his first meet of the season. Greg Baker and Doug Bennet also picked up wins.

Saturday, in a tri-meet the boys beat Weymouth North 32-26 and lost to Marshfield 34-26. After this competition Sweeney was convinced that his team has come into its own and will not be walked over by anyone.

Both Randy Reid and Liam Stanford had two pins. With these two victories Liam bettered his already impressive record to 8-1 with seven pins as well! Doug Bennet, Glen Froio and Brian Leary picked up 2 victories. John Froio won one and tied another and Peter Buckley and Mike Colman had one win apiece.

Sweeney cited Omhar Brown and Chip Muncey as wrestling well. Mike Colman, Paul Froio, and Jim Donahue did a nice job filling in vacant positions as well.

Tuesday, the boys face Lincoln Sudbury at 6 p.m. Saturday, Cohasset is home and wrestles against an arch rival Hingham, will also face Holbrook as well. Sweeney is expecting this to be Cohasset's most exciting match of the season and he hopes to avenge last year's loss.

GYMNASTICS

The girls got off to a slow start and lost to Scituate in their opening meet 70.7-113.

However, Cohasset came back and showed some improvement in their second meet against Norwell. The Skippers still lost this meet but for the first time two girls scored over a 7 in vaulting. Liz Buckley scored 7.0 and Elisha Mattes scored 7.25. Coach Andrea Millis was pleased with the efforts of these two girls.

Last Monday, Cohasset picked up its first victory as it squeezed past Rockland 75.8-74.8. Millis was happy to see an overall improvement in the girls' scores.

On the vault, Liz Buckley tied for second and Mary Beth McNamara came in third. On the beam, Melissa Rousseau picked up a second followed by Amy Hobbs who came in third. On the bars Mary Beth McNamara came in second and Cory DeSantis, Carrie Ripley, and Melissa Rousseau tied for third. In the floor exercises Liz Buckley and Melissa Rousseau tied for second and Mary Beth McNamara came in third.

Last Wednesday, the girls lost to Duxbury 70.7-99.6. Millis thought her team did well in this meet considering 3 people were out sick.

This Wednesday, the girls face Hanover. Millis is looking for each girl's score to increase in this meet. Millis says her team is very young, but enthusiastic. Cohasset has gone up against some very good competition and has not gotten discouraged and this attitude is encouraging to Millis.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Tuesday, the girls lost a heartbreaker to Hanover, 56-48. Coach Bill Fallon attributes the loss to poor shooting on his team's part.

Anne O'Leary led the Skippers with 14 points and had a great game off the boards as well. Maureen O'Leary also had a good game and pumped in 12 points.

Friday, Cohasset was defeated by a tough Hull team 38-31. The score was tied at the end of 3 quarters and the Skippers were even ahead by one with 5½ minutes left. Unfortunately someone put a lid on Cohasset's basket and the girls were unable to score in the last 5 minutes.

Maureen O'Leary was Cohasset's high scorer with 8 points.

Around the puck with Buck . . .

Those who were thinking that the Hanover Indians were going to be pushed aside in their quest for the SSL crown might have a change of thought.

The Indians roared past Sandwich 8-0 and Whitman-Hanson 10-0 and while these two teams may never be confused with the Edmonton Oilers, Jim Sylvia has to be happy with his team's performance.

Jeff Ray could be the hottest goal scorer in the state at the moment.

The junior forward coming off a 23 goal season a year ago has scored 10 goals in his last three games. In the 10-0 shelling of Whitman-Hanson both Ray and Mike Maguire each notched the hat trick. Rob Lyons, Craig Dalrymple, Tom Knito, and Mike Gillis also scored for the Indians. Brian DeAcetis had an 18 save performance to notch his second shutout of the year.

His second shutout came two days earlier as again he posted an 18 save shutout. Ray scored four goals and added a single assist. Knito added two goals while Gillis had assists on all of Ray's goals.

COHASSET

Cohasset, a doormat in the league since the days of Domenic Campbell, is sending a message around the league: "One best be ready to play US." The highly explosive Duxbury Dragons learned the hard way, losing to the 3-4-0 Skippers 6-4. Bob Durkin led the attack with two goals and two assists. The big story of this game was Peter Sandblom who had 35 saves in the victory. Danny Pompeo, Todd Henry, Jeff Hartwell and Phil Mahoney tallied single goals.

SCITUATE

It is not easy being the defending state champions that graduated six of seven top scorers. All of our opponents are geared toward revenge. The Scituate Sailors are 4-3 on the young season with their latest game being a 6-5 set back to the Hull Pirates.

The Sailors lost despite the four goal effort of Chris Tatum. However, Hull's Dave O'Donnell matched Tatum's effort, and Mike Antoine had 37 saves for the Pirates.

Vo-Tech budget up 7.6 percent

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

In preparing its 1986-87 budget for presentation in a public hearing tonight (Wednesday), the regional school committee of South Shore Vocational-Technical High School last week refused to establish many new positions sought by Supt. Clifford W. Easton.

All but $92,000 of the budget had been settled before a committee meeting last Wednesday night. The proposed budget to operate the school's two campuses in 1986-87 is more than $3.4 million, a 7.6-percent increase over the current budget.

Much of the total budget — $2.3 million — is earmarked for teacher salaries next year. The salary figure is nine percent higher than in this year's budget.

Assessments to member towns are slated to increase 28 percent in the coming year. The larger assessments are due to higher enrollments. Cohasset's enrollment at South Shore VoTech has doubled over last year; all towns except Norwell are sending more students to the school, raising assessments to members.

The regional committee agreed with Dr. Easton's requests for new clerical and physical-education aide positions next year.

The new secretarial post would be divided between the needs of the assistant superintendent and activities related to special education, in which 22 percent of the school's students participate.

Hiring a PhysEd aide would allow juniors and seniors to take two or three days of gym a week. Upperclassmen currently attend only one day of PhysEd a week.

"It may result in a reduction of the number of study halls," Easton told committee members.

Easton originally requested a PhysEd teacher at a proposed salary of $23,000. Committee members unanimously agreed to fund an aide position at a $12,000-per-year salary.

The committee also unanimously approved the clerical post at a salary of $15,000.

But the committee remained unconvinced about the need for four other positions, three of them administrative. Easton provided information on eight other regional VoTech districts around the state, most of which have only one campus, but five to eight administrators instead of South Shore's four, he said.

Easton requested a new director of pupil services, who would oversee both guidance and special-education functions; a placement and information-management coordinator; an assistant for development and special programs, who would write grant applications and seek donations from individuals and businesses; and a part-time secretary for the Abington campus.

Grant applications are currently submitted by Paul Babcock, who receives a salary from Bay State Skills Corp. to seek grants for the school.

Having Babcock apply for possible grants and follow through on them "has saved me dozens of hours each month," Easton said. "Paul Babcock has provided real relief in this respect."

The committee voted 6-2 to reject three of the positions. In each case, only members David Chittim of Cohasset and Lloyd E. Patriquin of Whitman voted to establish the new posts.

No motion was made to accept Easton's recommendation for a new grant and development assistant.

Easton said administrators were willing to forego salary increases next year if the committee would agree to establish the new positions. That would save between $8,000 and $10,000 at an average pay hike of 5 percent, he said.

He also compiled a $48,000 list of 12 items which could be cut from the budget to make room for the positions. Many of these items, like a baseball batting cage or a metal lathe, are unnecessary.

Trash to energy plants could be a vital option

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The Bay State's shortage of landfill space will be of major concern to all communities by the turn of the century, a representative of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council told members of the South Shore Coalition last week.

As space dwindles and alternative disposal methods come into use, towns can expect trash disposal to become "a major budget item," said MAPC planner Jean Christensen.

"The minimum rate to dispose in a sound landfill is now $16 per ton. Duxbury suddenly found out it had to pay $48 a ton last year," she said.

MAPC has researched future disposal options and came up with two solutions feasible for South Shore towns — resource recovery, or so-called trash-to energy plants and regional landfills.

But Christensen's written report to coalition representatives showed that all nine commercial landfills operating in southeastern Massachusetts will reach capacity by 2000. Five landfills, including one in Randolph, will be closed before 1990. Only two — commercial dumps in Halifax and North Attleboro — have enough capacity to remain open for at least 10 more years.

Towns still have options open to them, she said. "Seventeen percent of materials going into suburban landfills is organic and can be composted. Lots of options are still open."

That leaves resource recovery ideas like the SEMASS trash-to-energy plant in Rochester, to which 32 towns will eventually ship their refuse. Weymouth is also planning to study reconstructing its Wharf Street incinerator, shut down 10 years ago by federal environmental officials.

Christensen said that with the help of big communities like Quincy, Milton and Braintree, Weymouth and other coalition towns would have the 500 tons of trash thought to be the minimum required to run a trash-to-energy facility.

Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald told coalition members that concerns about the revitalized plant include its proximity to Weymouth Back River and a densely-populated neighborhood through which trucks would have to pass to supply the plant with trash.

"The projection for 70 truckloads a day already has neighbors alarmed, and rightly so," McDonald said.

To sound the alarm, the coalition is planning to ask members of local health boards, sewer commissions and departments of public works to its Feb. 6 meeting in Hull.

"This is going to be a big budget item within five years," state Sen. William Golden (D-Weymouth) told members. "And costs will accelerate once DEQE (state environmental quality engineering department) begins to clamp down on public landfills soon."

COMMUTER RAIL HEARINGS

The state Environmental Protection Agency will hold two public hearings next week on a $200 million plan to rehabilitate three route of the Old Colony Railroad for use as a South Shore commuter rail system.

Environmental-impact hearings are scheduled for Wednesday, Jan. 29 in the Transportation Building, Boston, and at 7 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 30 in Braintree Town Hall.

The environmental notification form filed with MEPA said the proposed system would include three lines branching to Scituate, Plymouth and Middleboro from a terminus in Braintree. Each line would include four to six intermediate stops, the report said.

The project should be complete by 1990 if work begins in 1987, the report noted.

'KEEP OLD AREA CODE'

The South Shore Coalition has asked spokesmen for New England Telephone Co. to attend the group's Feb. 6 meeting in Hull to justify its plans to establish a new area code in the Boston area by 1989.

"We've got to take action on this as a group," Rockland Selectman Luigi Pace told other coalition members last Thursday. "As members of the MAPC and MBTA districts, we should remain in the 617 area with the rest of metropolitan Boston."

Norwell and Rockland selectmen have written to colleagues in other towns urging support for their bid to get changes in the area-code boundary.

Return to the Democratic values, urges Shannon

Former Congressman James Shannon sounded a call for the Democratic Party to return to the values and traditions that have been historically its own.

Speaking at a Coop-6 brunch at Seascapes in Hull Sunday, the attorney pointed out that since 1981 the Reagan administration has worked for a redistribution of wealth that would benefit big business and the rich, while cutting programs that would benefit the poor and middle class.

"With the backing of the President," Shannon told guests at the function sponsored by the Hull Democratic Town Committee, "the same Senator Gramm who has now given us the Gramm-Rudman Amendment proposed to do away with student loans, cutting to the very heart of our education; eliminate Title I and Head Start programs; do away with local aid to cities and towns, and drastically reduce Social Security.

"We know what they did to people on disability — they took people who were least able to speak for themselves off SSDI.

"You would think that members of our party on the national scene would make great headway proposing alternate measures," said Shannon. "Not only has this not happened, but this year many Democrats actually appear to be accomplices of Reagan."

Shannon said the Gramm-Rudman Amendment could provide a tool for the administration to eliminate many programs "that improve the quality of life we have come to rely on. Here on the South Shore you will especially feel the brunt of Gramm-Rudman.

"Transportation, already a serious problem, will suffer. Tourism will be on the block. Efforts to revamp the grant program will be taken off the table.

"And don't believe there will be big cuts in defense," he added, "especially with Reagan scheduled to meet with Gorbachev."

Shannon said he feels the Democratic Party in Massachusetts provides a sharp contrast to the national organization.

"You have a strong, progressive Democratic governor," he stated. "Even though the Massachusetts economy is demonstrably the greatest in the nation, the governor is aware that this is not a cause for complacency, but a challenge to do even better.

"He knows that a strong economy is a means to an end — a just society that provides help for the mentally ill and the desperately poor, that improves education at all levels, that truly provides opportunity for all.

"And you in this area are truly well represented," he added.

"Sen. Bill Golden and Rep. Frank Hynes have won the admiration of everyone who works with them. They are legislators of the highest caliber."

Will your teenager be among the students who raise their SAT scores 250 points?

He or she might be. If your son or daughter prepares with a book. Or a friend. But a student's best shot is to take the most successful SAT prep course there is—Stanley H. Kaplan.

For nearly 40 years, Stanley H. Kaplan's test-taking techniques and professional educational programs have helped over 100,000 students prepare for the SAT. Many have increased their scores 150, 200, 250 points or more.

Local physicians forced out of practice . . .

sued for malpractice by a 17-year-old," Monsees said.

South Shore Hospital's Fraser said that as of now, the other seven obstetricians on staff have no plans to suspend their practices.

But he added that it's "not realistic" to expect the seven doctors to handle the more than 2,000 deliveries at the hospital each year, and so the hospital is "assessing its options" for providing obstetrical care in the future.

"It's not known how long this situation will continue, and it would be premature to elaborate on our options at present," Fraser said.

Though obstetrics will continue to be offered at South Shore Hospital in the meantime, he confirmed that, without relief in some form, the hospital may be forced to end obstetrical service.

"Of course, we're hoping for a compromise between doctors, the state and insurance carriers."

The hospital delivered 2,065 babies born to women from 50 different towns in the year ending June 30, he said. Next to Goddard Memorial Hospital in Stoughton, it was the largest number of deliveries of any hospital on the South Shore.

"Numbers like these show that this issue isn't just the problem of physicians, it's a big problem facing the public at large," Fraser said.

Monsees suggested that the state cannot afford to lose too many obstetricians to insurance-rate hikes.

"Of 20,000 physicians in Massachusetts, only 700 are obstetricians," he said. They include residents in hospitals as well as medical-school instructors, many of whom are not engaged in active practice.

The obstetrician said he and his three colleagues will return to practice when it becomes feasible to do so.

"It may be later this year, but we just don't know. I'm hoping this won't take years to resolve."

Recreation offers ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a ski trip to Kings Ridge, N.H. Thursday, Feb. 20 during the february school vacation.

Buses will leave from the Town Hall at 5 a.m. and return at 7:30 p.m. that day, and the cost for the trip is $27 per person. Rentals are $13 and lessons are $9.

If you are interested in this trip, and are 17 years old or younger, please call the Recreation Dept. office at 383-6791 before Friday, Feb. 7. We will be able to accomodate 45 people. Registrations will be accepted on a first-call basis.

The Cohasset Recreation Dept. is accepting applications for a substitute aerobics instructor for part-time employment beginning in June, 1986.

Obituary

Mary E. Nawn

Mary E. Nawn, 86, of Boston, died Saturday, Jan. 11 at the Beth Israel Hospital, after a brief illness.

Born in Brookline, Miss Nawn lived in Cohasset and moved to Boston 35 years ago. She worked at the Veterans Administration in Boston for 50 years.

Miss Nawn traveled all over the United States and went on a group pilgrimage to Rome in 1950 with the late Cardinal Cushing. She was also interested in photography.

The funeral Mass was held in St. Cecilia's Church in Boston. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

She leaves five nieces, Eileen Kurtz and Elizabeth Maree of Cohasset, Margaret Kenyon of Concord, N.H., Carolyn Vickery of Lakeville, Barbara Wright of Moretown, VT; and two nephews, Ben Brown of Framingham and George Nawn of Springfield.

New director leads cable studio into government something that interests them," Rhind noted.

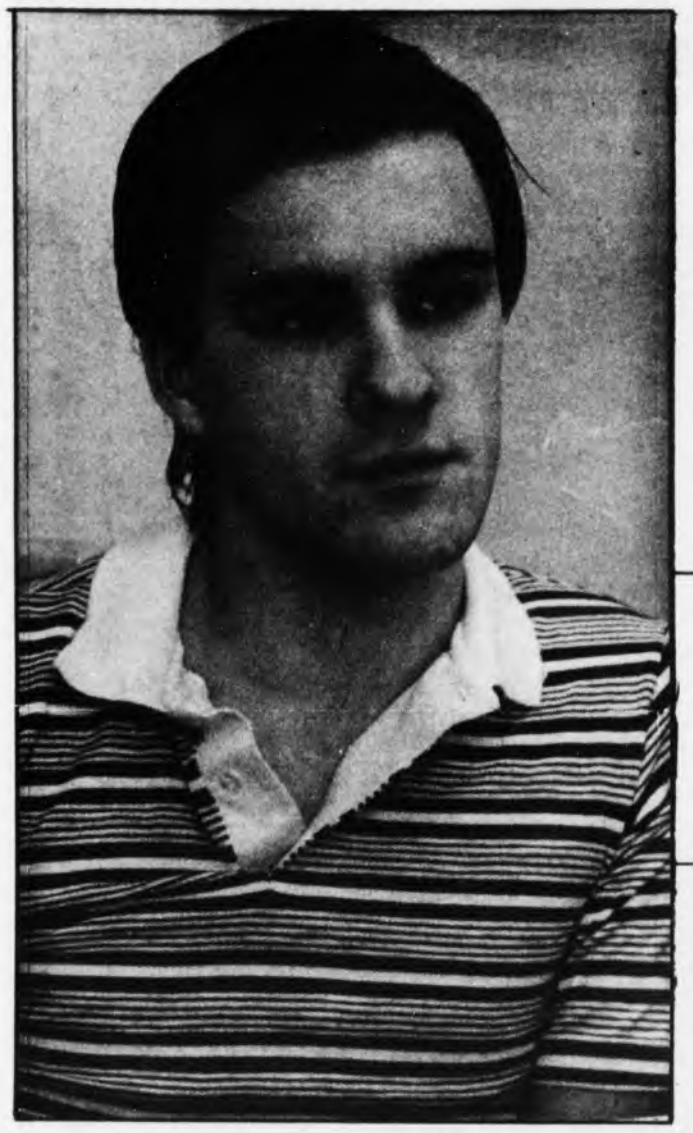
Rhind, who is a part-time 20-hour paid employee of American Cablesystems, said there are about 14 "hardcore" volunteers at the studio. They are the people who film, edit, direct and produce the local programming seen on channel 3.



Jeffrey A. Rhind

The studio's youngest volunteer is 15, Rhind said. A mix of all ages work each week producing the series "You are the Light of the World." This is a non denominational Christian program designed by Cohasset High School teacher Ginny Burbank. She originally figured the program would attract shut-ins and elderly persons unable to attend church services. It has evolved into one of the most popular shows on American Cablesystems, Rhind explained.

"They've done over 60 shows in the past year," he noted. "And now it is being shown in Quincy, Milton, Randolph, Marshfield, Brockton and Braintree." Director of the weekly series is CHS student Damien Wolfe.

Another popular and long-running show is Focus, a show telecast live each Thursday night. Produced by Helen Mallers, the show invites speakers on topics and issues of concern to the community. It is a talk-show format and has featured professional experts on subjects ranging from abortion, drug abuse, sex education, and women in the church. Rhind recalled one controversial and popular topic was "Should Prostitution be Legalized?" and said a show on Aids will be featured in February.

Regional Requests has been aired from the Cohasset studio longer than any other show. It is a live call-in music video show which maintains a high level of popularity with the local teens. It was one of the first Cohasset-produced shows to be shown regionally to other American Cablesystems franchises.

Although no date has been scheduled for its first showing, there will be another Cohasset-originated show airing soon. After Hours, produced by Michael Greiner and Allan Mackey, will be a comedy-variety show featuring Boston comedian George McDonald as host. It will be video-taped at the Vogue in Hull because of the lighting and audio system available there. Live bands will perform, along with McDonald and other performers.

Friday nights from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. the Cohasset studio produces cable radio WACR. Requests are called in for top 40 songs which are then taped for broadcast the following week.

In addition to the regular weekly programming, the Cohasset studio tapes several of the high school softball, football, basketball and hockey games. Little League, gymnastics, and other community sports are part of the studio's programming.

workshop, and do a program yourself, Rhind said, explaining the concept of community programming. Because his time is sparse, Rhind is available for training workshops, but is in need of more volunteer camera operators, producers and directors.

"I have all the shows I want," he added. "I need people to film government meetings and special events. Although I've never personally heard any complaints, I could use volunteers to help out with meeting coverage - the stuff, frankly, that no one else will tape. I can't force anyone to do it, but if there is a demand for filming the meetings, there should be someone in the community willing to do it."

After Rhind completed a workshop in 1984, he volunteered at the studio. He was named chief programmer - "Ronan's right hand man" as Rhind explained. He was appointed program coordinator in August.

Although his position is part-time, Rhind has supervised the taping of the weekly shows, plus a variety of special community events. "Pirates of Penzance" received acclaim from residents and students at CHS where the performance was filmed. The annual Cohasset Rotary Roadrace is an annual event on cable. "We're always asked to show the roadrace ten times after we film that," Rhind said, noting that family members love to see parents and children on television. That is why school graduations and pageants are an important and popular feature of community cable television.

When asked about the potential of Cohasset cable television, Rhind answered, "I just want to see it grow where we have as many volunteers in the community as possible. I'd like to see seven days of non stop community programs. You can't grow more than that.

"Community programming is quality programming. We are providing quality, creative, entertaining, informational and education programs for Cohasset. We have a good balance of shows now. I'd just like to see more."

Area communities await state water-sewer grant funds

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Officials in four South Shore communities this week expressed hope that recently-completed or ongoing water and sewer projects will be eligible for funds from a $425 million bond issue approved by the legislature earlier this month.

The bond issue will substitute state for federal money after cutbacks in federal water and sewer grant programs.

The funds are available to upgrade or create sewage and septic systems for adequate protection of groundwater. Money is also available for water treatment and distribution systems.

Projects in the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate may be eligible for sewer funds, while two major water projects in Pembroke may also be eligible for reimbursement under the state grant program.

The officials said they won't be able to specify which local projects will be eligible under the new program until they receive instructions on applying for funds. Scituate public works Supt. Anthony Antoniello said applications might not be available for several months.

Federal grants for sewer improvements are to be ended in 1990 and were "intended to correct existing sewage problems with an eye toward clean water," Hingham Sewer Commission Chairman John Brandt said last week.

Grant funds have already been earmarked for the Bonnie Brier-area sewer project, which was delayed when the school committee denied permission to use land near East School for leaching beds in the project. It awaits a new location as well as a town meeting vote to accept state and federal funds and approve the town's estimated $2 million share in the project, Brandt said.

He speculated that the town may seek reimbursement if the town determines that a sewage system is needed in the Accord Pond area.

"That project is at least 10 years down the road. The town's facilities plan just calls for a close watch on the area," he said.

Cohasset is perhaps best prepared to seek funds under the new program. Three approaches were cited in the town's 1984 facilities plan: expansion of the sewer-service area, a pipeline to the Hull Wastewater Treatment Plant and "extensive on-site septic work," sewer commission Chairman Charles DeSantis said.

"Our plan is in place, and we're ready for part of the action," DeSantis said. "Cohasset should be one of the first communities to become eligible for these funds."

Construction of the Hull pipeline faces an approval vote at town meeting this year, he said. The project is eligible for 70-percent funding from the state.

About 300 Cohasset homeowners may benefit from the septic improvements proposed in the facilities plan.Cost including re-landscaping is about $9,000 per house, leaving a 30-percent share of $2,700 for homeowners.

But DeSantis proposed that the town buy bonds in the name of participating residents. Residents would then have a choice of paying cash for their share of the work or paying about $250 a year for the life of the bonds, he said.

The widespread septic improvements had been approved for funds but had received the lowest possible priority rating, DeSantis said.

"I hope this new bond issue makes projects like this eligible."

He said the town is appealing the funding designation and "should come out alright. These things take a while, however."

"There's never too much money left for every eligible project," he said.

High hopes for fitness can be a setup for failure

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Getting into shape is highly beneficial as long as it's done for the fun of it. But the pressure to measure up to an image of perfect physical fitness can doom one's efforts to failure from the start and may even result in injuries, says a local counselor.

"People who exercise and diet the way they want to have a much better chance to succeed than those who follow prescribed diet or fitness routines," said Gail Finger, M.S., of Pembroke Counseling Services in Pembroke center.

Fitness-club operators say January is the month when the largest number of people seek to get back into shape, whether they're making good on new-year resolutions or suffering from post-holiday boredom.

In an interview last week, Finger said people who are embarking on a fitness program for the first time are more likely to make their goals than those who have tried a fitness program in the past.

"Time becomes a reinforcing factor — the longer you go, the more likely you are to stick with it," she said. "Someone who's tried it before is likely to question how motivated they are to continue."

The first question people must ask themselves when considering a diet-and-fitness routine is how badly out of shape he or she really is.

"The image of a 'fit' body has changed a lot over the past 20 years. Trying to look like a perfect model in a magazine — the Cheryl Tiegs look — could be unattainable for a lot of people."

It is detrimental to both fitness and one's self-image because of the sense of failure when one realizes such a look might be impossible, Finger said.

"You have to ask what your own ideal weight and condition is, not compare yourself to the unattainable."

It can take weeks or months to make exercise a routine part of one's schedule. But once this happens, Finger says only major changes like relocation, divorce or a job change can interrupt the fitness routine.

Once you've resolved to exercise on a regular basis, it's important to stay interested by varying the routine and not to feel guilty if you slip out of the routine for a short period. These feelings will cause feelings of failure, even before you've given the routine a chance to provide its greatest benefit.

"You've got to do what's realistic. Let's say your routine is based on swimming, and it's the first nice day outside in a long time. You feel like doing a little yard work. Well, do it! Don't feel guilty because you haven't done your swimming."

The flexibility to try other types of exercise help one to feel in control of themselves. Finger indicated this control is an essential element in any attempt to change one's behavior.

The same goes for dieting, which in combination with exercise can get one shaped up in a minimum of time. She said that one who allows themselves the foods they like to eat, no matter how many calories the food contains, will be more likely to stick to a diet than one who constantly denies themselves those foods.

"The key in this is moderation. A little of the foods people like — and these types of things are usually loaded with calories and fat — can go a long way."

Denying one's favorite food will make one spend an inordinate amont of time thinking about the food and how hungry the dieter is, she explained.

"You'll eat other calories anyway, setting yourself up for guilt and failure. You're far better off eating those foods, not craving them, even if it means it will take longer to reach your goal."

Even one binge day isn't too much to worry about, she said. A repeated pattern of diet transgressions, meanwhile, should be a signal that one's expectations may be too high.

The feeling of having control over one's life is a reason why many find they can't lose weight at a diet center or by following a diet prescribed by their doctor.

"These cause people to feel inadequate, to feel that their lives are under the control of others," Finger said.

Pursiung the diet and exercise routine that is best for you is important for sticking to the diet as well as one's physical well-being. Finger agreed with the proposition that one who approaches exercise as a stress-producing task is more prone to injure themselves because they are not relaxing and enjoying the workout.

And unlike a lapse of a day or two, an injury is likely to knock you off an exercise routine for a week or more — hardly conducive to increased self-esteem.

Finger said her practice includes marriage, family, alcoholic and weight-loss counseling. She also helps people through difficult transitions, such as divorce, relocation or death in a close friend or relative. The majority of people who seek her assistance are women, she said.

She also counsels older women who are admitting that they were victims of sexual abuse as girls or young women for the first time, a trend that has increased in recent years.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

A public policy fundamentally flawed

The second installment in my three-part series on transportation, 1986 will wait a week. An item in last week's news requires timely comment.

The item is the report published in the Boston Herald and elsewhere (although as of this writing curiously not published in the Boston Globe) to the effect that two foster children removed by the Dukakis administration from a "gay" household, have probably been sexually abused in the home they were subsequently dispatched to.

As the report goes, the family selected by the Department of Social Services as better-suited than a "gay" couple to minister to children had a son just then getting out of prison after serving time for child molestation. One of my colleagues in the trucking firm I am associated with summarized the sequency of events accurately: "Unbe-bleeping-lievable!"

The first observation I wish to make is that it is an extraordinary pity that when the state promulgated the policy excluding gays from being foster parents, gay leaders commenced to behave in a way that made their exclusion seem visionary. Instead of presenting their case rationally, they metamorphosed into screamers, harassing Gov. Dukakis almost continuously both at his home and in the corridors of the State House.

In abusing a decent man who will never commit an error that justifies the violation of his private homelife, gay leaders set themselves up to be "hoist with their own petar," as Shakespeare had Hamlet put it. As it was to turn out, the sexual abuse, in a heterosexual household, of children removed in fear from a homosexual household, could have been decisive in the national discussion about the role of gays in the guidance of children.

Had Boston's gay leaders only kept their cool and appealed to the light of reason, the subsequent and highly ironic abuse of those children in a heterosexual home might well have made their case among the broad, fair-minded center of public opinion. Perhaps it will now, but the spite and the whining of those who purport to speak for the gay population have been an obfuscation on the occasion of a golden opportunity to instruct the public that pedophilia and its scarring consequences are at least as likely to occur in heterosexual households as in homosexual ones.

The second observation I wish to make concerns the fundamentally flawed way in which this Commonwealth handles the terribly troubled children being placed today in foster care. There is a great temptation, to which many critics will succumb, to put the blame on the Department of Social Services, a poorly-administered agency that probably ought to be abolished and its record of ever having existed expunged from the archives.

D.S.S. is the agency that handles our most needy, least wanted children. It is the agency that, if the present report be true, sent the children extracted on governor's orders from the gay couple into the home where a convicted pedophile prowled. It is the agency that has committed several previous well-publicized blunders, a few of which have resulted in murdered children.

But despite its faults the Department of Social Services is not the problem, public policy is; for this is what public policy is: The most deprived, needy, abused, and disturbed children are pre-selected. (If they are insufficiently deprived, needy, abused, and disturbed they never get to the jurisdiction of D.S.S.)

Once pre-selected, these children, most of whom need highly specialized attention by trained professionals, are sent to homes many of which are ill-equipped to handle normal children, let alone disturbed children. D.S.S. has found some excellent foster homes, but partly because nearly no one reading this newspaper would dream of taking in a foster child, the pool from which foster homes are selected is itself economically deprived. Given all that, is it any wonder that we read of horror stories in foster homes?

This sorry state of affairs came about, to be blunt about it, because of the liberal snobbery of the 1960's and 1970's. There used to be some pretty darn good child care institutions for children from what in mental health jargon are called "multi-problem families." These institutions, some run by the Catholic Church, some by hospitals, and some by eleemosynary foundations, provided such children with professional help, a respite when needed from their families, and in some cases a semi-permanent home. The institutions weren't perfect, but they did far better by our needy children than what our "reformers" replaced them with.

The argument of the reformers was that an institution is no place for a child, a home is the place for a child. Therefore they brought about the demise of the institutions and farmed their populations out into foster care. So it came to pass that children desperately in need of special attention were farmed out to families that were utterly untrained and unprepared for children with special needs. That is the fundamental flaw in contemporary public policy, a flaw that continues to cough up dead, mutilated, and sexually abused needy children.

That's what the snobbery of the liberals about the word "institution" gave us. It is the same snobbery that emptied the back wards of our mental hospitals onto the streets of our communities as "homeless," the only difference being that the private institutions that used to treat disturbed children were far better run than the state institutions that used to hold the mentally ill.

In the case of the mentally ill, the state, under the leadership of Gov. Dukakis and Sec. of Human Services Philip Johnston, has finally begun to rectify the problem. Gov. Dukakis has forthrightly admitted that he (along with many, many others nationwide) handled deinstitutionalization poorly. He has made a rather expensive proposal to recreate inpatient beds for severely disturbed adults.

No such "rectification" is at hand in the case of our disturbed children, however. They will continue to be farmed out to the Department of Social Services which will continue to farm them out to untrained, unprepared foster families. D.S.S. will continue to make good decisions along with some fatal ones. There will continue to be heroic foster families along with pedophilic and murderous ones.

That is a public policy which our leaders, our gay leaders, and our people ought in one voice to denounce as "unbe-bleeping-lievable."

So. Shore Hospital claims no effect from Medicare plan

A new Medicare prospective payment system, effect Oct. 1 at South Shore Hospital, as well as at other Massachusetts acute care hospitals, has had no visible effect on patient care, the hospital's chief executive officer said recently.

"The new system never was intended to reduce necessary health care services needed by Medicare patients. Instead, its purpose is to require the hospital and its professional team to deliver effective care to Medicare patients as efficiently as possible," said William Clark, president and chief executive officer of this 280-bed regional hospital, which serves residents of over 20 South Shore communities.

Dr. Philip Landry, director of quality assurance, said, "The medical staff's goal is to provide the quality health services that each patient requires, to the extent a patient needs them. Our focus is upon people and their needs, and upon being as effective as possible when serving them."

The system is based upon the concept of DRGs, or diagnosis related groups. A hospital is paid a predetermined fixed amount for treating specific illnesses, which are categorized into DRGs.

Initially the system classifies Medicare patients into 23 major diagnostic groups or medical problems. Patients then are assigned to one of 471 DRGs according to their age, whether surgery was performed, the presence of a complication and other factors.

Because patients within a particular diagnostic group are expected to use similar resources such as nursing care, lab tests, medications and X-rays, a hospital is paid the same amount for each Medicare patient in a DRG group regardless of the amount and actual cost of services provided.

"DRGs have not changed any medical services provided to a Medicare patient at this hospital. Medicare patients admitted to the hospital continue to receive all of the services and high quality care that their condition or illness requires. Our doctors continue to admit, order appropriate tests, prescribe, treat and discharge patients based entirely upon the need for care," said Bea Green, vice president of administrative services.

"While Massachusets hospitals came under the Medicare DRG prospective payment system on October 1, this and other hospitals have been under a prospective payment system on October 1, this and other hospitals have been under a prospective payment system since October, 1982, which embraced all patients, including those covered by Medicare. The quality and compassion of provided medical services haven't lessened, even though the payment system has changed," she said.

According to green, the DRG concept requires doctors, nurses, other support personnel and the total hospital to work together as a team to improve productivity, conserve resources and curb costs, without compromising the quality of medical care.

Ruth LeBlanc, the hospital's director of Social Service, is in daily touch with Medicare patients and their families. She notes, "The primary concern voiced by families of elderly patients is whether any services will be withheld or whether the patient will be discharged prematurely. That does not occur now, any more than it did when we first came under a prospective payment system more than three years ago. We have a very busy hospital and it is used heavily by people in the 20-plus communities that we serve."

To assist Medicare patients and their families who may have questions about the new system, the hospital is installing a special telephone number to receive inquiries and to provide information. The toll-free number is 1-800-551-5529. Questions will be answered from 8 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday, beginning Jan. 20.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Try some soup, muffin & cake to warm up the hearth

Being cold means nothing short of misery to my way of thinking and one way to keep warm is to bustle around the kitchen with the oven giving off a cozy warmth and tempting odors. It would seem an ideal time to try out some new recipes — perhaps something that caught your eye during the Christmas rush when some of us were trying to maintain a semblance of order by shoving things into drawers and closets out of the way. Try a new dish from the cookbook Aunt Molly gave you, or tidy up the kitchen drawer where you keep your recipes snipped from a magazine or Sunday paper. I unearthed this bespattered recipe which I haven't made for years, for I had forgotten how we all liked this

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

2 T brown sugar
1/3 c. maple-flavored syrup
4 slices canned pineapple
1 c. cake flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/8 tsp. salt
1 egg
1/2 c. sugar
2 T melted butter or oleo
1/3 c. milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Melt butter in 8" pie plate. Add syrup and stir over heat until mixture boils. Remove from heat. Cut pineapple in halves and arrange in syrup and garnish with maraschino cherries. Sift flour, salt and baking powder into a bowl. Add remaining ingredients and stir vigorously. Pour batter over fruit. Bake at 350 degrees for approximately 35 minutes. Invert on serving plate. Serve hot with whipped cream. Serves 4.

As one old Yankee said of our weather, "It's 11 months of winter and one month that's pretty damned cold." It's a time when hearty New England fare was designed to ward off the cold with hot creamy soups and chowders, filling pies and nourishing whole grain breads dripping with butter. A true old Yankee never throws anything away and would never, ever dream of discarding the bone from Sunday's baked ham, but would instead make this

SPLIT PEA SOUP

2 c. dried split peas
1 ham bone
1 large onion, chopped
2 carrots, peeled and chopped
1/4 tsp. dried thyme
1 tsp. salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1½ qts. water
1 qt. chicken stock

Place ingredients in large heavy pot. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for 1½ to 2 hours. Discard bone and garnish with fried sliced sausage.

Among the letters still waiting for an answer on my desk is one from Susan Maclagan enclosing this muffin recipe which she sends from New Brunswick: "Can leave in fridge several weeks and bake fresh every a.m. — yummy!" According to Susan these are served mornings at Lake O'Hara in the heart of the Rockies and called simply

BRAN MUFFINS

3 c. sugar (1/2 white, 1/2 brown)
1 c. shortening
3 T soda
1 T salt
2 c. each boiling water and bran
4 c. each bran flakes and buttermilk
4 eggs, beaten
5 c. flour
2 c. dates

Pour boiling water over bran and let stand. Cream shortening and sugar, add eggs, buttermilk and bran mixture. Sift flour, soda and salt. Add gradually. Add bran flakes, folding gently. Add dates. Put in fridge one day before using. Bake approximately 20 minutes at approximately 375 degrees.

Every once in a while I have to remind myself (and you), that our new readers might not be aware that this column thrives on your favorite recipes. Readers would welcome the chance to learn of your specialties, or perhaps you know someone too modest to tell of their accomplishments, but deserving of a little praise. Your comments, recipes and ideas make this column what it is and may be sent to me c/o Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051.

Exchange hosts needed for visiting German students

Students and host families are wanted from the South Shore area for a German-American Exchange program in the summer of 1986. The program includes a three week stay in Munich by American students followed by a three week visit to the greater Boston area by the German students.

The program is run by the Goethe Institute of Boston, the German Cultural Center of New England. This is the sixth year for the program.

Sutdents are chaperoned and live in homes. In Germany they tour places like the Lowenbrau brewery, Dachau and BMW plant. Side trips to castles, Berchtesgaden and Salzburg are part of the itinerary.

In America both the American and German students visit the Freedom Trail, Sturbridge Village, New York City, Plum Island and other areas of local culture and history.

"Even more important then the cultural events, young people get a chance to live in each others homes. This sharing of families often leads to lifelong friendships."

For more information, call or write the Goethe Institute, 170 Beacon Street, Boston, 262-6050. Knowledge of German is not required.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Madam Zolar & the stars strike again

"I don't understand it," I told Madam Zolar. "Mercury hasn't been retrograde, so how come everything's been so whacky?"

Madam snorted derisively. "Mercury's been aspected by Mars, Uranus and Pluto, dummy. It didn't have to be retrograde for things to go whacky. And," she added pointedly, "some of us have been more whacky than others. Cross my palm with green paper, and I'll give you advice for your readers. Heaven knows, your readers need all the advice they can get."

Reluctantly, I surrendered some legal tender, and Madam gave me the following words of wisdom for all you astrophiles out there.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): You will have many innovative and creative ideas for improving society. They will be shot down by people who insist on introducing logic into the discussion. Just another average month, Aries.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Your natural desire for serenity will be overcome by your innate greed. Deny everything and call an attorney.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 21): Under present celestial aspects, things tend to be muddled and uncertain. An ideal time for you to unload that stock on one of your more confused friends. If the friend is a Scorpio, immediately move to another country.

CANCER (June 22 - July 21): Tempers flare, situations change unexpectedly, and Bedlam reigns. If you can possibly manage it, try to stay in bed for the next month. At all costs, avoid falling meteors.

LEO (July 22 - Aug. 21): Don't be surprised if a conniving Capricorn contrives to overthrow your kingdom. There will be general rejoicing among your former subjects who considered you bombastic and overbearing, anyway.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 - Sept. 22): Your sense of order and propriety will be offended by the chaos and disorder in the world at large. This will make you very happy, as it will reinforce your secret belief that you are superior to just about everyone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): The impact of planetary confusion will hit you full-force, and you will decide to step in and impose order. Or maybe just wait it out. Or perhaps consult with other people. Or. . .

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Unlike natives of other signs, you will gain new direction and purpose for the rest of your life. You will dedicate your remaining years to tracking down and avenging yourself on a Gemini who unloaded some worthless stocks on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Great news for Sagittarians who happen to be attorneys. You will make a fortune defending Taureans who have surrendered to their innate greed. If you aren't an attorney, fake it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 20): A great month for Capricorns. Your plan to topple a Leo's kingdom will meet little resistance, and you will reign in his stead until his former subjects discover that you are even more bombastic and overbearing than he was.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19): Such fun! People will tend to be erratic, unpredictable and somewhat zany. Sort of a whole world full of Aquarians. Maybe this is the real dawning of your age.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20): A very confusing month for Pisceans. As always, you will be willing to be intimidated, coerced and harassed. You will be terribly disappointed when nobody tries to do any of the above, and you will sulk until the planets move on and someone punches you out.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Ignore any advice that is given to you by a Sun Sign astrologer who writes for a local newspaper. If you think the rest of the world is confused at present, try spending an hour with her. She thinks a Zodiac is a deranged person who steals zodes.

So. Shore Communicator awards set for Jan. 23

The First Annual "Communicator of the Year" awards are being presented at the Gazelle Restaurant Jan. 23 at 1 p.m.

The awards are being presented by John R. Graham, Inc., the Quincy-based public relations and advertising firm, in honor of its 10 anniversary.

Six persons who exemplify the highest standards of communication on the South Shore are receiving this special recognition. The recipients are:

Judge Albert Kramer of the Quincy District Court for his outstanding contributions in calling public attention to the problem of drunk driving.

Esther Sanger for making people aware of the plight of the hungry and homeless.

Nat Shulman of Best Chevrolet for his leadership in gaining passage for the Massachusetts seat belt law.

Jack Conway of the Jack Conway Company for his efforts in creating an identity for the entire South Shore Area.

John Spence, President of the Rockland Trust Company, for dealing honestly and forthrightly with the media and the public when his bank was faced with a crisis.

State Sen. William Golden of Weymouth for accessing the community to key public issues.

WBZ-TV 4's news anchorman, Jack Williams, is the guest speaker. He is being honored on behalf of his efforts to find permanent families for older and special needs children. Jack will be presented an award for hosting and producing the "Wednesday's Child" series.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

The merchandising of mail-order macho

If corporate mergers and buyouts continue at the present rate, there will soon be one gigantic holding company, called American Products, Inc. Everything from Amtrak to the Bruins will be subsidiaries.

I'm convinced the same conglomeration is also happening with the address lists of mail order catalogues. It's only a matter of time before every catalogue has everbody's address.

That's why I was fascinated with a Christmas catalogue given to me by a friend. It's so foreign to my lifestyle that if I ordered anything from it, it would surely be the first link to a whole new world of consumer goods.

This particular offering is from the Parellex Corporation, whose logo contains the crosshatching of a rifle sight. On its cover it says, "A unique selection of unusual, qualify gift items for enjoying the great outdoors." The cover photo looks like Rambo emptied his pockets under a Christmas tree. Parellex is obviously directed to outdoorsmen for which the Maine hunting boot has lost is magic.

Much of the book is clothing, some of it undistinguishable from other outdoors catalogues, though the colors tend to camouflage and "SWAT black."

The rest contains weapons or enhancements for weapons, or other gadgets helpful if guerilla action in Norwell ever becomes necessary.

Parellex's first offering is the Super Snooper. For $79.95 this portable listening device enables the owner to hear a whisper at 100 yards or a car door shutting five blocks away.

On the same page is a stock for your AR-7 (a .22 rifle, I'm told, which looks like a machine gun). A variety of tear gas sprays follow. The pocket model fires fifty one-second blasts over eight feet. The police model fires four times that volume over eighteen feet.

For $30 you may purchase combat fatigues in boys' sizes.

"Who needs it?" asks Parellex of its Executive Pen Set at $39.95. Inside the pen is a three-sided, 2 1/2" blade. They answer by saying, "International travelers, businessmen, and government representatives visiting unstable countries." And high school teachers? Nah.

A bullet proof vest for $299.95 is on the same page, as is an ankle hoister "just like Popeye Doyle's" in 'The French Connection."

So it goes: handcuffs, pistol-grip crossbows, pellet guns designed to look like .357 Magnums, and my favorite sartorical item, a tee-shirt illustrated with a diagram showing how to field-strip an M-16.

Like Neiman-Marcus, Parellex also features a high-priced specialty item which few will purchase, but which many will covet, in this case a Safari to Botswana and South Africa.

They also have accessories for something called "The Game." As I read it, playing "The Game" requires several people, all dressed in their best combat gear, taking to the woods to fire pellets of red paint at each other, the adult version of "Bang, bang, you're dead."

"Paint Wars" Combat rifles, as they call them, are $175. Pistols are $150. Protective goggles are $14.95.

Lest one concludes that Parellex consumers have no intellectual interests, I must mention their selection of books and videos. The videos are mostly about hunting; except for "Deadly Weapon," which covers everything "from a comparison of handgun cartridges to how to blow a vehicle with dynamite. A must see for future resistance fighters." $49.95.

Most of the books are similarly technical, with special attention to booby traps, exotic weapons and "black medicine," a series of books on anatomy revealing the body's most vulnerable areas.

For relaxation there are several books on the theory and practice of revenge: "Get Even," Get Even II" and "How to Get Anything on Anybody." They tell "how to get even whether wronged by an enemy, victimized by a credit card company, or just ripped off by any number of obnoxious individuals or menacing organizations. For entertainment purposes only."

A similar book, "Mad as Hell," gives "over 120 peevish pranks that will reduce your mark to a whimpering mass of paranoia."

I haven't ordered anything yet. But knowing my tendency to procrastinate, by the time we're invaded and I really need a pistol-grip crossbow, Parellex will be sold out to folks who had the foresight to stock up during the holidays.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church of Scituate.)

MUSINGS — By John H. Cutler

☐ Vincent Lombardi never said it: "Winning isn't everything . . . it's the only thing."

☐ John Stewart Mill found the classic confusion in the American thought process to be between liberty and license.

☐ A student's excuse: I wasn't playing hooky, teacher, I was just checking out an alternative lifestyle.

☐ The U.S. has had some crazy winter weather recently. In the past eight years, government meteorologists say three winters have been much colder than normal and three have been much warmer—a phenomenon not likely to recur for 1,000 years.

☐ Jimmy Cannon speaking: "Sports is the toy department of life."

☐ It has been estimated that as many as 350,000 of the nation's 1.2 million underground gas station storage tanks may leak within two years. A small leak of only 1½ cups per hour can contaminate as much as a million gallons of ground water in one day.

☐ A Spanish proverb: An ounce of mother is worth a ton of priest.

☐ The most poisonous animal alive, according to scientists, is the arrow-poison frog. These insect-eating frogs live in the rain forests of Central and South America. As its name suggests, the frogs' poison is carefully spread by hunting Indians on their arrow tips.

☐ When Halley's Comet next returns in March 1986, it will be intercepted by a spacecraft that will for the first time, photograph the comet's nucleus.

☐ Mrs. O.H.P. Belmont, an early suffragette, became so absorbed in her fight for equal rights for women that when an associate became discouraged with the uphill battle, she told her: "Call on God, my dear. She will help you."

☐ While President, Grant was arrested for speeding in his horse carriage.

☐ John Randolph once said to a waitress, "If this is coffee, bring me tea; and if it's tea, bring me coffee."

"... And then the little engine said
'I think I can. I think I can. I think I can.'"

The season isn't over yet, but you can start to count the winners.

Because no matter what happens down in New Orleans this Sunday, we've all won a lot this super season. Our kids most of all.

They've seen for themselves that this invisible force called teamwork isn't just another adult-perpetrated fantasy. And that excellence isn't built on superstars or super-hype, but on hard work and determination.

There'll be a lot of kids watching the Super Bowl on Sunday, some young in years, others in spirit. And in this neck of the woods you'll find very few of them afraid of bears. Because you've made believers of us, Patriots.

We think you can. We think you can.

Photography exhibit

Entry dates for the South Shore Art Center's All New England Juried Photography Exhibit "Images" are Friday, Jan. 31 and Saturday, Feb. 1.

Photographers are to deliver their works of art to the Center at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset Friday between noon and 4 p.m. and Saturday between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The exhibit dates are February 4 through February 22 with an opening reception on Friday, February 7 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Jurying the show are Peter Laytin, associate professor of communications media/photography at Fitchburg College; Leslie Starobin, photography instructor at Framingham College; and George Peet, co-author with Gabrielle Keller of The Courthouse of the Commonwealth. One hundred dollar-awards will be given for best black and white and best color. In addition, awards will be given for color or black and white by the Brockton Arts Lottery Council, Weymouth Arts Lottery Council, Hanover Arts Lottery Council and Plymouth Arts Lottery Council (pending approval by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council).

All work entered into the exhibit must be securely framed and ready for hanging. A $6 entry fee per piece will be charged. Works not accepted must be picked up Saturday, February 8 between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

New England photographers are invited to call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548 for further information on this juried exhibit.

Winter youth courses

Several children's courses are on the schedule for the South Shore Art Center's winter semester.

A new semester begins January 20 at the Center at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. The full schedule includes courses for adults in painting, drawing, design, photography and portraiture. Advanced registration is required for all classes and workshops at the Center.

Courses for young artists include Susan Rodgerson's Junior High Workshop for ages 12-14 meeting Fridays from 3:30 to 5:50 p.m., starting January 24. This class will explore various techniques three-dimensionally using clay as well as offer students a chance to work in acrylics on canvas.

Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman will teach a painting and drawing course for kids ages six to eight, Tuesdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m., beginning January 21. Her course will concentrate on design, composition and color using craypas, tempera and watercolors. Students will learn basic drawing and painting skills.

A course for older students ages nine to twelve will be taught by Serena Brundige on Thursdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. beginning January 23. This course will include mirror drawing, basics of landscape and use of acrylic paints.

Some of the adult's classes may be taken by high school students and offer these students an opportunity to refine their artistic skills.

Students may inquire about these courses by calling the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

Professional photography

Professor of art at Bridgewater State College and a professional photographer John Droege comes to the South Shore Art Center to teach a series of photography courses.

The Center at 103 Ripley Road is offering his courses on the winter schedule. Advanced registration is required for all winter semester courses; the semester begins January 20.

Droege will teach both beginning and intermediate darkroom. Beginning Darkroom will meet Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning January 21 and will include step-by-step instruction in basic darkroom skills beginning with how the camera works.

Students will learn how to develop black and white film, how to enlarge and print, burning and dodging techniques and how to mount and matt finished work. The instructor will include the aesthetics and composition of a picture in his instruction.

The Intermediate Darkroom course will meet Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning January 23.

This course will concentrate on the more advanced darkroom techniques with emphasis on methods of creating finer prints and improving compositions. Use of the Center darkroom is included in the class fee.

Droege brings a list of impressive photography credentials to the South Shore Art Center. A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, Droege has studied color photography at Harvard University under Marie Cosindas doing mountain photography in this country; with Philip Evans, one of Britain's leading landscape photographers; and with Elliot Porter, a prominent landscape photographers.

Droege most recently had a one-person exhibit of his work in the South Shore Art Center's invitational gallery.

For further information on these courses or others being offered during the winter semester, call the Center at 383-9548.

Young artists workshop

A "How-to-Create" workshop for young artists ages seven to eleven will begin at the South Shore Art Center on January 27.

The workshop will meet in the Center's classroom at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset on Wednesdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Advanced registration is required for the course.

Taught by Gil Coyle, the class begins with two short art films designed to stimulate children for the art activity which will follow. Students will work with clay, collage, monoprint, music making and box construction.

Coyle brings to the workshop her background as a potter, printmaker and mixed media artist. She has a B.A. in art and education and most recently was a consultant at the Media Center for Children in New York.

For further information on this course or others at the South Shore Art Center, call 383-9548.

Students share the grief of space shuttle disaster

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

It was an image frozen in the minds of most adults. But the impact of Tuesday's tragedy probably hit hardest in classrooms across the country.

Students in Cohasset had discussed the historic flight of the New Hampshire teacher into outer space. The explosion that shattered national leaders was felt in the hearts of young students.

As first grade teacher Faith Bowker noted, "Christa McAuliffe was a hero to my students. We talked about her and what she planned to do. It's going to be hard for them. I am still in a state of disbelief myself."

The effects of Tuesday morning's catastrophe resounded within Cohasset High School as news of the tragedy spread. Science Department Chairman Sam Erbe said the students were well aware of the shuttle and the teacher about to take flight into space.

"I spent the first half of my last class period answering their questions. They wanted to know how something like this could happen. They wanted to know if the teacher had died," he said that afternoon.

Longtime sixth grade teacher Joseph Becker said his students reacted quietly, thoughtfully to the incident. By the time school ended, it was not sure if the six astronauts had died in the explosion.

"We talked a little about the possibility of their death," Becker said. "But they really wanted to go home and watch this at home. I think by the time they come back to school Wednesday, they will have a lot of questions."

Becker, an elementary science teacher at Deer Hill for the past 18 years, is keenly interested in space exploration and the shuttle. The students in his class had talked about this shuttle, and a picture of McAuliffe remains attached to the wall of the room.

"We had planned to follow her class from space this week," he added. Although the students' interest in space voyages seemed to wane in recent years, McAuliffe's participation excited the students, he noticed.

"They were interested in this flight," Becker said. "The fact that she would be conducting lessons from space made it more interesting for them. She was the one who brought about a lot of the interest in this flight."

The children were not watching the takeoff Tuesday morning. Becker said the students had been prepared for the two earlier scheduled lift-offs, and were anticipating the possibility of a third cancellation.

Librarian Marge Murphy informed Becker of the probable tragedy and his class was allowed to view the news from the monitor in the library. Nothing definite was stated during the afternoon broadcasts, and the children left school unsure whether the astronauts had survived the incident.

"Earlier we had talked about the astronauts, the goals of this flight, so they were aware. They were very concerned and very interested in getting home to find out what actually occurred," Becker said.

Warning: Complete census completely!

Although half the town's population has returned the local census forms, residents are being advised to fill it out completely.

According to the Secretary of State's office, if the forms are returned to the local town clerk's office incomplete, the resident could be prosecuted. It is a misdemeanor not to complete the census, according to David Sullivan, and violators could be prosecuted by the District Attorney's office.

But unless a resident fails to return the census, his name will not be stricken from the voter records. The only way a resident will be taken from the town's voter list is if he fails to send the census back to the local town clerk's office.

Town Clerk Frances Marks said the office had received about half the census forms sent earlier this month. The office staff has not begun to look through the forms to see if they had been completed.

The controversy surrounding the 1986 census regards state-required questions pertaining to race and primary langauge. This information is included in the 1986 census only, and according to the state will be used to revise legislative districts taking into account fair representation for minorities.

Although Sullivan said the state has received "a fair amount of unwillingness" to complete the questions, Cohasset Town Clerk Marks said she has heard no complaints. "I haven't looked through the census to see if everyone complied, but no one has called me and complained," she said this week.

Vacationing? Don't bother with Borneo

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

Are you looking for an exciting place to spend your next vacation? Somewhere where you can enjoy a beautiful climate and experience a wide variety of cultural activities? Don't go to Borneo.

Cohasset resident, Jeff Bettinger, a chemical engineer with Stone and Webster, spent five and a half months there monitoring the development of an ammonia and urea plant (otherwise known as fertilizer).

Bettinger, who left June 26 and returned December 7, called it, "a summer I'll never forget. I suffered through a winter commute to Boston. I wanted to enjoy Cohasset in the summer."

Instead Bettinger found himself in the city of Bintullo in the Malaysian portion of the Island of Borneo near Southeast Asia.

"I had no idea what it would be like. It was a jungle, a tropical rain forest. The streets were paved for maybe ten miles out of town.

"During the monsoon season it rained every day. There were some of the heaviest rains I've ever seen in my life."

Of course they were also the loudest as they pounded on the sheet metal house the company provided for him.

The house was one of sixty identical houses in a self-contained compound built for expatriates working in the fertilizer plant and a nearby gas plant. The Field of candidates getting more crowded

The April 5 election is shaping up to be one of the more intriguing in many years.

The field of candidates in the race for two seats on the Board of Selectmen is becoming crowded and interesting as former Fire Chief Martin Dooley will likely compete for a seat on the Board of Selectmen against his former boss, Selectman Cliff Mitman.

Dooley, who prior to leaving his fire department post in December hinted that he would someday run for elected office, took out nomination papers for the three-year term.

Incumbent Mitman took out papers in the Town Clerk's office Monday night prior to the selectmen's meeting. Up until this week, he had been undecided whether to run for re-election.

Democrats to caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus on Saturday, Feb. 8 at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1986 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

The Convention will be held in Springfield May 17.

Cohasset will be electing five delegates and two alternates to send to the Convention.

Chairman Donna J. McGee will call the caucus at Cohasset Town Hall. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of December 30, 1985. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas.

Slate-making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus, although donations may be solicited.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic State Committee, 11 Beacon Street, Suite 426, Boston, MA 02108 no later than February 10, 1986.

Tuesday's tragedy is felt by Cohasset students

"This is so tragic for the students and for me," he added, noting he had closely followed the successes of the U.S. space mission. Had he not experienced a heart attack two years ago, Becker said he would have likely applied for a position on that shuttle.

High school teacher Erbe agreed the country's space program has been an intriguing learning experience for him and his students. "If I didn't wear glasses, and if I were younger, I definitely would have applied for the shuttle," he said Tuesday afternoon.

He has closely followed the space program, but was especially interested in this flight. "Christa added a new dimension to it," he said. "This was one of our profession going up there. To think that her family was there - I know when I heard about it, I was shocked."

The department chairman said he was sitting in his office listening to the broadcast of the liftoff on a small radio. When the joy of the launch turned quickly into tragedy, he walked to the audio-visual room and tuned in the television. Students who somehow heard the news also arrived in the room and watched silently to the continual news announcements.

"I hadn't done anything special about this shuttle flight," Erbe said. "I mentioned to my class this morning that the shuttle was going up. I often mention current events as they relate to science in my classes. I know Joe Neundorfer also talked about the launch during his classes that morning."

Later that day, Erbe spent much of his time explaining the inherent and unknown dangers of space exploration. "It's an extremely complicated process. It can't be done without computers. And there's a great amount of fuel necessary to put those projectiles into space. As the processes become more complicated, the risks increase, I told my students. There is no way we can cut down to a 100 percent the possibility there will be no accidents," he said, adding that some of the students seemed very upset by the news of the astronauts' probable death.

"When I heard about it, I thought, 'that could have been me.' Still knowing that, it didn't change my mind. I still would like to go on a shuttle," Erbe added.

For the young students at Osgood, Tuesday was a time of confusion and mixed reactions. As first grade instructor Bowker noted, "with children this young, their reaction may not come until a day later." Bowker anticipated that the children would have many questions Wednesday after discussing the events with their parents the previous day.

"The children were getting ready for lunch and I told them there had been an accident," she explained. "I did not tell them the astronauts had died, because no one really knew that for sure then.

They immediately questioned their teacher, "did Christa McAuliffe die?" Bowker said they had been talking about the New Hampshire teacher and realized the importance of this first citizen allowed to participate in the NASA program.

"She was quite a hero to my students," Bowker said. "In fact, Mrs. Pope said there is a new book about her at the Pratt library. This was going to be a big day for us - to watch her go into space. We were going to follow her lessons from space later this week.

"I told the children that there had been an accident and when they go home, their parents would be watching the news on the television. I told them their mothers would be sad. And when they go home, all the televisions stations would be telling them about the accident. I gave them a feeling of what to expect. The immediate reaction from one little boy was, 'does this mean the Disney Channel will be off today?' That's a very natural reaction of a young child. They're not experienced enough to feel the impact of what they feel. But tomorrow they will, and they'll want to talk about it."

Bowker said McAuliffe was a hero to the students there. "She was a person the children could identify with," she noted.

Her own reaction to Tuesday's tragedy was "complete disbelief. When I asked someone if the shuttle had been launched, they said the word, 'exploded.' I thought that couldn't be the word I heard, and I grabbed a TV. We were all stunned. I couldn't believe it."

This week will be an opportunity for parents and teachers to talk openly with the youngsters about their feelings, Bowker said. "It's important to allow them to talk now, to express themselves. There'll be a great need now to talk, to discuss how Christa was a daughter, parent and teacher. The youngsters have to air their feelings about this. It's so shocking, really."

houses were fully equipped with western appliances and the compound also boasted a swimming pool, tennis courts, and a canteen.

They were able to get all the food supplies they needed, said Bettinger, who did all the cooking.

"I lost thirty pounds while I was there, but it wasn't my cooking. The guy I was with gained five," he said.

"Because there was so little to do, I swam a mile every day," he added.

They also entertained themselves by going to the beach.

"No one else seemed to go there," he said. "Actually, the water was so warm it was difficult to get refreshed."

They listened to the shortwave radio.

"We heard 'Radio Moscow' and 'Voice of America,'" Bettinger recalled.

And finally, the last month, they broke down and bought a television set.

"There was one hour of English programming a night. They were shows like 'Riptide.' We were desperate," he laughed.

Bettinger did a lot of cooking. "I traded recipes with the women in camp," he said. "I taught them how to make pizza."

One of the highlights of the trip was Thanksgiving dinner.

"We had seventeen people from eleven different countries over for Thanksgiving dinner. I spent the whole day cooking. We ordered turkeys and carrots and potatoes and beans. We even got pumpkin pie filling."

"At five fifteen, fifteen minutes before the guests were supposed to arrive, the dinner wasn't ready and I still hadn't taken a shower. I said the heck with it and took a shower anyway. Everything turned out great. We explained everything and told them what Thanksgiving was all about," he stated. "There was a tremendous amount of pride in doing that."

Bettinger also learned how to cook some native dishes which are a lot like Chinese, but he didn't have much contact with the locals.

"The people were extremely nice," he said. "They were friendly but distant. As a culture, they tended to be more subdued.

"They were pretty shocked by me and my colleague. We were both a little crazy and outgoing. We were some of the first Americans they'd met. They probably think we're all crazy.

"We were wealthy compared to them, but my colleague and I got the impression they didn't want what we had," he said.

Although the natives are adopting certain aspects of western civilization, they are still living much the same way they have for thousands of years.

"One day I was going down the street and I saw people carrying a pole. They had a wild boar hanging from it," Bettinger recalled.

Although the new plants provide housing for their employees, many of the people still live in long houses in the jungle. The houses which Bettinger discussed in the Mariner, are 500 yards long, house an entire village and are accessible only by water. They are built on stilts and have very few modern amenities.

"They will have a generator hooked up and only use it to operate a fan. They won't even have lights," he said.

What impressed Bettinger most were the people who came from this background.

"One secretary, in order to go to her parent's home, had to take 2 and a half days, fly a plane, drive a car and then take a boat up the river. They had no electricity and no running water. Yet she was a very cosmopolitan girl, he stated.

Jeff Bettinger

Bettinger also described an attorney who had grown up in the jungle.

"I met his parents," he said. "His father has holes in his ears to put leopard teeth in during ceremonies, and his mother has tatoos. He is a lawyer in New York and Chicago but when he goes home he doesn't wear a shirt."

Most of these people were first introduced to English through the American Peace Corps and through missionaries. Now they are being educated in American universities.

"This is the first generation that is coming from the jungle," Bettinger explained. "In a way it is sad to see a way of life ending. But it will be generations before it is complete."

Bettinger was more than happy to return to Cohasset. As president of the Watershed Protection Committee, he kept up on events through a telex machine.

"I expect to see a lot of 'Yes' votes in April for the bylaws protecting the water supply," he said.

He was also able to keep up with Doonesbury.

"My wife sent me the Mariner, so that is one thing I didn't miss," he noted.

Bettinger said he didn't dislike his experience.

"There are certain aspects I'll remember the rest of my life," he said. "You just adapt wherever you go.

"But," he added, "I was lonely and I missed my wife."

Former fire chief to challenge ex-boss

Road, has also taken out nomination papers for a three-year seat on the Board of Selectmen.

Frank England, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, said this week he was still undecided whether to run for re-election.

Vito Conte of 18 Hillside Drive, had already returned one sheet of names to the Town Clerk's office. He took out nomination papers for a position on the Board of Selectmen two weeks ago.

Martha Gjesteby of 81 Old Pasture Road has taken out papers for the selectmen's board, along with David Spencer Duncombe, 2 Sheldon Road, and John K. McNabb Jr. of 53 Pond Street.

There are two more names to be added to the list of candidates vying for two seats on the school committee.

Diana Kornet, who had said she would seek re-election to the school board, has taken out nomination papers for the post. Incumbent Jack Langmaid has not yet decided whether to seek re-election.

C. Christopher Ford, 145 Border Street, has taken nomination papers for the school committee. He will join prospective school committee candidates James Leonard, 245 South Main Street and Dane Hahn, 44 Black Rock Road.

There are two three-year terms available on the school committee.

Five-year planning board incumbent Dan Cotton will have some competition this April. Two residents this week obtained nomination papers for the planning board position.

Robert Davenport, 135 Sohier Street, has taken out nomination papers for the seat. Mark Trask, 55 Bancroft Road, also obtained nomination papers for that seat on the planning board. He has already submitted one sheet of names to the town clerk's office.

Although incumbent Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt announced plans not to seek re-election, there may be competition for his successor. Ronald Goodwin, 196 Pond Street, obtained nomination papers for a seat on the water commission. This week, Robert Jackson, 9 Ash Street, took out papers for that seat on the commission.

In the race for library trustee, Cynthia Johnson Whealler, 619 Jerusalem Road, obtained nomination papers for a three-year term. There are three, three-year seats available on the library board of trustees.

Anne C. Bowdoin, who obtained papers last week for the position of library trustee, has withdrawn from the race. Incumbent Michelle A. Buckley has taken out papers for re-election to that board.

The three library board positions are currently held by Buckley, Barbara Power, and Lucia Wood.

Complete local census needed . . .

The additional information is required under Chapter 165 of the Acts of 1985 "primarily to assist the State legislature in protecting the rights of minority citizens not to be discriminated against when State Legislative districts are redrawn." The census also includes the statement, "Your cooperation in answering these additional legally required questions will be greatly appreciated."

Town Clerk Marks said she had not received any complaints about the ethnic questions included in this year's form. She has yet to read the returned forms which her staff will later transcribe by hand into a tabulated total. "I don't know if people here objected to the ethnic questions or not. I don't know yet if they filled out that section," she stated.

Marks said she asked the state Elections Commission what she should do if a form is returned incomplete. "They told me to do what I would do if I had a question on any other census. I should probably give the resident a call and ask the questions over the phone," she said.

Sullivan confirmed that advice. "I have been telling the town clerks to follow up on an incomplete form by a telephone call or perhaps a visit to the house. Depending on the size of the community, the town clerk may know the person and could answer the question himself," he added.

"I expect the local clerks will be running into some resistance," he noted, "but we must do the best to see that everyone complies with the law."

Town Clerks Marks noted that this annual local census or "street listing" provides important demographic information for local planning purposes.

Her most immediate dilemma is the amount of forms returned through the mail because of the number of new homeowners in the past year. When she receives an unanswered form back to the office, she will return it to the same address with directions it be forwarded to the current household.

Once the forms are returned, the office staff computes the totals from each question on a street-by-street method. The final total counts are forwarded to the state on a special form.

According to the state, the Senate and House districts will be redrawn by a special legislative committee according to population shifts. The new legislative districts will be in place for the 1988 elections.

Elections Commission representative Sullivan noted, "voters will not be dropped from the voter's list if they fail to complete the census. But all residents have a legal obligation to complete it.

"It is a misdemeanor not to complete the census form. The odds are not great that the state will prosecute. But failure to comply with the law is punishable. Presumably, the District Attorney could ask the courts to prosecute anyone who fails to complete the census."

Town Clerk Marks requested that all those who have not returned the forms, should forward them to her office as soon as possible.

Reclassification study

Selectmen approved signing a contract for $17,470 with Caleb Marsh Associates of Hingham to begin a reclassification study of the town's nonunion employee positions.

Upon the recommendation of the Personnel Committee, selctmen approved the expenditure despite receiving two lower bids. Personnel Committee Chairman Jan Daggett told selectmen that after interviewing five contract bidders, the commmittee was unanimous in its recommendation. Marsh Associates received "glowing reports" from town officials where they have completed similar reclassification studies. Caleb Marsh promised the town a more comprehensive study than the other bidders, and he will begin the task immediately, Daggett said.

With the addition of a $6800 state grant, the total cost of the Marsh study will be lowered, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew noted. Selectmen added that the state funds will be used to train department heads in the new evaluation system, and to implement an employee training manual.

Voters at Town Meeting in December appropriated $18,000 for the reclassification study. Selectmen had proposed the study, saying a unilateral standard was needed to classify each of the town's 55 full and part-time nonunion employees.

The study will be completed in several phases, according to Daggett. In order to implement the reclassification, a vote must be taken on the study's results by July 1. She said at least a portion of the study should be prepared by April Town Meeting. Otherwise the town could hold a special Town Meeting before the July 1 deadline.

Independence building sale

At their next meeting, selectmen will announce acceptance of a bid for the sale of the Independence Building on Elm Street. The board received six bids for the town's surplus property.

The bids which were opened Monday night include: $56,000 from the Lilac House Antiques; $70,100 from Thomas Chamberlain of King Street; $75,000 from Barbara Meehan of Jerusalem Road; $80,500 from Robert Martin of South Main Street; $86,500 from Atlantic Marine; and $86,579.86 from Noel Collins of West Springfield.

Public skating

There is public skating throughout the week at the Cohasset Winter Gardens. The sessions are held each Monday through Friday from noon to 2 p.m.; Friday from 8 to 10 p.m. and Saturday from 8 to 10 p.m.

CHS principal named assistant school superintendent

In a 5-0 vote last Wednesday, the School Committee appointed CHS Richard Streeter to succeed Stephen Hart as Assistant Superintendent of Schools. Hart was appointed two weeks ago to replace retiring Superintendnt Eugene Crowell.

The unannounced appointment of Hart sparked a controversy between the Cohasset Teachers' Association, parents, and the school committee.

George Fortin, president of the CTA, asked the committee why there had not been a public discussion on Hart's appointment. The item did not appear on the agenda of the last meeting.

The school committee defended their actions calling the appointment a "promotion within the system and not a vacancy."

Fortin said the teachers all felt very good about Hart, but, "it was unfortunate it was done this way."

Jack Langmaid, who chaired the last meeting, told Fortin, "if there is anyone to blame, it is my fault. We should not have voted on it. I have to apologize. We were too close to the forest to see the trees.

Diana Kornet also defended the move, saying they acted without hesitation. "We are so convinced of his extremely fine qualifications," she said.

The board indicated they had been preparing for this move since Crowell first made his retirement plans known to them last spring.

"We thought in terms of long-range planning. It was not a quick decision," Kornet added.

In a vote of reaffirmation, the committee again voted Hart in unanimously.

Fortin reiterated the teachers' support of Hart, however, he expressed disappointment in the committee's method.

"This is the first time you have done something that has made us say 'What are they doing?' " he stated.

Fortin presented the committee with the following list of questions:

1. Do you have a policy for hiring of administrators in this system? If yes, is it in writing and what is it?

2. What are the differences and the similarities in the hiring policies and practices for teachers and administrators?

3. Have the decisions already been made on who will fill the vacancies created down the line?

4. How does a teacher in this system aspire to administrative positions in Cohasset? What incentives are offered here?

5. How can you be sure that you have the best person for the job if you have not looked?

6. What has happened to the spirit of cooperation between the school committee, administration and teachers?

7. Given the tendency of this town to save money by combining jobs, and the very specific requirements for a director of Special Education, who will be the director of Special Education and has this been a consideration in your planning?

Hart addressed the questions and explained the change in roles of the superintendent and assistant superintendent.

Hart suggested that some of the duties be modified.

"I will still be in charge of the special needs program and he (Streeter) will assume some of the duties now done by Mr. Crowell," he said.

The committee expressed support of Streeter's appointment.

"We are delighted," said Dr. Nedrow.

Hart outlined the three-phase process they would be following to hire a new high school principal.

Advertisements will be placed in local and non-local papers.

Four screening committees will review applicants, comprised of an administrator, a teacher, a student, a parent and a department chair.

Central administrators will review the applicants and then they will again be screened.

The final three applicants will be interviewed in an open meeting and will present their view and philosophy of education.

Hart asssured Fortin that when a vacancy does occur, "It will involve many people."

School Committee reviews elementary counselor

By Linda Dagley

The first School Committee budget discussion last week centered around the need for a full-time counselor at the Osgood and Deerhill Schools.

Supporting a request for a $30,000 high school health instructor, Michael Gill presented an outline for an elementary school counselor, defining the need as a person who "would work as a counselor for individual children and also with small groups, teachers and parents."

According to Osgood Principal, Jack Creamer, "many children come to school every day from homes where their parents work, there is divorce and there are crises and concerns which engender adjustment problems. I think the school can provide a nurturing setting. No one is dealing with these issues in a direct form. We need someone trained in the area of social work."

School committee chairman, Dr. Joseph Nedrow called the request a dilemma saying, "we have made a conscious decision to keep classroom size small. There is always a tradeoff."

Gill said that he understood the dilemma, but asked the board to consider their request.

"Kids with learning problems inhibit learning even in a small classroom," he said.

Gill's position was supported by the residents who attended the meeting.

"Cohasset is coming to a point where we have a lot of working mothers," one parent said. "We will see a lot of problems other towns are facing and have already faced. It's easy to say the help should not occur in school, but times are changing."

"We heard the same arguments about class size," Dr. Nedrow said. Member Jack Langmaid suggested that this is something to go before Town Meeting and say, "If both Mom and Dad want to work, you'll have to pay more taxes."

Superintendent Eugene Crowell said, "If it is something whose time has come, we must sell it on the floor of the Town Meeting or say there is something in the budget we don't need."

Dr. Nedrow said the committee would listen to all sides before they go back and vote.

Also at last Wednesday's meeting, advisory committee member Denis Rossi presented a report which indicated estimated budget increase may have been miscalculated.

In the report prepared by Rossi and advisory committee member Bill Lean, four teaching positions will be cut because of decreased enrollment. These salaries were figured into last year's budget to come up with an estimate of this year's non-salary increase.

Crowell told Rossi, "I don't quarrel with any of the work done here, but in my years in the business I can't find any way to stay within the town's unrealistic fiscal constraints.

"We have reached the point in Cohasset where we must find some way to override 2½" he said.

Assistant Supt. Stephen Hart noted that Cohasset school budget, which accounts for 57 percent of the general tax, placed them between 95 and 100 in per pupil cost in the Commonwealth.

"We must get away from the mindset that Cohasset is spending exorbitant amounts on per pupil cost," Hart said.

Rossi explained to the committee that the advisory board had asked all town departments to level fund the non-salary portion of their budgets.

"We are not trying to take you to task more than anyone else or less than anyone else," Rossi said.

Cohasset School news

Art students enter contest

Ms. Colleen Lucas from Cohasset High School is pleased to announce that she has entered the artwork of eleven of her students in the Boston Regional Preliminary Competition of the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards. The students are: Jen Hynes, Kirsten Pounder, Laura Doherty, Leah Burbank, Sally Hurtig, Amy Stafford, Ted Vallas, Jacob Powell, Allie Redfield, Dudley Bryan and Brian Ormiston.

Their artwork was selected for entry due to its creativity and excellence of composition. A panel of distinguished artists and art educators will judge all the entries at Mass. College of Art, the host for this regional preliminary. The panelists will select works to be exhibited and to be awarded gold keys. In addition, the outstanding portfolio submitted from this region will be awarded a $1,000 scholarship from the Boston Globe. The award winning works from this region will be exhibited at MCA from Jan. 12 through Jan. 25. Following this exhibit, the works will be forwarded to Boston where further judging will determine the state's blue ribbon finalists for final judging in New York.

Works awarded blue ribbons and gold keys will be exhibited in the Faneuil Hall Marketplace from February 11 to March 4, 1986.

Search for CHS principal

The Cohasset School Committee has agreed to set up four five-person groups to interview and rate all applicants for the position of CHS principal.

Current principal, Richard Streeter will become assistant superintendent of schools in September.

Each five-person selection committee will be comprised of an administrator, one department chairman, one teacher, one student and one parent.

PSO President Nancy Sandell is urging parents of Cohasset students to apply for a place on the four committees. She said, "As parents we should all be interested in who the new high school principal will be. No matter what grades our children are in now, we can affect their future at the high school by being involved now."

Any parent interested in applying for a position on the search committees should write to Supt. Crowell or the school committee as soon as possible.

After school childcare survey

The PSO is conducting a survey to determine whether Cohasset has a need for an after school childcare program. Programs such as these have evolved primarily (though not exclusively) to meet the needs of working parents. They are geared for the elementary school aged child, providing a stimulating but comfortable environment during non-school hours, half-days and school holidays.

Assuming all activities are to be located at a central site, transportation would be provided between the schools at the close of the school day.

Parents' comments and suggestions are welcome. Contact PSO, Vice Presient, Claudia Story, 383-6976.

The survey follows:

1. Are you interested in enrolling your child/-children in an after school program for grades K-6 for the 1986-87 school year?
Yes_____ No_____

Please indicate the number of children per grade level you would enroll.
K___ 1___ 2___ 3___ 4___ 5___ 6___

2. If you were charged by the day for this program would you be willing to pay:
$5/day___ $6/d___ $7/d___ $8/d___ $9/d___ $10/d___ other___ (Of course there would be a reduced rate for multi-children families and adjustments for half-days and school holidays).

3. a.) Number of days per week you would sign up for?
1___ 2___ 3___ 4___ 5___

b.) Would you be able to pick up your child by:
5:00 p.m.___ 5:30 p.m.___ 6:00 p.m.___ 6:30 p.m.___

4. The following is a list of activities frequently offered in after school programs. Please circle the five activities you would most like to see offered in a Cohasset program.

Dance	Exercise classes
Tutoring	Movies
Woodworking	Foreign language
Gymnastics	Arts and Crafts
Cooking	Music
Drama	Homework/Reading room
Nature/Science	Field trips
Sports	Games
Other___	Free play

5. Would you take advantage of such a program, even though you do not have the need for after school child care?
Yes___ No___

Globe art contest

Eleven art students from the junior-senior high school were participants in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards contest at the Mass. College of Art.

They are Allie Redfield, Laura Doherty, Jacob Powell, Ted Vallas, Sally Hurtig, Amy Stafford, Jen Hynes, Dudley Bryan, Kirsten Pounder, Leah Burbank and Brian Ormiston.

A gold key was awarded to Allie Redfield for her photograph entitled "Egg." Laura Doherty was awarded an honorable mention for her sculpture "Illusions."

The entire school congratulates all of these fine artists.

Portland art contest

Five Cohasset High School students' art work has been entered in the "Young Artist Drawing Competition" at the Portland School of Art, Portland, Maine.

They are: Brian Ormiston, Leah Burbank, Gail Fasciano, Laura Doherty and Peter Kasperowicz.

"And if you know Matthew Marr, $100 would be a bargain to go lobstering with him this summer on board the 'Sally Marie' "

"I'd bid $150, but my husband probably wouldn't let me go."

Checkbook a little low these days?

You might be the lucky bidder to get a $25 gift certificate from Good Sport for $20. That's a deal!

Twenty-five items, outings, instructions and events will be auctioned at the PSO Sportsmarket Auction tomorrow night, Friday, Jan. 31 immediately following the C.H.S. Varsity Basketball game vs. Norwell High School at 8:30 p.m. at the C.H.S gym.

Financial Aid

Congressman Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) announced today that he will sponsor a half-day forum on how to cope with the "staggering" cost of higher education.

The forum, titled Student Financial Aid: Planning for College in 1986, will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 2 at the Harrington center of Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay.

☐ Congratulations are certainly in order for John Rattenbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane. John is a member of the freshman class at Rennsalaer, and made the dean's list with a 3.722 average! John is one of eight ROTC students to make that list, you can imagine how hard he worked to do that! He also earned two medals for academic achievement. John is enrolled in the engineering program at Rennsalaer.

☐ Hope that First Lt. Kent R. Bolster will get to do some travelling while he is in West Germany. Kent is there with the 1st Infantry Division.

☐ I'm reminding you now about the CHS drama workshop, to be held on Feb. 8 and 9. They are going to present two one-act plays, Shel's Sister and Candid. Both of these plays deal with families, and the lack of communication that often is seen. They are said to provoke "real tears and real laughter." The cast is made up of familiar faces in the acting field at CHS, including Andrew Glasfeld, Karin Anglin, Glen Hochkeppel, Erin Browne, Jenna Emmons and John Kuntz. Performances will be given Feb. 8 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 9 at 7 p.m. All seats are reserved and are priced at $3. Write it in your event book now!

Another event that I have been asked to remind you of is the PSO Sports Auction, to be held this Friday night after the basketball game. Linton Young has volunteered to be the auctioneer, and it is said there is an abundance of sports equipment to be auctioned. All of the things are in good shape, and they are all things that one needs in any field of sports that you care to try. You will really be doing both yourself and the PSO a huge favor by attending (and buying of course) so be sure that you attend. Its also a wonderful chance to see our basketball team in action. The Cohasset Boosters will be there to provide the refreshments. As they say, "Come to the Skippers basketball game at 7:30, Jan. 31 and stay for the auction action afterwards."

☐ Nomination papers are available ...will be until Thursday, Feb. 27. Many positions are open for nomination. Go ahead, help the town!

☐ John S. Colocousis, a freshman marketing student at Ithaca College in New York was named to the dean's list for the fall semester. John, a 1985 graduate of CHS, is the son of Ann Colocousis of Scituate.

☐ Stephanie McAdams was a November 18 graduate of Fisher Jr. College. She attended the college's extension campuses located on the South Shore.

☐ The riding club is looking for new members. It is open to adults and children, and it is not necessary to own a horse to belong. They are a most active group, and a sheer pleasure to watch. If you are interested, call Sally Davenport at 383-1932, even if it's just to find out when the next show is.

☐ Several Cohassetites were in the Orange Bowl to see the Patriots win last Sunday, and they were certainly proud of their Pats! There were also more than a few that didn't have enough faith in the team, and lost...

☐ Phil Sills and Jackie Crossen Sills announce the birth of their sons, Christopher, 6 lbs., 8 oz., and Michael, 6 lbs. 11 oz., on Dec. 28, at Brigham and Womens Hospital. All are happy to be home on Cross Street, Norwell. Grandparents are Alba Crossen of Cohasset and Etta and Max Sills of West Palm Beach, Fla.

☐ That is the news from here. Wish we could have been writing at length about the Super Bowl, but maybe next year. Meantime what is your news?

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

GETTING PREQUALIFIED FOR A LOAN

Many lenders help prospective buyers to get prequalified for a mortgage loan before they begin a serious house-hunting effort. You sit down with a loan officer, give all of the information about your assets, income and debt, and they can tell you how much of a mortgage you will be able to get under the various loan plans being offered. For a nominal fee, they will do a credit check. If there are any problems with your credit rating, you and the lender can work together to straighten things out.

If your lender prequalifies you, it makes you much more attractive to the seller when you do find a home. This market is so active that many houses have multiple offers come in within days, even hours, after they are listed for sale. If you are competing with other buyers, it will be helpful if you have included with your offer a letter from your lender showing you've already begun the loan application process and appear to be qualified to buy the house. It will also save you and your Realtor a lot of time by eliminating from consideration homes you would not be able to afford.

Home Center Realty is happy to serve all of your real estate needs. If you are planning a move, call us at 749-8833 or stop by our office at 57 Water St.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

MANIPULATION

Have you ever observed a dog doing its morning stretch and spine extension? Have you watched a cat lie on its back and flex, extending its spine? These actions reflect a little bit of what manipulation is all about. It is designed to rotate and bend the spine at different levels. It moves the muscles, bones and joints in ways that relieve pressure and muscle spasm. In so doing, manipulation can relieve pain, stress and congestion and restore proper balance and function. Short muscles are stretched. Tight muscles are relaxed. One can sometimes actually hear a click or feel a bone or joint suddenly snap into place as a manipulation is performed. It is similar to cracking one's knuckles, but on a larger scale.

Such activity serves to enhance one's total state of well-being. Chiropractic application, properly implemented, can serve to alleviate existing conditions as well as preventing unwanted situations from occuring. For the chiropractic exam and attention that you desire and deserve, we welcome your call at COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Let us help you achieve the enjoyment that the science of chiropractic can make available to you. Unusual and difficult cases invited. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

Counties need to justify their regional role

By Patsy Murray
Mariner Staff

The Legislature has approved a bill which would allow Massachusetts' counties to write their own charters.

The bill, which is awaiting the governor's signature, was the last measure to be acted upon by the Senate before the 1985 session ended at midnight Dec. 31.

"This bill is an important step in the history of counties in Massachusetts," said Golden, Senate chairman of the Committee on Counties.

"The measure gives citizens the power to choose the type of county government they support. Under this new charter mechanism, the people of each county can choose to strengthen or even abolish county government." Under the provisions of the bill, the counties in the Bay State would be broken up into districts based on population, and charter commissions would be created. The commissions would then create a charter, recommending one of several types of government within the county, which would be put before voters in the statewide election in November.

"During the past year state, local and county officials have expressed their strong support for this piece of legislation," added Golden.

"Through the last minute efforts of Rep. Michael Morrissey of Quincy, the House chairman of the Committee on Counties and committee member Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, the bill was moved through the House and into the Senate literally at the 11th hour. The passage of this bill is a fine example of how cooperative bi-partisan efforts of both the House and Seante can produce good legislation," he said.

In a recent interview with The Mariner, Golden talked about the role of county government and the importance of regionalization.

The Mariner — How do you see the county system dovetailing with the other regional approaches?

Sen. Golden — For the first time in 300 years counties are going to have to justify themselves as regional government. Some counties will succeed in doing this; other counties will go out of business.

The Mariner — What will happen then?

Sen. Golden — Suffolk County for example. I think Suffolk County as a county level of government will cease to exist. Suffolk County is the City of Boston. The City of Boston can certainly assume all the county functions more efficiently, more effectively, and county government is superfluous.

The Mariner — In other words, you'd just have the word Suffolk County here?

Sen. Golden — There'd be a word Suffolk County, but there would be no Suffolk County government. I'm not going to wash it off the map. The map will have the system of counties as geographic boundaries. In some areas of the state you're going to see county government continue as a viable, legitimate form of government that delivers very necessary services on a regional basis. In others you'll see it as a hybrid level of government where the county government continues to exist, but more as a level of technical assistance, and more as a level of coordination, expediating kind of a mechanism than an actual deliverer of services.

You'll see the actual delivery of services coordinated by sub-regional groups, such as sewer districts, water districts, solid waste districts, districts such as the South Shore Coalition. I think they can all work very effectively together.

The Mariner — You see all these groups as dovetailing and not negating each other?

Sen. Golden — Exactly. What we have to do, just as we're doing with the South Shore Coalition now, the South Shore Coalition should not do anything that's a local function. We have to decide what is a local function and a local problem, and separate those very clearly from what are regional problems and regional functions. Once we do that the regional functions are going to have to be classified as what are regional functions we can undertake and what are regional functions that are better done at a county level of government.

If a county tries to duplicate or replicate what we're doing in the South Shore Coalition, it should go out of business, it shouldn't exist just to pay salaries to county officials. It should only exist if it is providing services that can be best suited to that level to government. And I think there are services like that. I think we need a regional transportation authority, and I think that should not be the MBTA. Anybody that has riden the Red Line — it's just abominable.

The Mariner — But why hasn't it improved under a very conscientious governor?

Sen. Golden — I think the Governor has...It's hard. You work with the clay you're given. Unfortunately there are such long lead times to things like the expansion of the number of cars that are available. It takes years to put out specifications for cars, to bid the cars, to get them constructed, to get them delivered, and get them integrated into a system. We're going to get some 58 new cars on the Red Line in the very near future...but one of the limitations on how effectively those cars can be used is the fact that platforms in the City of Boston can only accommodate three or four cars at one time. We need platforms that can accommodate four or five cars at one time so that you can have longer cars. If we're going to be bringing in a train load of commuters, it might as well be five cars, rather than three carloads.

The Mariner — It cuts down on costs.

Sen. Golden — It cuts down on costs, it makes the whole thing efficient.

The Mariner — It's a lot easier to stand on the platform and grouse....20 minutes I've waited here or why is this car stuck here for 15 or 20 minutes, when there are answers.

Sen. Golden — Unfortunately they're not simple answers, because they are integrated with each other. We have had extensive programs to expand the system. We have had improvement programs, but those improvement programs just take a considerable amount of time to put into place. A lot of things that were done in the first Dukakis administration were cancelled in the next administration and had to be reinitiated this time around. So things will, I think, flow more smoothly in the next year, and certainly in the next two or three years, on the Red Line than they have in the past. And that is one of the six points that are very necessary to improve transportation on the South Shore. We've got to do that.

We need to expand our commuter boat service. We have the best mode of transportation possibly available. You don't have to repave Boston Harbor every few years. You don't have to lay new rail beds in Boston Harbor. You don't have to buy new tires, or whatever, for the vehicles.

The Mariner — But you have to put the cost down.

Sen. Golden — Exactly. It is costly, and you have to create schedules that are more convenient to people. And again you have infrastructure limitations. We only have so much docking space on the South Shore and in Boston. We've got to expand those facilities. Right now the only limitation I see on commuter boat service is the fact that we have a limited number of boats, a limited number of parking places. We expanded tremendously the parking facilities at the Hingham Shipyard, only to find that as soon as we expanded them they were filled up immediately and we needed more. This happened too in the Rockland park and ride facility —the bus facility we have on the South Shore.

And people have to realize if they want a smoother commute in their automobiles they should support all the mass transportation, all the modes of transportation. Their dollars are very well spent on commuter boat subsidies, commuter bus subsidies and the Red Line, because every person that gets on one of those modes of transportation is one less automobile clogging the paths of vehicular traffic on the roads.

The Mariner — In Europe everybody takes public transportation.

Sen. Golden — We have to realize that we have the same necessity to use mass transportation that Europe has always had. They had necessity because their roads were very easily congested very early on, because they were never meant for automobiles and they got clogged very quickly. What we have to realize is that our roads, even though they were meant for transportation are going to be equally clogged and that we have the same degree of necessity as Europe does, or Canada or Mexico does. There's no reason why a Montreal or a Mexico City should have a better transportation subway system than we have in Massachusetts.

Another thing has to be said. I think that it's very very important that public servants, whether they work for the MBTA or the Registry of Motor Vehicles or local government or whatever, realize that their bread and butter is the public. We as government officials have to be more sensitive to the fact that we are truly public servants, and if somebody is rude, or inhospitable, or avoids, ignores the public — those people should be put out of business. If the MBTA officials aren't going to serve the public, or if the Registry officials aren't going to serve the public, they should be disciplined, they should be replaced. The systems they serve are going to suffer greatly. They have to understand that is a direct consequence of their individual behavior.

One of the things that has been a tremendous asset to me as a state senator has been my staff. I could not do anything as a senator without the kind of high quality, tremendously dedicated and motivated people that work in my office. And the reason that these people are so effective is that they come to work every single day and work as if the success or failure of government depended upon how they do that day. Government will succeed if they do well, government will fail if they don't do well that day. I think every single person working at federal, state and local levels of government has to have the same attitude. We have to approach this job saying one person can make a difference and each of us has to try.

Never lose quest

People were told of Tuesday's tragedy and responded with horror and a storm of questions. Space shuttles had become an almost ordinary part of our lives - how many took the time to watch this liftoff? Safety was not our concern that morning.

In a time when lives are needlessly wasted in drunk driving accidents, murders and suicides, one does not think of space travel as a danger. Driving on the expressway is risky at best. The space shuttle is the safest mode of travel.

We rejoiced with Christa McAuliffe, her family and students. As we watched her nightly progress on the news, we imagined a time when everyone would have the opportunity she had so eagerly grasped.

Who would dare to think that this was the mission to conclude in tragedy? With thousands watching this glorious flight, why was this the adventure to end in horror?

When the United States first sent Alan Shepherd into space 25 years ago, our imaginations soared along. As children gathered around the black and white television screen, we sat trembling and in awe of this incredible sight.

Many years have passed since those first primitive steps into space. We have grown accustomed to flight of giants into space. We continue to sit in awe, but silently believe that this must be a refined science.

We journalists, secretaries, grocers, architects, carpenters, cowboys and teachers have never fully comprehended the science behind those rocket launches. They are magical, mysterious, and wonderful.

That's what made this flight so special. We have watched as trained professional astronauts trudged clumsily up the steps into the rockets. We watched our televisions as they ascended into the heavens.

But they were not us. Christa McAuliffe was us. She was the housewife, sweeping the kitchen floor and listlessly dreaming of flying in orbit. She was the bored office manager, shooting a pencil into the air, dreaming all the while of his adventures in deepest darkest space. Christa was the young child sitting upon the floor, with nothing more complex than fingers, setting his entire being into an adventure far beyond his small reach.

Yes, we grieve for all those aboard the shuttle Challenger. We hope, as they would hope, that space exploration will not stop because of this tragedy.

And we hope children will never lose their quest for the future, that adults will continue to dream.

Just wondering. . .

Where's the coffee? How come there's no aroma of richly-brewed coffee eminating from the kitchen of the town Hall?

Coffee time from the hot water faucet? No thanks! We'll be back when Mr. Coffee returns.

Commentaries: Tragedy in Space

Dear children:

There is an age old dream that urges us to "reach for the stars."

Like millions of us, you were sitting before a television set at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning to watch Christa McAuliffe reach for the stars.

Reach for the stars

There was something special about Christa McAuliffe.

She was not really an astronaut as we know them. She did not wear the bars of a captain or the stars of a general. She was not a trained scientist.

She was one of you, one of us.

Christa was a teacher, a social studies teacher in a high school in New Hampshire. At your age, only a parent is closer to you.

You saw her chosen from 11,000 other teachers to represent you in space. You watched her learn. You saw her excitement, the same excitement you feel when you learn something new.

Christa, the teacher, more than anything else, dreamed of coming back to teach you what it was like in space, to bring the thrill and the feel of space to you in the classroom.

Like millions of us at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning, you watched that dream die in the debris of a great explosion nine miles over the Atlantic Ocean that killed Christa McAuliffe and her companions.

Reach for the stars.

Nothing of value is achieved without the payment of a price. Christa McAuliffe happened to be one of those who were called upon to make payment Tuesday morning. There will be others to carry on in her steps.

A man named Robert Scott once sought the South Pole. He died but someone else achieved.

A man named John Franklin sought the Northwest Passage. He died but someone else achieved.

A man named George Mallory sought the top of Mt. Everest. He died but someone else achieved.

Reach for the stars.

Christa McAuliffe did. She failed. But only in body. Her spirit, the same spirit that is in all of us, is still rising. Christa McAuliffe paid the price. Someone will achieve.

Maybe it will be you.

By Tom Henshaw

Filled with promise

This wasn't simply a test of science. They weren't merely trained professional scientists about to take yet another giant leap for mankind.

This was the space journey that was filled with promises. It would bring together the imagined space travels of the housewife, office worker, secretary and scientist. Young children would not understand the importance, mystery and magnificence of sending humans into space.

A young, pretty teacher, Sharon Christa McAuliffe, was to fulfill the fantasies of those who do not comprehend the equations of space exploration. The world witnessed her accomplishments as she evolved from teacher to astronaut. Students throughout the world were among those who stared into space as she ascended into a universe unknown.

We take for granted the complexities and imperfections of science. We did not think for a moment that Christa would never begin her classroom lessons from space. Failure and tragedy in space is a lesson we had yet to be taught.

It was 11:38 a.m. Tuesday. With less than a minute's flight into space, the technology amassed during the past 25 years exploded before our frightened eyes.

We are all students of this intricate technology. We were eager to accept Christa's lesson and now grieve for our loss.

Personal loss

As the Mariner went to press we heard the tragic news of the shuttle's explosion. If all aboard had been trained astronauts, we would have mourned mightily.

But, with teacher Christa McAuliffe aboard, our grief was more personal.

She was the first civilian, like us.

She was a teacher, as many of us once were.

She hailed from Concord, New Hampshire, a town so close to us.

She was an observer who was allowed to live a dream that became a nightmare as family, friends, and jubilant schoolchildren cheered from earth.

We are heartsick for all seven who lost their lives one minute from earth.

But our hearts go out to Christa McAuliffe and her children. To us at the Mariner, and perhaps across the world, we feel this as a very personal loss. And we mourn.

Wheelchair ramp

(This letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen. Ed.)

Dear Mr. England:

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee has asked me to write to the Selectmen to ask about the status of the addition of a wheelchair ramp to the Town Hall.

We feel strongly that the Cohasset Town Hall should be accessible to the handicapped. These citizens should be able to exercise their right to vote, to conduct their business and address issues of con-

There were no laughs in this year's Super mauling

There is no joy in Mudville . . .

In the despair of Sunday's squashing of the Patriots, I found myself awakened several times later that night. Listening to the surge of windswept rain against the darkened windows, I grasped for some humor as I would reach for a glass of water to quench my thirst.

I have been a die-hard Patriots fan - never. Suffice it to say they lured me to my television set two times in the past month. But I became caught in the hype, entangled in the web of exuberance and excitement. It was fun while it lasted.

But humor - I needed a laugh.

Never in my life had I witnessed such annihilation. I wanted so desperately for the game to be called - on account of humanity. Why should anyone have to endure what those 45 grown adults so publicly suffered?

Am I naive? Perhaps. As part of the 'Rocky genre' generation, I have always rooted for the underdog -assuming that along with the bottom of the popcorn box and that last swig of Coke, comes the hero from the ashes to certain triumph.

Who wrote Sunday's script? I hated it!

Laughs. I needed a few laughs that damp, dismal night.

I remembered the family Superbowl party we planned.

This was the year for the Patriots - and my father. He had survived watching a mediocre team battle a blizzard in Fenway Park, Mike Holovak and Nick Buonocotti. This was his Superbowl.

Since we couldn't afford to send him to New Orleans (believe me, my mother wracked her brains on this one), we bought him an official AFC—sanctioned Patriots Superbowl sweatshirt.

He loved that X-L item. He even washed it himself so he could wear it in time for Sunday's kickoff.

As we settled around the TV at 4:45 p.m., my father turned it on. President Reagan's face appeared on the screen.

"Is he a Patriot or a Bear?" my young son inquired.

"Neither," my father grumbled, opening a beer. "He has about as much right talking about the Superbowl as your mother. Just another way for him to get his face in front of the public."

But we were sure that at least half of the 32 million people watching that afternoon, like my small son, would have no idea who that man was or what he was saying in the minutes preceeding the Superbowl.

As my mother noted, "President Reagan has as much right talking about the Superbowl as Joe Namath had wearing pantyhose." Can't argue with that logic, Mom.

After the Presidential interview, 27 McDonald's and Burger King commercials, and an introduction to most of the 73,000 patrons at the Superdome, the game began.

There was my father, eyes sternly gazed ahead toward the flickering light of the television. My oldest son sat upright on the floor, a few feet from the TV. My two younger children were quietly wrestling on the floor on the other side of the wide room.

And there was dear Mom. Sitting on the sofa, glasses perched atop her head. We had given her a Patriots tee-shirt. The apron which had become a facet of her Sunday attire, covered most of the logo on the shirt. No matter. If Dad was Patriots fan numbero uno, Mom deserved honorable mention.

Since professional football invaded Sunday afternoon television, my mother has without fail, produced scrumious roast beef, delectable baked hams, and impeccable spaghetti dinners, had the table cleared, the dessert prepared and my father comfortably tucked in front of the tube, in time for each kickoff. It's a knack she acquired after about 30 years.

All in the Family goes to the Superbowl.

Yes, Edith, Archie, Gloria and the Meathead were gathered around the glow of the television to watch the torturous demise of the local team.

The conversation during the first quarter went something like this:

Edith: My, those Bears are big men. No wonder the Pats are going to lose.

Archie: They're not going to lose. How do you know so much?

Edith: Because they have that Refrigerator on the team. Gloria, what's his first name?"

Gloria: William. William Refrigerator.

Archie: Edith, another beer. Quick.

With the score tied 3-3 the first quarter ended. Edith arose and announced, "Now that it's halftime, it's time for dessert. We have red jello with white whipped cream in my nice Patriot blue bowls. Who wants tea or coffee?"

Gloria: Sit down, Mom. It's only the end of the first quarter. They play another quarter before halftime.

Edith: "I never realized how long football takes to play. I hope the jello hasn't gotten hard from staying out of the refrigerator too long."

The kids: "The refrigerator's going to eat our jello," they said in mock horror. "He's gonna eat our jello, Grammy."

With that, the three kids joined in the wrestling match and drowned out most of the increasingly annoying screams from the Chicago fans at the Superdome.

As the game wore on and on and on and on . . . my mother continued to rise with each commercial message and offer her halftime treat.

By the end of the second quarter, Meathead and I departed with the totally unruly children.

Mt father, stunned into silence, was glaring into the depths of that television set. He had turned the volume down so low, you could only see Merlin Olson's beard moving up and down when he talked.

Mom had cleaned the house from our pre-Superbowl festivities. I believe Garfield, her beloved cat, got the jello.

"I hope he chokes," Archie mumbled as he reached for his final beer, stretching just far enough to kick that Patriot blue bowl from the cat's grinning mouth.

cern to them without the embarrassment of being carried into the Town Hall.

Several years ago, a Town Meeting article that would have funded the construction of such a ramp was withdrawn because of a donation of materials and work to build the ramp. However, the ramp was disallowed because of objections from the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission regarding the design or appearance of the ramp.

If the appearance of the Town Hall building is elevated to a greater importance than the rights of the citizens of the town, then it is time to reassess our priorities. Surely this project should not be an insurmountable obstacle for the town to overcome.

I and the Democratic Town Committee would like to work with the Selectmen and the Historic District Commission to expedite the construction of the ramp. Please let us know what we can do to help. If additional financial contributions are needed, we would be willing to make a contribution.

Thank you for your attention. We hope that we can resolve this problem and have the ramp completed before the April 12, 1986 town election.

Priority list spot lost

To the Editor:

About the time that the Cohasset town meeting succumbed to the blandishments of a free lunch through innovative alternatives, and jumped ship on the Agreement for Judgment to build its own sewage treatment plant, the State provided a million dollars for design of the plant. Cohasset was high on the Commonwealth's Priority List, and could reasonably have expected funding for construction when that time came.

Unfortunately, Cohasset rejected the million dollars, and voted to spend about $100,000 (later increased) of its own money to study the innovation will-of-wisp. Because Cohasset violated its agreement and has been floundering ever since, it has been displaced on the Priority List.

What happened to the innovative alternatives, such as adding two of three feet of sand to your yard, connecting several houses to a shared septic system, and similar nonsense? Put to merciful rest, and all that remains is a questionable connection to Hull that costs the town more than the well-funded plant we could have had, and the proposed two in. connections to sewers. The $100,000 plus has purchased the abysmally poor Ward report which not only reflects the funding delusions of the Sewer Commission but has incorrect cost comparisons and fails to conform to the applicable technical standards.

And where did the million dollars go, and who moved up on the Priority Points List? Another town, which soon will be enjoying its own treatment plant - the one Cohasset could have had.

On honoring Helen

(This letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen. Ed)

Dear Board members:

We would like to thank the board in its decision to lower the flag to half staff on Jan. 6, 1986 to honor the memory of our sister Helen. As you all well know, Helen was a Navy veteran, elected official, and a concerned, loving patriotic citizen who dedicated much of her time in the interest of her home town and country.

Thank you all for your kindness and consideration.

Very truly yours,

Honoring servicemen

(This letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen from the Cohasset Historical Commission. Ed.)

Honorable Board,

The Cohasset Historical Commission wishes to express its support for the decision to reinstall in the Town Hall Auditorium the portraits of the Town's honored Servicemen who lost their lives during the First World War.

In 1929, at Town Meeting, the Citizens of Cohasset deemed it appropriate to perpetuate the memory of fellow townspeople who paid the supreme sacrifice in the service of their Nation during that conflict.

Today it remains appropriate to continue to so honor the Servicemen of Cohasset who died in that first war for the preservation of democracy.

The Historical Commission feels the decision to once again hang in the Town Hall the pictures of Cohasset World War 1 honored dead is a wise decision, and we hope it will be implemented at the earliest possible time.

Vo-Tech afternoon program

South Shore Vocational Technical High School is offering a new program to the students of Cohasset who are currently in grade eight, nine or ten in the Cohasset Public School system.

The program will begin operation January 21 and will run through the remainder of the school year.

South Shore received a grant to run the Sex Equity Occupational Opportunity program for four afternoons each week, Monday through Thursday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The purpose of the project, according to Director of Development Paul Babcock, will be to eliminate obstacles and pressures for females and males considering entrance into non-traditional occupational training programs. Students will be provided an opportunity to explore a number of trade areas which traditionally enroll members of the opposite sex.

During the first five weeks the program will focus on an exploratory period in five selected trade areas which meet demonstrated labor market needs and achieve the highest enrollment. Students will then select an occupational training program area for the remaining fifteen weeks of in-depth exploration and basic skills development. Transportation will be available for participants in the program.

Selection priority will be given to students who are interested in careers which are considered non-traditional for their sex, according to Babcock, and acceptance to the program will be based on a first come first serve basis. Further information may be obtained by contacting the Guidance Department at the junior and senior high school or by contacting Paul Babcock or any member of the Guidance Department at South Shore at 878-8826.

CHS math greats

Representing Cohasset High School in the Continent of Mathematics League this month were:

Seventh grade: William Baird, Corey DeSantis; John Mannings, Stephen Almeida, Jennifer Jackson, and Peter Smith.

Eighth grade: Donald Caffrey, Michael Cesneroe, James Long, Kerri Anglin, Matt Silvia, and Noah Hill.

Ninth grade: Jeff Bryant, Dan Farwell, Celia Mullen, William Anstead, Arthur Meacham and Melissa Nothnagle.

Good work math scholars!

Handicap awareness program

A blindness awareness program is now underway in the third grade at the Joseph Osgood School.

Sponsored by the PSO, the program is presented by Norma Grassey and Diana Kornet. Guest speaker, Donna Bailey, who teaches sighted children in Jamaica Plain, demonstrated the use of her cane, braille typewriter and a hand brailler and stylus on her visit to third graders Jan. 30.

Ms. Bailey discussed how she gets around independently and lives a normal life.

Feb. 3 first and second grade teachers will begin teaching about handicaps as part of the health education curriculum. The program, lasting six weeks, uses the hit, "What if You Couldn't?" developed by the Boston Children's Museum. Any parents interested in assisting the teachers would be more than welcome.

Full-time counselor meeting

By Monica McKenney
Cohasset PSO

All parents of Cohasset elementary school students are urged to attend an open discussion on the need for a full-time school counselor at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

The "Open Discussion" will be held Wednesday, February 5, at 8 p.m. in the high school studio. The meeting will afford the school committee an opportunity to meet with parents and health professionals and discuss the need for hiring an elementary school counselor.

The counselor would work with students, teachers and parents in an effort to prevent childhood problems from escalating to a crisis level. These problems could impair a child's ability to learn and threaten his social or emotional health. Currently the schools use outside agencies to work with students. But after-the-fact treatment is sometimes ineffective. Young children require immediate attention to their problems and classroom teachers are unable to provide the individual time, guidance and comfort that a troubled student demands.

This is the second year that principals Ken Ekberg and Jack Creamer have requested a school adjustment counselor. Teachers in both schools strongly support this request. Superintendent Eugene Crowell approves the measure but has not included the position in his budget estimate for next year.

The counselor would work under the Deer Hill and Osgood principals and in conjunction with the Health Education Coordinator. Some of the problems to be dealt with include: divorce, death and dying, child-safe programs, alcoholism or substance abuse, crisis intervention, self-esteem/self-image work groups, aggression, depression and other manifestations of problems.

Cohasset area sports roundup . . .

Seventh grade dominates the ball in a basketball game because the CHS seventh grade boys and the Deer Hill sixth grade boys.

Seventh grade dominates

By Patrick Suhrbier and Brooks Doten
Sports Information Station

In the battle between the Deer Hill sixth grade boys and the Cohasset Junior High seventh grade boys, the seventh grade pulled a victorious win. The score of the game was 38 to 8.

The first score of the game was by Matt Norris of the seventh grade. The sixth grade finally scored on a basket by Oronde Bynoe. At the half the score was 26 to 6.

The two advantages the seventh grade had in its battle for a victory were the height of its players and one extra year of practice. During the game there was a jump between seventh grader Terry O'Leary and sixth grader Carlo Lagrotteria and what a mismatch that was! Terry O'Leary didn't have to jump for the ball and he still got it. The seventh grade scored on that jump.

Near the end of the game Mac Campbell would have made the score 38 to 10 but on his shot it just missed the basket and bounded off the rim. The person who scored the most was Terry O'Leary and boy did he get a lot of baskets. One shot Terry tried, the ball got stuck between the rim and the backboard. Referee Eric Daniels got the ball down and the game started again.

Sixth graders Rod Hemassi, Tim Ghetto and Jim Yess scored the other three baskets for their team.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The girls played one of their best games of their season Tuesday and beat Whitman/Hanson for the first time, 55-50.

Cohasset trailed by five at halftime but came back strong in the second half and got its transition game going. Coach Bill Fallon feels that his team's fast break and excellent defense were the key factors to this victory.

Maureen O'Leary led all scorers with 18 points, followed by Cindy Spooner who pumped in 12. Cindy also had 12 rebounds. Fallon was impressed with the defensive efforts of Melissa Shea and Anne O'Leary as they held Whitman's best player to nine.

Friday, the girls suffered a disappointing loss to Abington in overtime, 41-39. Fallon believes his team had a good game defensively but didn't capitalize on some key scoring opportunities.

Maureen O'Leary led in scoring with 12 points while Maria Cahill had 10 and Cindy Spooner had nine. Fallon also cited these girls as having good games on both ends of the court.

The girls are now 10-4 overall and only need two more victories in order to make the tournament. Fallon feels one of these wins should come Friday when the Skippers face Norwell. However, before this game, Cohasset faces its toughest challenge of the season as it plays Duxbury on Tuesday.

HOCKEY

Wednesday, the boys were defeated by Rockland, 5-3. The game was tied, 1-1, through most of the second period. Unfortunately, Rockland slipped ahead and Cohasset could not catch up. Coach Dennis Walsh was very pleased with the way his team played and felt with a few lucky breaks the score could have gone the other way.

According to Walsh, goalie Peter Sandblom had a great game. But for the most part the game was entirely a team effort with not one player standing out.

Saturday, Cohasset crushed Whitman/Hanson, 5-0. Walsh felt his team totally outplayed Whitman, especially defensively, as the shutout would indicate.

Jeff Hartwell led Cohasset offensively with two goals, followed by Todd Fitzpatrick, Greg Fereirra and Danny Pompeo, who each had one. Defensively, Chris Ridge, Kevin Leary, Kevin Mulcahy and Philip Mahoney played well. Peter Sandblom had a strong game in net and picked up the shutout.

Overall, Walsh feels his team is getting together and has improved its skating tremendously. Walsh is also pleased with Cohasset's optimism which should help against Hanover Wednesday and Duxbury Saturday. Both games will be challenging but are within Cohasset's grasp, according to Walsh.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Tuesday, the boys had a great game offensively and beat Whitman/Hanson, 89-71. Coach Ed Minelli said that there was not much defense being played by either team but luckily Cohasset proved to be the hotter team.

James Creed had his best game of the season, scoring 27 points. Also, James scored his thousandth career point, an achievement only accomplished by a small few at Cohasset High School.

Tony Bogarty finished out the night with 19 and Brian Edwards had 18. Tommy Larson had a career high 16 points and played an outstanding game all around, according to Minelli.

Friday, the boys pulverized Abington, 71-42. A poor first quarter left Cohasset ahead, 10-0. Minelli attributes his team's slow start to the lousy rubber basketball Abington decided to play with. However, the Skippers had the last laugh in the end as they totally destroyed every aspect of Abington's game.

Brian Edwards led all scorers with 25 points followed by Tony Bogarty who picked up 22. Bob Shultz played well defensively and added five steals to his impressive total. This victory over Abington gave Cohasset its 33rd straight league win. One of the Skippers' goals this year is to break the old league record of 36 straight victories. Tuesday, Minelli felt this goal might be in jeopardy, as Cohasset faces a talented Duxbury team. The Skippers are expecting a tough game against the dreaded Dragons. Friday, the boys play a less threatening Norwell team in Cohasset.

Closed:
Monday, Feb. 17-observance of Washington's Birthday.
From the Director:
Dear Friends:
As the new Senior Center Director, I would like to extend to all of you my greetings and best wishes for the New Year. I hope this year will bring to you good health, happiness and many new opportunities to meet new friends at the Senior Center.
In the past seven years I have been involved with planning and coordinating programs for the nutrition department of South Shore Elder Services in eleven towns.
I am very excited about working with the Cohasset Council on Aging and the Senior Center in developing new programs. I feel the value of a Senior Center as a focal point in Cohasset is considerable.
Please feel free to stop in an say "Hi", have coffee and let me know what you would like to see happen at the Center.

Kathy Bryanton

Knitting Class:
Edna Finegan will conduct a knitting class for five weeks on Friday afternoons beginning on Jan. 24 from 1 to 3 p.m. Anyone interested in learning to knit, or knitters at any level, are welcome to join the group. Winter flu shots for seniors are needed

Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard H. Rowland is reminding elders to get their flu shots.
"The National Center for Disease Control has reported that persons 65 years of age or older are at the greatest risk of suffering severe complications from a bout with influenza," said Rowland.
"The usual outbreaks of influenza are during and after the holiday season. Clinics offering flu vaccinations began in late September, but there is generally no cut-off date to receive them," he said.
The demand in the Commonwealth for flu vaccinations has been so great this year that the State Department of Public Health and Communicable Diseases has obtained additional supplies of the vaccine in order to meet the demand."
People who have allergic reactions to eggs or egg products or who have heart, lung, or any other chronic infection should check with their physicians first before being vaccinated. Less than five percent of people who are vaccinated have a systematic or local reaction, consisting of either fever or chills, which lasts a maximum of 24 hours. A local reaction is more common, such as a redness or soreness on the arm where the shot was received. Most people have no reaction at all.
Elders should contact local boards of health for schedules and/or doctors for information regarding flu vaccinations.

'85 Gains

Despite increased competition resulting from continued deregulation of banking. Cohasset Savings Bank achieved substantial gains in assets, deposits and surplus reserve during 1985, corporators of the bank were told at their annual meeting held recently.

Total assets of the bank increased over $3.8 million to a record high of $44.6 million. The increase included gains of about $1.1 million in real estate mortgages issued during the year and nearly $1 million in automobile and personal loans.

During the year deposits increased by over $2.8 million or 8 percent, to a total of more than $40 million. Much of the gain came in Individual Retirement Accounts where the bank has offered speical high interest rates during the period leading up to income tax day, April 15. This year the bank is currently offering a three-year term certificate paying 10.25 percent as well as other shorter term options for retirement investments.

Total revenues from the bank's investments and loans also recorded a substantial gain to a record figure of almost $4.9 million for the year, an increase of $530,000 over the 1984 figure. The improvement came in interest on real estate and personal loans, interests in overnight deposits in commercial banks as well as from dividends on stock.

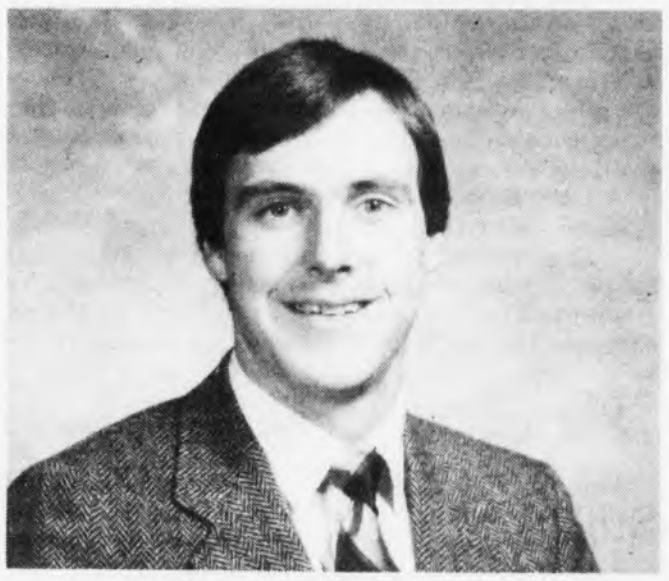
Included in income was a one-time refund of over $200,000 from the state Deposit Insurance Fund as a result of the widespread move of Massachusetts banks to membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Cohasset Savings Bank was approved during the year for FDIC membership, so that deposits continue to be insured in full, with the FDIC covering accounts up to $100,000 and the Deposit Insurance Fund of Massachusetts insuring any amount in excess of $100,000.

The bank paid over $3.1 million in interest on its approximately 9,000 deposit accounts during 1985. Although deposits increased, total interest remained virtually unchanged as lower interest rates generally offset the increase level of deposits.

Net income of the bank from operations and before taxes was $773,000, including the one-time refund from DIFM. Excluding that extraordinary item, the pre-tax income was $569,000, an increase of 61 percent over the figure for the prior year. The sizeable earnings triggered a tax payment of $337,000, which, together with securities gains, loan losses and other charges, resulted in a "bottom line" net income of $438,000.

The addition of the 1985 net income to the surplus reserve brought this account to a record $3,663,000. This represents a ratio of reserve to deposits of 9.15 percent as compared with 8.5 percent for the prior year. This level of surplus reserve is amoung the highest for mutual savings banks throughout the state and is considered an indication of financial soundness protecting customers' deposits.



George Marlette

George Marlette, new director

George L. Marlette, of Cohasset, has been appointed Director of Associated Builders and Contractors Government Relations Division.

Marlette, who attended the Derby Academy in Hingham and the Holderness School in Plymouth, NH, is a 1983 graduate of Gettysburg College in Gettysburg, PA.

Currently a student at the New England School of Law in Boston, he has worked for the Public Protection Bureau of the Massachusetts Attorney General and recently served as the Field Director of ABC's 1985 referendum campaign.

In announcing the appointment of Marlette, Tocco stated, "ABC is fortunate to have George Marlette as our Director of Government Relations. His experience in local and state government and his proven effectiveness in organizing ABC's grassroots coalition will serve our associations' legislative needs and enable us to have an impact on important issues at the local and state levels."

The Massachusetts/Rhode Island Chapter of Associated Builders and Contractors currently represents over 700 commercial and industrial merit shop contractors employing over 20,000 workers. It is the largest Chapter in ABC's national network.

Ruth Mendes noted

Ruth Mendes, manager of the Bound Brook Office of Cohasset Savings Bank in North Scituate, has been commended for being among the "$100,000 Plus" agency representatives of Savings Bank Life Insurance during the month of December, pacing the bank's sales performance that placed it among the top ten banks in the state.

Mendes, who has been a member of the Bound Brook Office staff since the branch opened in 1977, recorded $120,000 in Savings Bank Life Insurance sales during the month, placing her among only eight representatives in the state with sales of more than $100,000. She has completed a training course that qualified her as an agency representative and has taken industry-sponsored courses in supervisory skills.

This is the second outstanding performance in a three-month period by Cohasset Savings Bank staff in the sales of Savings Bank Life Insurance. Charles Sullivan, head teller in the Cohasset Office, was the state leader in October.

Cohasset business briefs. . .

Dane Hahn

Advertising director

Dane Hahn of Cohasset, sales director of New England Business Magazine, has been named to the newly-created position of national consumer advertising director of Yankee Magazine.

Hahn's promotion marked the further implementation of Yankee's moves to staff its national sales force with professionals to gain a larger share of the national advertising market.

Hahn joined New England Business Magazine as advertising director in 1983 after five years as sales director of Crain's Chicago Business and before that as a salesman for Advertising Age. "Under his stewardship, New England Business ad pages showed steady growth, and in 1985 topped the 1000 mark, a 24 percent gain over 1984 in a category of business magazines which rose 4.5 percent," Rob Trowbridge, president of Yankee Publishing Corp., added.

In his new position, Hahn will be calling on major national advertisers and their agencies in New York City and other locations. He will continue to operate from the Yankee sales offices at 33 Union Street in Boston.

Hahn and his wife, Sandra, have two daughters.

Diane Sullivan

Sullivan joins firm

Diane C. Sullivan has joined Coastal Country Properties Ltd. as a new broker/associate.

Sullivan is a native of Weymouth and has previously been associated with Mister Donut of America, Inc. as supervisor of finance; with Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Co. as asssitant personnel director; and with the Gillette Company as supervisor of pension and insured benefits.

A resident of Cohasset for 10 years, Diane is a justice of the peace, notary public and a Cohasset selectman. She is married to John W. Sullivan and has two sons, Michael and Jason.

Mills joins Conover Co.

Nick B. Mills of Cohasset, former morning news anchorman on WEEI Radio in Boston, has been named vice president of the Boston public relations firm of Conover & Company. Mills will be in charge of corporate development and will supervise several of the firm's accounts.

Prior to joining Conover & Company, Mills had become well-known to Boston radio listeners. He served as News Director and newscaster at WHDH and WITS, Boston; newscaster and commentator on the ABC Radio Network in New York; and morning news anchor on WEEI. His offbeat news feature on WEEI, "The Mills Report", won a U.P.I. Tom Phillips Award as Best Radio Feature in New England.

A 1964 graduate of Boston University's College of Communication, Mills served as a Peace Corps volunteer in Bogota, Colombia, and as an Army officer in Vietnam, where he commanded a combat photography team. He is the author of Combat Photographer (Boston Publishing Company/Time-Life Books, 1984).

Unique Joel Willcut diary kept in society archives

By David Wadsworth

From the year 1791 to 1843, Cohasset native Joel Willcutt kept a diary in which he jotted down events of local note—as well as occasional happenings elsewhere. He also wrote in detail of the climate and weather and of the yearly agricultural cycles so important to a self-sufficient community of that time.

In Joel Willcutt's Diary we can read, for instance, of the spring ploughing, and the planting of corn, potatoes, and rye which formed such an important part of a family's subsistence. The careful hoeing and fall harvesting are noted, and the mowing of hay from the fields and meadows. The weather was all-important to both farmers and seafarers alike. Willcutt recorded each day's weather, carefully noting the direction of the wind, and the presence or absence of rain and snow. Storms and droughts were a matter of concern, and the diary records numerous instances of a "remarkable fine shower of rain" or a week "remarkable dry for the season."

Joel Willcutt, who incidentally was the Town's Postmaster, though not a seafarer himself, resided on Ship Cove Lane near the Harbor, and several members of his immediate family frequently went to sea. He notes the arrivals and departures of relatives on "mackrel voiges" or fishing trips aboard the town's fishing schooners. The Willcutt's daughter Anna married a deep sea captain, Cohasset's Capt. Philip Fox. Fox twice set the record for port-to-port Westward crossings of the Atlantic from Liverpool to Boston as Master of a Packet Ship, first in 1818 then again in 1826.

Willcutt's diary also informs us that Capt. Fox sometimes took his ship to southern ports before departing for England. The launching of sailing vessels at Cohasset's shipyards claimed Willcutt's attention, and among others, he mentions the launching of the ship "Conahasset" on Nov. 1, 1834, and another on Oct. 24, 1836, "a warm and pleasant day", which resulted in complications, for the diarist noted the vessel "stopped on her ways." The War of 1812 came close to Cohasset's shores and on June 11, 1814 Willcutt reported, "this morning 2 British Barges came in and set fire to a Sloop lying at White Head. There was an alarm and all hands got together and went to work fortifying Hominy Point. Three companies from Hingham came over to our assistance." But the war ended soon, and the routine life of a small village continued, with families to be raised, crops to be tended and houses to be built.

Thus on August 23, 1821 Willcutt wrote "mowed the grass on the Flatts, Mr. Caleb Lothrop's House raised." The date of consturction of Caleb Lothrop's home given in the diary places it two years earlier than the date usually given today. The year 1826 saw the passing of two giant figures in early American statesmanship. Willcutt the diarist mentions the deaths of former President John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, who died, ironically, upon the same day, July 4th. Later in the book, he also notes the death of the richest and most prominent Cohasset resident, Elisha Doane, Esquire, upon July 4th, 1832.

Feburary 22, 1832 the town marked George Washington's birthday, and Joel Willcutt wrote "this day celebrated the Centennial birthday of Washington. Rev. Mr. Flint delivered an Oration at the Meetinghouse. Had a Public Dinner, fired three salutes; a Ball at the Academy in the Evening."

One of the active organizations in early 19th century Cohasset was the town's Debating Society, and Joel Willcutt notes the presentation of several "Orations" by Cohasset residents at Society get-togethers in the Meetinghouse. Joel Willcutt's unique and unusual record of people and events in early Cohasset (he called it his "memorandum") covers some 52 years in the day-to-day life of this small New England fishing and agricultural community. Whether it was ploughing his fields, cutting hay, repairing a fence, gathering seaweed to use as fertilizer, trekking firewood across a frozen pond, or helping to build a house or highway, diarist Willcutt was there, as both participant and recorder. His half-century record, in its original handwriting, is part of the Cohasset Historical Society's Archive collection of local historical records, located at the Caleb Lothrop House.

The diary itself is primary source material for any study of the town's early years, portraying, as it does, life and events in an era now long past.

Milliken Field repairs

Selectmen approved a $20,000 contract with a Cambridge firm, Spinks Associates, to design the renovation and improvements to Milliken Field. Voters at the June Special Town Meeting appropriated that amount for the improvement design phase.

Milliken Field Improvement Committee Chairman Ken Ekberg said of the five firms submitting bids for the work, Spinks was the unanimous recommendation of the committee. The principal of the firm, Francis Fox, made the presentation to the committee, and said for the money, he could present the town with drawings for $300,000 worth of improvements to the playing fields.

All the architects interviewed, Ekberg said, commented that the original work proposed for the field will cost the town more than the anticipated $300,000. That amount would have included an all-weather track, varsity game field, utility building and toilets, a concessions stand, storage area, security lights and fencing, and drainage improvements. Although that work had been part of their original plans for the field, Town Meeting voters did not vote on the actual work to be completed, just the design phase appropriation, Ekberg explained.

Total cost for the construction phase of the project can be reduced by decreasing the amount of renovation work, he added. One option may be to locate the playing field behind the high school, utilizing the school's storage areas and toilet facilities rather than constructing a separate utility shed.

Once the design is complete, Town Meeting must vote on an appropriation to begin construction of the improvements. Until the design is finished, costs for construction cannot be estimated.

Committee member Ekberg and Peter Laugelle also presented selectmen with an updated engineering survey of the Milliken Field area. Norfolk County engineers provided the town about $5-$6,000 worth of free work to survey this land and research the land deeds.

Senior Center Open House Week - Feb. 10 to Feb. 14, 3 North Main Street, 383-9112. Classes beginning: knitting, line dancing, "Silver Pages" directory sign-up until the end of month. Free tax counseling beginning Feb. 3 to April 14 at the Unitarian Parish House or Cohasset Public Library. Call for an appt. Mrs. VanSlyck at 383-1561 or Mrs. Harrington, 383-0216.

A letter of thanks - has been received from the Guild of Catholic Charities for the help they received from our parish in providing Christmas gifts to more than 100 children. Thank you to Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe's parish eighth grade class for their outstanding effort.

Open House and registration - at St. Paul's School, Hingham; Thursday, Feb. 6 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Call 749-2407 for information.

St. Stephen's

Outreach committee - at its Sunday, Jan. 19 meeting, decided to ask the Rev. Diane Edson to come preach at St. Stephen's and describe the "planting" of a new (one year old) Episcopal congregation in Hull. She will then join us for fellowship, where questions can be asked and she can be met in a more informal way. She has agreed to be with us on Sunday, Feb. 9.

A future guest preacher will be Esther Sanger, who directs the Quincy Crisis Center, which shelters the homeless and feeds the hungry. Both ministries are supported by St. Stephen's.

Looking to Lent - Does it seem possible? Lent is almost here. Our annual Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper will be held Feb. 11. This is a supper with a Mardi Gras festive air about it. All are invited. Bring the children.

Ash Wednesday follows the next day with services at 9:30 a.m. with administration of ashes at 7:30 p.m.

The Lenten program this year will be a study of Paul's letter to the Romans in which Paul presents how he understands the Gospel and in which we each can find our own stories as Christians. This Bible Study will meet every Wednesday during Lent at 7:30 p.m.

Information in AIDS and Christian response -Two Episcopal Chaplains who minister to AIDS patients, the Rev. Charles Kessler, Episcopal Chaplain at the New England Deaconess Hospital, and Elizabeth Kaeton, Chaplain at the University of Lowell, will be with us at St. Stephen's Wednesday, Feb. 5 at 7 p.m. to help us understand the facts about AIDS, as they are presently known, and share with us some of their experiences relating to pastoral care for AIDS victims and their families and friends.

Both speakers are members of an ecumenical task force chaired by our new Bishop, David Johnson, which is dealing with Christian response to the illness of AIDS. In some respects, we have in this subject a modern day parellel of Jesus' parable of the Good Samaritan.

The program is sponsored by the Adult Education Committee of St. Stephen's, and is open to all. It will be held in the choir room.

Free tax counseling - trained volunteers will help individuals age sixty and over in preparing their tax returns, Feb. 3 to April 14 at the Unitarian Parish House or the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. For an appointment call Mrs. Van Slyck, 383-1561 or Mrs. Harrington, 383-0216.

Second Congregational

Coffee volunteers - A new calendar in Bates Hall needs to be filled with names of people willing to greet, usher and make and serve coffee. Pick a Sunday or two, and help our church continue its good reputation for friendliness and a welcoming spirit. Thank you.

In the family - Elizabeth Thiessen is recovering at home after a recent hospitalization.

Food needed - When you come to church this week, please take along a few items of non-perishable food. It will be taken to the Quincy Crisis Center. Thank you.

First Parish

Religious education - Sunday, Feb. 2, winter /spring terms begins. Plays will be worked on for Grades 2-6 and for preschoolers - grade 1.

Sunday, Feb. 2, Grade 8 Human Sexuality class begins at 7 p.m. at the Craft's residence. Watch for letter and calendar.

Obituary

Richard J. Brighton Sr.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday morning in St. Frances Cabrini Church, Scituate, for Richard J. Brighton Jr., 71. Mr. Brighton, the husband of Agnes M. (Bryne) Brighton, secretary to the Cohasset School Superintendent, died Jan. 26 at home in Scituate after a brief illness.

Born in Boston, Mr. Brighton had lived in Scituate for 26 years. He was a graduate of Cathedral High School in Boston.

Before his retirement five years ago, Mr. Brighton was a self-employed magnetic sign salesman. He was a veteran of the U.S. Army during World War II.

Along with his wife, Mr. Brighton leaves three sons, Richard J. Brighton Jr. of Scituate, Christopher R. Brighton of Quincy, and Patrick J. Brighton of Carver; four daughters, Katherine A. Figault of Yarmouthport, Nancy M. Brighton of Quincy, Barbara J. Pye of Norwell, Maryann Burridge of Marshfield, and four grandchildren.

Burial was in Union Cemetery, Scituate.

Donations may be made in Mr. Brighton's memory to the Pine Street Inn, 60 Bristol St., Boston, Mass. 02109.

Campaign For Literacy

"Reading is All-American: A Campaign for Literacy" is a campaign which will be carried out in all 27 Massachusetts communities which American Cablesystems serves. This campaign hopes to promote creative writing and to encourage proper reading skills in our own communities.

American believes that we can integrate our community television facilities with our town resources to be used as a teaching tool.

The following is a brief summary of the campaign:

- Thursday, Feb. 13, 7 p.m., system-wide showing of the documentary "Can You Read Me" on Channel 12
- Thursday, Feb. 13, 7:30 p.m., recognizing the nation-wide problem of illiteracy, a roundtable program to promote all aspects of reading will follow the documentary with representatives from our six towns
- Monday, Feb. 17 thru Friday, Feb. 21, "Reading is All-American Week." Community Channel 12 will highlight educational programming.

We hope to continue and further develop our commitment to quality educational programming. We look forward to your comments, input and involvement.

Living and dying

On Sunday evening, Feb. 2, at 7:30 p.m. Psi Symposium will feature Dr. Richard W. Boerstler, psychotherapist, and Helen S. Kornfeld, R.N., Associates in Thanatology, in a speaking demonstration of their recent book "Letting Go: A Holistic Approach To Living And Dying."

The authors describe their work in thanatology in the following terms: fears and anxieties are dispelled and dying is eased through an ancient meditation technique disclosed for the first time in Western medicine. Powerful relaxation methods originating from Tibetan medicine are described in detail. Using meditative techniques (non-denominational), the dying person and others can participate consciously in the dying process thereby easing anxiety and helplessness.

The program is open to the public and meets in the First Parish Hall. Donation, $3 (members: $2).

Photograph classes

Two photography classes on the South Shore Art Center's winter schedule will begin one week later then scheduled.

John Droege's Beginning Darkroom will begin Tuesday, Jan. 28 and his Intermediate Darkroom will begin Thursday, January 30. Both classes will meet for eight weeks from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Advanced registration is required.

For further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

North River architecture

New England is known for its architecture—the variety and beauty is unrivaled! In celebration of National History month, the South Shore Natural Science Center is offering a look at local architecture.

On Tuesday, Feb. 4 from 8 to 10 p.m. historian and author Cynthia Krusell will trace the evolution of local architecture from the simple, square colonial to "wedding cake" Victorian. Georgian, Federal, Greek Revival and Italiante styles will also be explored.

For a new appreciation of our eclectic South Shore, please join us as we look at the buildings around us. Call 659-2559 for more information or to register (members/$5; non-members/$6.50; pre-paid registration required.)

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123 and is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Health screening clinic

The Public Health nurse in conjunction with the Social Service League of Cohasset will be holding a combination Hypertension and Colo-Rect al Screening Clinic, Feb. 20, prior to the 60 plus Club meeting, at the First Parish House in Cohasset from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and also on February 27, 1986 at 60 Elm St. from 10 a.m. to noon.

In light of the recent recognition given to colorectal cancer by the President's surgery, the public has become more aware of the importance of early detection as a preventive precaution to this disease.

The two sites listed above and their designated dates will be a distribution sites for information and test kits. This is a simple take-home test that screens for hidden blood in the stool. We welcome all town residents, especially those aged 50 or over and those with a family history of colo-rectal cancer, to participate in the screening.

If you would like a kit but are unable to attend on the dates mentioned, please contact the Public Health Nurse, Mary Anne Hansen, at 383-0771 or 383-0821. Additional information on colo-rectal cancer will be made available to callers.

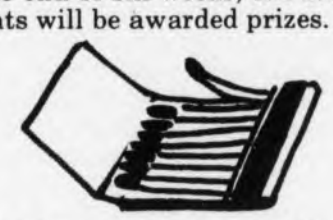
Weekly winners of the sixth grade writing contest

By Tonya Petersen and Vanessa Jones

The sixth grade is having a writing contest. The teachers will assign a certain subject for the children to write about, every week. When Monday comes, the stories are judged by the teachers and students. The students accumulate points for writing the best stories. At the end of six weeks, the students with the most points will be awarded prizes.



Matches are Not for Lighting

I know a man who uses 3,800 matches a year and he doesn't even smoke! His name is Rosewall Howard Porter and he's my Grandfather. Grampa Porter can experiment for hours, designing and creating all sorts of things out of match sticks. He has built bridges, ferris wheels, and of course his prize, a scale model of the Eiffel Tower. People ask Grampa all the time, "Why do you create with matches and how can you concentrate so long to build such precise models." Well, my Grampa, just smiles and says in his low voice "I just do!" But I have the inside track because he's my Grampa. You see, he once explained that during the depression, when Grampa was just a lad, folks didn't have much money and they would use matches to work out models and just pass the time of day. Matches were cheap and plentiful then, and still are.

Can you imagine someone spending four years to create the perfect replica of the first Ferris Wheel. My Grampa did and he motorized it with lights and little cabins just like the original. Can you imagine doing the research and constructing the Eiffel Tower, using the exact plan that Mr. Eiffel did when he built the real thing as a World's Fair centerpiece commemorating the anniversary of the French Revolution. Well, my Grampa did! Just like Mr. Eiffel, who entered his plans in a contest and won, my Grampa entered his final model at a Local fair and won the blue ribbon.

My Grampa spent three hundred hours, 110 fireplace matches, 1080 kitchen matches and 1200 toothpicks with a pound and a half of Elmer's glue before his Eiffel Tower was finished. He traveled twice to Paris to see the real thing! On the second trip, the director of the Eiffel Tower, a Monsieur Garoun, suggested that Grampa build a replica of the bridge that Eiffel built in 1884 in southern France. The bridge was the longest arched bridge in the world at that time. Well, my Grampa can build anything out of toothpicks and matches and so he did build that bridge. My Grampa is an "Eiffel nut" but a brilliant one at that! He says that Eiffel built all the big depots in Europe, lots of bridges even one across the Mississippi and that he did the framework for the Statue of Liberty in New York!

Grampa grew up in Idaho and Alberta, Canada where he remembers the blizzards of Alberta, when the temperature hit 50 degrees below zero. Farming was hard for the Porter family and when they heard that Henry Ford was paying $5 a day for workers, off to Detroit they went. Grampa says that in High School he learned to draft, to pay attention to details and to work hard but I think that his heating and air conditioning business that he worked in for forty years helped him to put plans in motion and have the patience to finish a job right. My Grampa is retired now, but he can't sit still. He still creates models and inventions that need his patience and his technological knowledge. Why as we speak, my Grampa is developing a new way to row a boat! This time, the materials are wood and a wine corkcrew. That's good, because you can imagine sitting on Straights Pond in 10,782 matches!

My Grandfather

Dick Seeley, my grandfather, is a wonderful person. He has lots of musical talent and uses it. He plays the clarinet, saxophone, and the piano. He loves to sing and has a great tenor voice. He directs the Marshfield Community Church Choir.

When Dick was sixteen to twenty-five years old, he had his own band called "Dick Seeley and his Orchestra." There were about twenty people in his band. Dick directed the band, sang solos, and played the clarient and saxophone. They played all over New England at colleges and parties. Dick had to give up his band when he transferred to Michigan.

Dick gives me clarinet lessons once a week. He gives me challenging things to play, but doesn't overdo it. Sometimes, during the lesson, he'll say, "All right, now I'm really gonna throw the book at ya!" One of the reasons that we have a good time at the lesson is because of his patience. He plays his clarinet with me when I make a mistake or when I'm not quite sure of the rhythm.

Dick has curly auburn colored hair and hazel eyes. My parents say I looked just like him when I was born. He is average height, about five feet, eleven inches tall. He is physically fit, a great tennis player, a good runner, and an excellent golf player.

My grandfather is loving, caring, and understanding. He is rather introverted. He is quiet in public, but not as quiet with his family.

Dick is the best grandfather anyone could have.

Transportation 1986, II: What we have done

(second of three parts)

With considerable justification state government is portrayed in the press as discourteous, expensive, inefficient, politicized, and power-hungry. By and large state government is less responsive to our people than local government, whose powers it seems always finding an excuse to encroach upon.

State government also suffers badly by comparison with the federal government, which although at this juncture approximately $200 billion per annum too big, has employees who are capable of returning a telephone call, saying thank you, and recalling now and then what the intended mission of their particular agency is. Long-suffering citizens of the Commonwealth know that state government often does none of those things, a state of affairs that hardly changes from administration to administration — which is one of the reasons reporters find it hard to resist pricking the self-inflated balloons of the Dukakis crowd.

Nevertheless, it is true under the Dukakis administration, as it has been true under previous ones, that there are in state service many dedicated professionals doing faithful work despite the frustrations. This should be remembered in discussing transportation, an issue on which as I reported two weeks ago, I believe the state has been fundamentally in error under several recent governors.

Within the context of "fundamental error," the responsibility for which belongs at the top, some correct transportation decisions have been made and some good transportation work has been done. This work, fractional though it be, is what we have to build on in the coming decade. Therefore, before outlining next week the transportation policies that I believe need to be implemented before the millenium, I will here briefly describe the major transportation decisions and projects of the last 15 years, and their significance.

. . . Under Gov. Sargent we completed the then interrupted I-93 between Medford and the Central Artery near North Station. Significance: This road is a blight in East Somerville and it has contributed to the overloading of the Central Artery, but it eliminated an important break in transportation between Logan/Boston and the northern suburbs to and into New Hampshire.

. . . At the same time Sargent decided not to complete two major highways: I-95 from Danvers through Boston to Canton, and an "Inner Belt" from Massachusetts Avenue in Roxbury through the Fenway, Cambridge, and Somerville to I-93. Significance: The Inner Belt would probably have destroyed the quality of life that makes those parts of the city such "hot properties" today. I-95 would have done the same to Jamaica Plain and other neighborhoods. On the other hand, the completion of the Boston to Canton section of I-95 would have provided considerable relief to the Southeast Expressway, and therefore to all Southeastern Massachusetts.

. . . Under Gov. Dukakis, I-95 was "completed" by being routed along Rte. 128 from Lynnfield to Canton, and I-93 was "extended" by being routed through the Central Artery and along Rte. 3 as far as Braintree. At the time this action was primarily a gimmick to get $40 million in federal funds to build access roads to Quincy Adams M.B.T.A. station. Later the interstate designation was used to garner federal funds for the proposed depression of the Central Artery.

. . . Under Gov. Dukakis work began on three major rapid transit projects: the extension of the Red Line south from Quincy to Braintree and north from Harvard Square to Alewife Brook, and the relocation of the Orange Line in Roxbury and Jamaica Plain to the corridor that had been cleared for I-95-south.

These three projects represent significant improvements, but I would argue that they were far too deluxe in their implementation. At $125 million per mile the four-mile relocation of the Orange Line will speed up the commute from Washington St. station to the Forest Hills terminus by exactly four minutes, while depriving parts of Roxbury of service altogether. Had the old Orange Line been retained, or had it been relocated to the then rail embankment in the Southwest Corridor, the half billion dollars that has gone into the project could easily have extended service to Rte. 128 in Dedham.

By the same token, had some of the 40 million 1975 dollars that created the monstrous Quincy Adams Station, and made the surrounding highways look like something out of Southern California, been saved for another day, we might now have funds available to restore the rail bridge over the Neponset River. We need to remember that a single station that costs $40 million equals 40 stations that cost $1 million.

Planners such as Sec. of Transportation Frederick Salvucci don't seem to appreciate that good transportation is essentially a matter of moving people and goods safely, conveniently, and quickly. In the projects they have undertaken they have tried to recreate the Garden of Eden, and in the attempt have frittered away a decade's transportation dollars without improving transportation much. A piece of property I own 300 yards from one of the new Jamaica Plain Orange Line stations has appreciated at least five-fold since 1979, but the commute from my Jamaica Plain office to my Marshfield office is harder than ever. That's the sort of skewed outcome that results when transportation decisions are made under political pressure and without a masterplan that takes the economic and environmental well-being of the entire state into consideration.

In general, it is in their quiet, less publicized work that our transportation planners have done best, and it is important for one as critical as I to give credit where it is due:

. . . Under Gov. Dukakis two important north-south roads (Rtes. 290 and 395) were built in Worcester County.

. . . Under Govs. King and Dukakis Rte. 495 was extended south from Rte. 95 to Rte. 24 in Middleborough.

. . . Under the first Dukakis administration, Rte. 95 between Danvers and the New Hampshire border was upgraded when saner heads in the legislature prevailed on the governor, who had opposed the project, to approve it.

. . . Under Govs. Dukakis and King there has been a major and long-needed refurbishing of the commuter rail system. Speeds have been restored to 50 m.p.h. (too bad they didn't make it 70), and service has been restored between Acton and Gardner and on the former Franklin branch of the late Penn. Central Railroad. The work the state did on the Franklin branch in my view deserves the approbation "excellent." Ridership is rising toward World War II era proportions, and this project could be (as I fondly hope) a model for the restoration of service on the Old Colony division.

. . . Under Gov. King several rail branches abandoned by Conrail were saved, including what is now the Bay Colony Railroad. Freight service on the Bay Colony between Braintree and Cape Cod strengthens our economy presently, and the retention of the right-of-way increases the likelihood of the return of passenger service to Boston.

Also:

. . . Under Chairman John Driscoll the Massachusetts Turnpike has been superbly and honestly run for the last 22 years. (Gov. Dukakis would be ill-advised to replace Driscoll with former Sen. Allan McKinnon of Weymouth, as he would like to do. McKinnon, who unlike many liberals, did not desert Dukakis in 1978, deserves a top position in the administration; but at the Turnpike he would always play "Phil Bengsten" to Chairman Driscoll's "Vince Lombardi.")

. . . The M.B.T.A. under James O'Leary is better run and service less of an abomination than under any other director in my memory. That service remains an abomination can be ascertained by a day in Toronto, where all forms of transportation are incomparably superior to what we know. One of the shortcomings of our transportation planners is that they don't seem to know what other cities and regions are doing. Gov. Dukakis keeps talking about Massachusetts being about to have a transportation system that is "second to none." To be blunt about it, he doesn't know what he's talking about. Getting back to James O'Leary, he and his people have been particularly effective in responding to emergencies (of which there are many) such as the fires that disrupted northside commuter rail service.

Having been blunt about Gov. Dukakis it is only fair to be blunt about Gov. King: Gov. King was a transportation "blowhard." He had some good ideas, such as building a third harbor tunnel and upgrading Rte. 44 between Plymouth and Middleborough. But he had no idea whatever about what it took to implement such projects in the real world. He therefore made a great many transportation promises and in his four years in office delivered on almost none of them.

I could run further down the laundry list of transportation projects undertaken in the last decade. (For instance, I didn't mention the well-executed but unimaginative reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway.) But the above is, I hope, enough to give the reader a sense of what we have been up to without boring him with abstrusity. Next week, after a short trip to New York during which I intend to give Pete Axthelm of N.B.C. sports an everlasting need for a supporter, I will undertake the daunting task of outlining what I think we ought to do in the coming decade.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Just clap your hands and it beeps

"I've found the perfect birthday present for you," the Dragon gloated, "and it only cost $5."

I sighed. "The last of the big spenders. How perfect is it?"

"No, really," he protested. "It's perfectly perfect. It's a key ring with some kind of sonic implant. When you want to find your car keys, you just clap your hands and it beeps."

"Intriguing," I admitted. "Will it help if I clap my hands and the beep comes from inside my parked and locked car?"

"Some situations are beyond help," he explained. "Just like some people. But think how impressive it would be at political functions. Every time someone applauded a speaker, your key ring would beep, and everyone would think you were wicked important. In certain conditions it might even make losing your keys a blessing in disguise."

"What I really prefer," I told him, "is a blessing that isn't in disguise. Still, at only $5 each, I might buy a bunch of these things and attach them to everything I don't want to lose. Like my glasses. Or my pocketbook. Or the book I'm reading. Or my shoes."

"I don't think you can attach them to books," he said with a perfectly straight face, " and I really wish you wouldn't take your shoes off in public."

He looked up from the advertisement. "You wouldn't be limited to beeping, either," he told me.

"There's a deluxe model that plays 'Hickory, dickory, dock, the mouse ran up the clock.' "

"That would be very impressive at political gatherings," I agreed. Actually, I wish they had invented these things years ago. It could have helped me keep track of the kids when they were little."

He nodded. "I can remember when you used to think that every small child should have a magnet implant and every mother should be equipped with a metal rod."

I smiled. "I remember, too. I think I might have gone for a patent, but I was afraid I'd start pulling in kids that weren't mine."

I shuddered, then brightened. But this beeper thing wouldn't present that problem. Just think how much worry we could have been spared that time when Skip was six and we found a note 'I have run away forever. Do not try to fing (sic) me. Your loving son, Skip.' "

"Right," the Dragon responded. "We could have just clapped our hands and found out he'd changed his mind, and he was watching television down stairs. If we could have heard the beeper over the Pink Panther theme song."

"We could have put them in cookie boxes, too," I mused. "And in candy dishes. Any maybe in the neighbors' flower beds. Remember how the kids used to steal flowers from Mrs. Wick and bring them to me for presents?"

"Actually," the Dragon added, "we might have been able to prevent Maureen from eating all of Duchess' dog biscuits if we'd been able to put a beeper in the box. At any given moment we could have just clapped our hands and located all the contraband in the house."

I picked up the ad. "Maybe we should buy several gross. We could give them to everyone we know who has little kids. I could have a lot of my Christmas shopping done this week."

The Dragon snapped his fingers. "I've just had an inspiration. Why limit them to people with little kids? Parents with teenagers and adult children should eat them up."

"How would you like to be able to clap your hands any time you wanted to and know just where all nine of our children are and be able to make a pretty good guess at what they're doing?"

I thought for a minute, then for a few more minutes. Then I slowly tore the advertisement into little pieces.

"I don't think I can stand all that blessing," I told him.

Members of the hit musical revue 'Ain't Misbehavin,' appearing Feb. 11 - 23 at the South Shore Performing Arts Center in Stoughton.

'Ain't Misbehavin' offers foot-stompin classics

Five leading song and dance stylists recreate the atmosphere of a Harlem cabaret of the 1930's in the Tony award-winning musical revue "Ain't Misbehavin' " to be performed at the South Shore Performing Arts Center in Stoughton, Feb. 11-23.

Leslie Barlow, Doug Esker, Boncellia Lewis, Stanley Ramsey and Terri White, all of whom were members of either the Broadway, National or International Companies of "Ain't Misbehavin' " participate in the celebration of the musical and comic artistry of one of America's most adored jazzman, Thomas "Fats" Waller.

Directed and choreographed by Arthur Faria, who was awarded both a Tony nomination and Drama Desk nomination for his musical staging of the original Broadway production, the revue also features William Foster McDaniel. McDaniel, who will occupy the Fats Waller seat at the on-stage piano, was Musical Director for the Broadway, West Coast, National Touring and International Companies.

Consisting of some thirty songs written or made famous by Fats Waller, "Ain't Misbehavin' " offers foot-stomping renditions of such Waller classics as "Honeysuckle Rose", "Squeeze Me" and "The Joint Is Jumpin' " performed by the singing and dancing ensemble.

Tickets for performances Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m. are $18.50, $16.50 and $14.50. Friday and Saturday performances at 8 p.m. are $19.50, $17.50 and $15.50; Sunday performances at 7 p.m. are $18.50, $16.50 and $14.50; Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m. are $16.50, $14.50 and $12.50.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

'The grotesque appeal of Garbage Pail Kids'

Unless you happen to be around eight year olds, or have a friend or family member that age, you might not have heard about Garbage Pail Kids. They are a very hot item.

Inspired by Cabbage Patch dolls, Garbage Pail Kids are stickers which come five for a quarter, plus a stick of bubble gum. Made by Topps, the baseball card company, they can be found in many convenience stores.

The wrapper shows a wide-eyed, idiotic boy with a control box in his hand and his finger on a button. The top of his head is blown off, in an explosion of a mushroom cloud. A collector will discover his name is Blasted Billy or Adam Bomb.

Garbage Pail Kids are collected, sorted and traded just like sports cards, movie cards or celebrity cards, but with a difference. They are marketed to quite young children and, to use the kids' word for it, they are GROSS!

Every fearful, nightmarish and disgusting image of modern childhood is portrayed. The stickers are extremely popular, very likely the biggest selling among non-sport cards since the Beatles cards of 1964.

Each sticker character has an alliterative or rhyming name, like Fryin' Brian (who is shown in a death rattle, strapped to an electric chair) or Nutty Nicole (who has a bone in her nose, a human skeleton at her feet and is biting the head off a live chicken). Each has a wide-eyed, cheeky face, showing distant kinship to the Cabbage Patch Kids.

A few themes emerge. Death, for instance. Various kids are shown either dead or dying, like Run Down Rhoda (steam-rolled), and Dead Fred (machine-gunned).

Some show typical childhood obsessions with bodily functions. Up Chuck falls into this category.

Another theme arises from current trends. The aforementioned Adam Bomb is symbolic of Kids' awareness of nuclear dangers, I suppose. Graffiti Petey and New Wave Dave, with their Mohawk haircuts and safety pins through their noses are other trendy kids. We also have Swell Mel, a boy doll dressed up like a girl doll.

I can hardly do justice to all the stickers. A great many of them manage to be disturbing, disgusting, clever and funny at the same time. Some, like Schizo Fran (a doll with two heads fighting each other) seem included for adults who are looking over their childrens' hobby.

The backs of the cards feature either awards or licenses that also appeal to insecurities and annoyances: Clumsy Award, Stupid Student Award, Know-It-All License and Squealer's License, for example.

Having shuffled through a few hundred of these cards and observed the glee they provide for some of my favorite friends of elementary school age, I recall but one reference from my childhood, Mad magazine.

For years Mad has been feeding the adolescent suspicion that adults are not only imperfect, but stupid, silly, hypocritical and dangerous. The older I get the righter Mad seems, and I purchase a copy occasionally, just to keep my adult life in perspective.

The Garbage Pail Kids, for all their grossness, provide a useful service by exposing youngsters to satire. Their effectiveness is proved by the fact that some parents disapprove of the stickers, which of course only increases their appeal.

People need satire in direct proportion to the irrationality, vice and folly of their society. It provides relief from what otherwise might be too oppressive to tolerate. Heretofore, kids haven't needed satire until puberty, when their hormonal changes demand it.

But now, life is harrowing at any age. The images of death and pathology the Garbage Pail Kids portray are part of the common experience of childhood now, regardless of background.

Children correctly believe one could, at any time, be blown up, shot down, psychologically scarred or kidnapped with nothing left behind but your picture on a milk carton. Garbage Pail Kids do for them what satirists like Juvenal, Swift and Twain did for their readers.

If we can't provide our children with a shelter from the crazy world we give them, at least we can let them learn the value of laughing about it.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church of Scituate)

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Delights to accompany England's favorite brew

The English custom of afternoon tea is a mad passion that began in the 17th century when Charles II returned from exile with a taste for the brew. By the turn of the century, England was importing 250,000 pounds a year and tea had become a must for everyone from dukes to farm workers.

It is Anna, the seventh Duchess of Bedford, to whom we owe the custom of afternoon tea. Most 18th century aristocrats ate little during the hours between breakfast and dinner at eight. The story goes, that the Duchess was feeling a little faint around five o'clock one afternoon and invited a few friends in for tea and crumpets, and so the fashion was launched.

Tea lovers of today don't find your ordinary tea bag at all "proper." A favorite at the Waldorf Hotel's Palm Court in London is India's finest Darjeeling, a favorite of PrinceCharles. Five ounces costs $9. Ceylon Tea was first grown by Sir Thomas Lipton in Sri Lanka (Ceylon) in 1890, and today estates in the cool gardens above 5,000 feet produce Ceylon tea, sold at $8.50 for five ounces.

I suppose no English tea table would be complete without marmalade and now, the peak of the citrus season here, is the best time of the year for marmalade-making. Temple oranges, grapefruit and tangerines from Florida and bitter Seville oranges make a wonderfully bitter-tasting jam. Two-and-a-half to three pounds of oranges, combined with three-and-a-half cups of sugar, will make about four pints of marmalade. Clotted cream and sweet country butter are also favorites at the afternoon tea. Here is how you can whip up your butter in no time at all by using your blender for

BASIC SWEET BUTTER

Into blender put 1 c. heavy cream. Cover and turn motor on high speed. Remove cover and blend until cream is whipped. Add 1/2 c. ice water. Cover and blend on high speed until butter forms. This may take from 1 to 2 min., depending on age of the cream. Cream that has been refrigerated for several days turns to butter faster than really fresh cream. Pour butter into small sieve to drain.

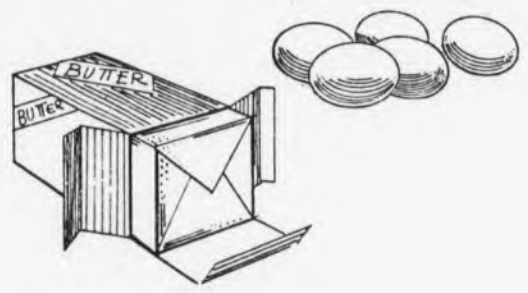
What tea is to the English, coffee is to most of us, and here morning coffees are more customary than high tea. Just before the holidays, Janet Ingram, Nancy Frazee and Phyllis Burns hostessed a Christmas workshop at EllieHoehn's home. Seaside Gardeners munched their way through the day on such delights as this

DILLY CASSEROLE BREAD

2 1/2-3 c. flour
2T sugar
1T instant minced onion
2 tsp. dill seed
1 1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. soda
1 pkg. yeast
1 c. cottage cheese
1/4 c. water
1T butter
1 egg



Combine 1 c. flour, with next six ingredients in large bowl. In saucepan heat cheese, water and butter until very warm—120-130 deg. Add egg and warm mixture to flour mixture and blend at lowest speed until moistened, then 3 min. at medium. By hand stir in remaining flour. Cover, let rise 'til double in size. Stir dough down. Turn into greased casserole (1 1/2-2 qt.) Cover. Let rise 'til doubled again. Bake at 350 for 34-45 min., or 'til golden brown. Brush with butter.

When served in England, tea is usually freshly brewed, strong and hot. It is served with milk, sugar or lemon and with a pot of water on the side to dilute it. Here, tea is too often lukewarm and weak, a pallid brew.

Some of the fillings for the dainty tea sandwiches could include

ALMOND-MARMALADE SPREAD

Blend 2T orange juice, 1/2c. orange marmalade, 6.oz. cream cheese and 1/2c. blanched almonds. Blend and chill.

CHICKEN-SALAD SPREAD

1 canned pimiento, quartered, 1/4 green pepper cut into strips and 1 stalk celery, with 1/4c. mayonnaise, 3 drops Tabasco and 1 c. cooked, diced chicken.

SARDINE SPREAD

2T mayonnaise, 2 tsp. lemon juice, 1/8 tsp. pepper, 1 c. sardine.

MUSHROOM BUTTER

La Leche League conducts survey of working mothers

Mothers who return to work find they still can breastfeed their babies, according to a recent survey of 567 employed nursing mothers.

The survey conducted by Kathleen Auerbach, a sociologist, lactation consultant and La Leche League leader, asked working mothers about problems they encountered with breastfeeding as well as whether or not they would do it again.

Despite some obstacles, the survey respondents said overwhelmingly that it is possible to breastfeed while working outside the home. Many noted that they would breastfeed again regardless of their employment status.

Most of the problems the women encountered were similar to those shared by mothers who are with their babies full-time. Fatigue headed the list, followed by problems with finding time to express milk and worrying about milk supply. Dr. Auerbach noted that many of these problems can be prevented if a mother is well informed about breastfeeding.

Support for employed breastfeeding mothers is growing, although many of the survey respondents reported negative reactions from co-workers as well as their own parents and in-laws.

La Leche League meetings are one possible source of both information and support for working breastfeeding mothers, according to Lou Ellen MacDonald, a leader of the Scituate-Norwell La Lache League group.

Mothers at group meetings share breastfeeding information as well as ways of coping with the demands of motherhood. Meeting other breastfeeding mothers boosts women's confidence in their ability to nurse their babies. All mothers — expectant ones, too — are welcome at group meetings.

For more information or for answers to questions about breastfeeding, call 545-0815 in Scituate or 659-1345 in Norwell.

my grandmother's house. We like to play cards when we are together. She lives right on a golf course and she loves to play golf.

My Grandmother has hazel eyes and blondish white hair. Once a week she plays bridge with her friends. Whenever she is in Cohasset, she visits my grandfather at the nursing home in Scituate.

We just love going shopping together. About three years ago my grandmother took my brothers to a wrestling match. She is also my travel companion because she drives an awesome car! She has great tapes that she plays while she is driving. She's even learning Spanish by her tapes!

And that is my grandmother My Travel Companion!!!!

David

When you first see David, he looks like an average boy. His straight brown hair comes down below his ears. He has a freckled face with big, dark chocolatey eyes. He is fifteen years old, but his small build makes him look younger. If you took a second glance, you would notice that he has strange habits, and that he doesn't talk. David is autistic.

David doesn't use any language, but he makes noises and he can hear. Even though David doesn't speak, he is a person, and he has feelings just like anybody you know. David gets sad and frustrated when someone is angry with him. He's happy when he gets a new book, or when you pay attention to him. His laugh is so funny that he makes you laugh, too. Sometimes he is irascible, but most of the time he just shows you his good-natured personality. He is affectionate, and he wouldn't hurt a flea.

Of course, like any other person, he has some annoying characteristics. He makes a mess and doesn't clean up after himself, he needs help with most everything, and he gets up in the middle of the night and turns on all the lights while everyone is trying to sleep.

David likes to ride his pony on Saturday mornings, swim in his pool, and sail in the summertime, look at pictures in his books, and go to school. Sometimes he watches TV. He likes to be around his family.

If you looked at the outside of David, you would think that he is strange, but if you ventured on and looked at the inside of him, you would realize that he is not very different from anyone else.

The Traveling Gourmet

My grandfather is a very interesting man. He has short peppery-colored hair and intriguing hazel eyes that have not been passed on to any of his nine kids. He travels to all corners of the world with his advanced medical company.

After seeing chefs from all nations he had chosen a hobby pertaining to cooking. He will spend hours preparing French sauces and other gourmet recipes. He loves to dine with fine wine. His interests in wine go further than that, he has a wine cellar and a large book to record all of his wines.

When my father was young my grandfather took my Dad and his family to live in South Africa for a few years. They traveled in a boat across the Atlantic Ocean. After that they did not live in one place very long, until they finally settled in California.

My Grandfather is a ping-pong fanatic. He has been playing for at least forty years.

I am very proud of my grandfather. He has a fascinating life. He loves his job, travels a lot, and has been a very good father and grandfather.

By Rebecca Kirk

My Mom

My mom loves the water and rightfully so because she's good at swimming and sailing.

When someone starts talking about boating, my mom will tell stories about adventures on cruises and storms at sea.

My mom enjoys reading books. When she starts one of her books, her big brown eyes go across the pages from dawn to dusk.

While mom is reading, it is very difficult to communicate with her at all because she's gone off to the wonderland of intrigue, murder, mystery or whatever books she reads.

My mom loves animals, especially rodents. Mom has two gerbils. When she shows her friends, most of their faces turn ashen.

These are some of the things that make my mom special and I'm proud she's my mom.

Candyman

My grandfather, known to our family as Nano, is in his seventies, and recovering from a stroke. He has a smooth, bald head, with a fringe of black and gray hair on the sides.

No has a crooked smile, but that doesn't matter, because every time you walk by he gives you a wink instead. Nano has chocolate brown eyes that twinkle like stars, surrounded by long black lashes. He has soft gentle hands, but fifty-five years of barbering have kept them youthful. His walk is slow and steady, like a metronome, with his shoulders stooped slightly. Walking has never been my grandfather's favorite event of the day, but he now has come to enjoy his exercycle every morning after breakfast.

After all these years his teeth still sparkle, even though he eats a lot of candy. He always has candy close by, like in his pocket. For Christmas my uncle gave Nano a five pound box of Fanny Farmer chocolates. Nano put the box of chocolates on a little table next to his favorite chair in the living-room. My grandmother is always saying, "Wait until after we eat. Then you can have your candy."

Well, Nano and I would sneak pieces of candy since the box was right there. You should have heard my grandfather chuckle when my grandmother looked in the box and found it almost empty. Of course he said didn't eat any of them.

ST. JUDE, Thank you. C.A.H. (O1/15-2/5)

OH HOLY ST. JUDE, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depths of my heart and humbly beg you to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance and help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. (Say 3 Our Fathers, Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised.) St. Jude, pray for us and all who invoke your aid, Amen. (This Novena has never been known to fail.) I have had my request granted. (This Novena should be said on 9 consecutive days.) JK (1/29)

THANK YOU ST. JUDE for answering my prayer. KS (1/29)

Showdown between town & state

Governor notified to close dump

The water commission, anticipating a lack of action by the state's regulatory agency, has asked the governor to intervene and shut down Cohasset Heights Ltd.

Calling for the closure as a measure to protect the town's public water supply system from further contamination, the commission forwarded a letter to the office of Governor Michael Dukakis Tuesday morning.

The commission decided last weekend that, based on advice of Special Town Counsel Michael Leone, the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) would not be following the town's call to close the Crocker Lane site. They anticipate that DEQE is actually considering an application from the landfill owners to expand the landfill operation.

The commission members agreed, Chairman Peter Pratt said Tuesday, that "extraordinary measures" were needed to keep the documented pollution source from further damaging the town's ground and surface water supply sources. A study completed last winter by Camp, Dresser and McKee indicated that contaminated leachate flowing from the private commercial landfill is filtering into a tributary of Lily Pond, the town's water supply. Since that study was completed in draft form, the commission has called for the closure of the landfill. Special Town Counsel Leone has been working since September on the order from the commission.

It was his sense, Pratt said, that the DEQE was not going to order a halt to the commercial landfill operations, but was instead considering the owners' request to expand the dumping area. Noting the state has traditionally not heeded the advice or request for assistance from the town, the commission decided to appeal directly to the governor.

The letter from the commission, drafted Monday by the three members, was hand carried to the governor's office Tuesday morning. Copies of the letter were forwarded to the Board of Selectmen, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Sen. William Golden, and to the offices of the state DEQE and Environmental Affairs commissioners.

"The Water Commission is not pleased with the level of action the DEQE has taken in overseeing the operation of the landfill," the commission stated in its correspondence to the governor.

"Special Town Counsel Leone called us this past weekend and told the commission to expect that DEQE was to issue a decision which would not be in the best interest of the town," Pratt said Tuesday, adding that the news convinced the commission to put the issue before the state executive. In late October, after a truck carrying suspected contaminates was prevented from entering the landfill site, Pratt requested the governor be asked to intervene. At that time, he called it a showdown between the state's repeated emphasis to find landfill sites, and the Governor's familiar promise to protect the environment and the public's right to safe drinking water.

Pratt said Tuesday it was "unconscienable" that the DEQE would even consider a request to increase the capacity of Cohasset Heights, when it's contami-

Plans developing for vacant town library

There are plans to convert the former Nantasket Library on Jerusalem Road into a retail business and office building.

Hull resident Edward Charter and Stephen Sheptyck of Milton are planning to renovate the vacant building. If plans are approved by the Cohasset zoning board, the building will house one or two retail businesses on the bottom floor and an office on the second floor.

Located at the corner of Hull Street and Jerusalem Road, the former Nantasket Library has been vacant for several years. It is owned by a charitable trust, Nantasket Library, Inc.

Charter and Sheptyck plan to purchase the two-story building and complete renovations to the interior. According to Atty. Edward Richardson, there are no plans to alter the exterior of the stucture.

There have been inquiries made to the perspective owners to include an antique dealership or an aquarium store on the first floor, and an office on the second floor.

Atty. Richardson said there will be no change to the outside dimension of the building which was constructed in 1906.

Plans to convert the building will be presented to the zoning board of appeals at a hearing March 6. At that time, Charter and Sheptyck will present plans to renovate the interior to inlcude a 21′ by 10′ room, and a 24′ by 26′ room on the first floor, and a 42′ by 27′ room on the second floor.

King Street hearing slated for Feb. 25

Selectmen scheduled a hearing Feb. 25 at 8 p.m. for town residents to discuss the proposed realignment of lower King Street.

Department of Public Works representatives recently visited and surveyed the intersection of King Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Engineers have devised plans which will be reviewed and discussed at the Feb. 25 selectmen's meeting.

Since state engineers looked at the site in November along with state representatives and local officials, more accidents have occurred near the treacherous intersection.

A Hull woman was killed the night of Jan. 27 as she was walking along a darkened King Street. According to police reports, there was a mixture of rain and snow at the time of the accident. Deborah Wall, 18, later died at South Shore Hospital after she was struck by a car while on the southbound side of King Street.

Police said that section of King Street, located about 100 feet north of Riddle's Market, was dark. The driver of the car that struck Wall, Scituate resident Ronald Shone of 4 Bonnie Briar Circle, has been charged with motor vehicle homicide. A hearing on those charges is scheduled Feburary 18 at Quincy District Court.

After three terms, Langmaid has chosen not to run

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Jack Langmaid has never been one to discuss his health problems in public, so the decision made last week was especially difficult.

After nine years as a school committee member, Langmaid announced he will not run for re-election. His health, which is making it increasingly difficult for him to attend meetings and remain active in the necessary behind-the-scenes research and work, was a major factor in his decision.

The fact that there are several candidates vying for the two available seats on the school board enabled Langmaid to make the choice at this time.

"I probably would have run for a fourth term," he admitted this week. "But with so many others interested, I thought it was a good time to get off the board."

From his Beechwood Street home, Langmaid explained how he dislikes discussions about his health. Yet, he noted, multiple health problems were his greatest obstacle in deciding whether to tackle another three years on the committee.

"I was seriously considering a fourth term," he said, explaining why he waited to announce his decision. "But my legs are just too bad. And the fact that some others are interested. I said, fine. If no one else had run, I guess I would have run again. But I'm physically not up to it.

"The fact is, you need a high energy level to do this job and to do it right," he continued. "Only if there is an active school committee, will everything follow down the line."

Langmaid noted, "I was more active in the earlier years. I was not as physically active in the last few years. I want to be fair about this."

When asked what his health problems include, Langmaid answered typically, "too many to talk about." The source of his problems is rheumatoid arthritis which was diagnosed almost 30 years ago when he was graduating from Williams College. He is now 51 years old.

His health never before limited his activity in Cohasset where he has resided since 1968. Eight years later, Langmaid ran for school committee for the first time. He was defeated, but joined the race the following year. His first term on the school committee was in 1977.

Cohasset's week . . .

Independence building sold

Selectmen sold the surplus town-owned property known as the Independence Building, to the highest bidder, Noel Collins of West Springfield.

The attorney plans to renovate the Elm Street building into an office space for himself on the first floor, and an apartment on the second level. He will pay $86,579 for the building set into a wall of ledge next to St. Stephen's Church.

Although Collins asked for an extension in the time he must sign a purchase and sales agreement with the town, selectmen refused. Collins requested the extension, saying he needed to determine how much property is with the building. An assessor's map indicated a larger plot than was advertised by selectmen. But the board refused the request, saying it was part of the bid specifications to sign the agreement within 48 hours and complete the purchase within the month.

The building has been empty since the Historical Society vacated the structure once used as a gown museum.

Liquor license hearing

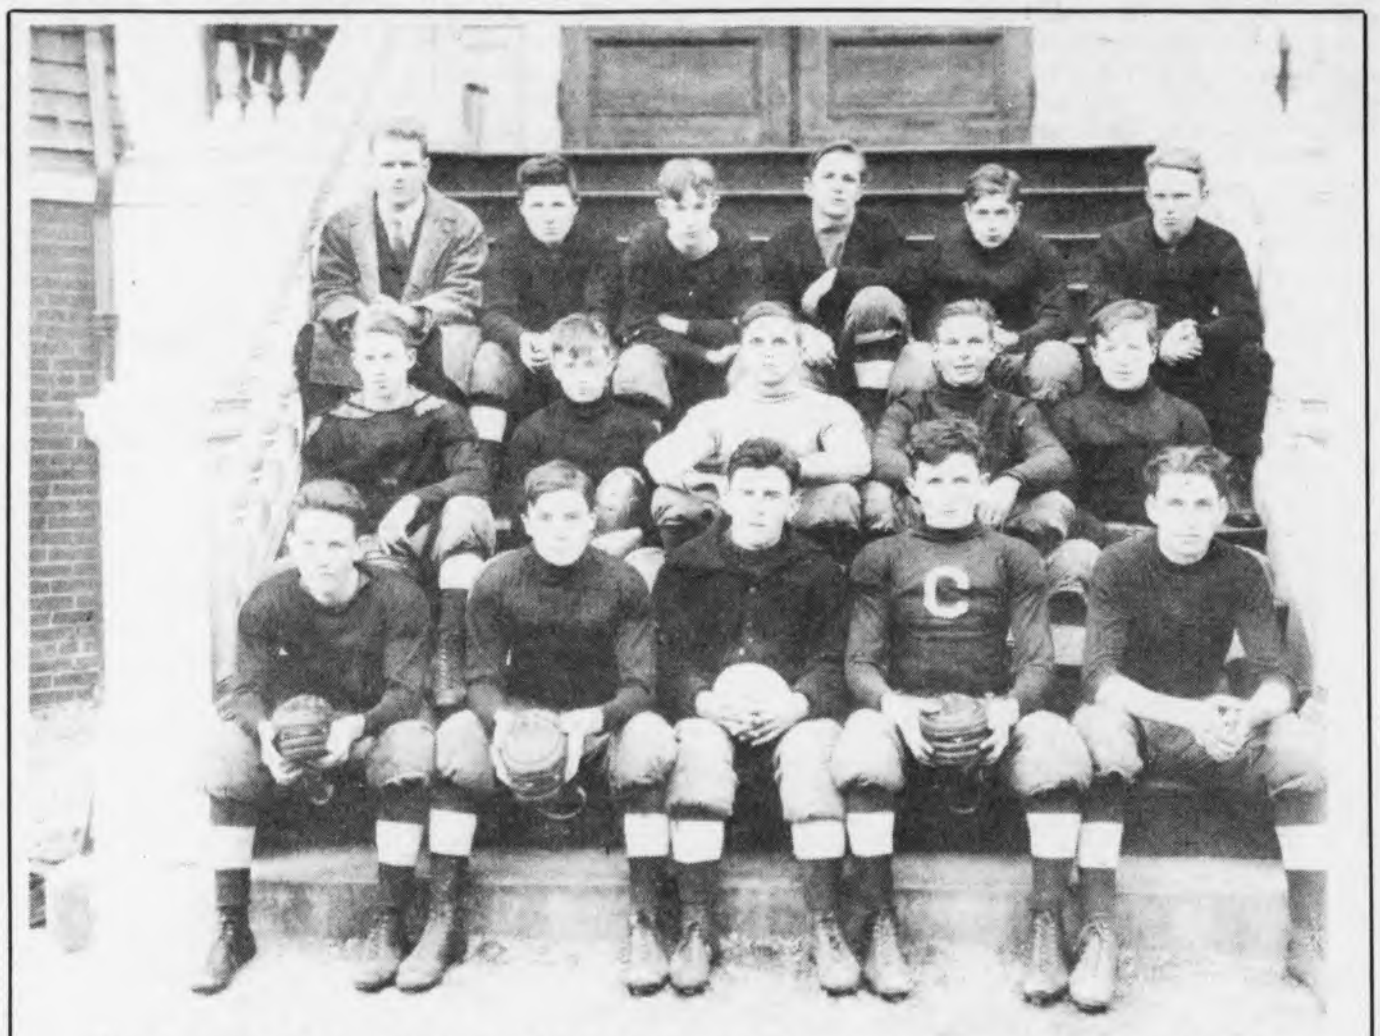
Selectmen have scheduled a hearing on an alleged liquor license violation at KoKo Island for 8 p.m. March 17.

Landfill committee

Two members are needed to fill vacancies on the Landfill Study Committee. Anyone interested in appointment to the committee, should contact the selectmen's office at Town Hall.

According to Chairman Sherry Becker, the committee is about to discuss the South Shore Coalition regarding a regional approach to the solid waste disposal.

Becker said that in order to begin the discussions, there should be at least one more person named to the committee.



Does anyone know what year this photo was taken, where, and of whom? Take a guess at this week's Peek at the Past and drop the answer at the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or the Cohasset News Store. Each week a photo is supplied by the Historical Society. Last week's photo was taken around 1848 before the railroad came through town. It was the stagecoach that ran between Greenbush and the Hingham Steamboat. The photo was taken in front of the Oakes' house between Edward Elms' home and the store owned by C.H. Willard. A.J. Antoine and Jeanne Replogle made correct guesses. The location now includes the candy store, the liquor store and the real estate office on South Main Street.

Old Colony comments

The Board of Health and the Sewer Commission have submitted comments to selectmen regarding the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation project.

In a letter to selectmen, the Board of Health endorsed the project to revitalize the railroad system. However, they cautioned that the Old Colony right of way passed within 50 feet of the Sohier Street wells and within 400 feet of the Ellms Meadow wells. An environmental report issued by the state does not include this information, the board warned selectmen. "This omission should certainly be pointed out in your comments," Health Agent Joseph Godzik stated in the letter.

The health agent noted that the Board of Health will do everything necessary "to bring this project to completion."

In a second letter to selectmen, Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis noted that the town anticipates using the former railroad bed from the intersection of the former line and Depot Court to the Hingham/Cohasset line for a sewer force main. This main, DeSantis said, will ultimately connect to Hull's wastewater treatment plant.

Selectmen twice reject Bildner liquor license

For the second time in three months, selectmen rejected a request that would allow the sale of wine and beer at J. Bildner's. The owner of the grocery-gourmet store said he will likely appeal the decision to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

By a vote of 3-2, a repeat of their earlier vote in December, selectmen decided that beer and wine was not a necessary adjunct to the Cushing Plaza store.

Store owner Jim Bildner said after the meeting, "it is really important what was said in this hearing. We believe our customers are telling us to have this license. We'll keep trying because that's what they want."

Atty. Charles Humphreys represented Bildner, chief operating officer of Windward Management, the new owners of Cushing Plaza. In the hearing before selectmen, Atty. Humphreys noted that his client would allow the town to further observe the store operation and would apply once more for the wine and malt beverage license. But after a discussion with Bildner, the attorney said his client wished to appeal Monday night's decision to the state.

In his opening remarks to selectmen, Atty. Humphreys noted that at the previous license hearing Nov. 12, "there was so much going on with the opening of the store, the application to the town was less than complete. We assumed it would be accepted."

Saying it was a "sobering experience" to be denied, Atty. Humphreys said it had given the town an opportunity to view the store's operation during the past two months. J. Bildner's, he said, is a high quality specialty supermarket. Demographic tests have provided information regarding the most - desired products for their customers, he added. Those tests concluded that the sale of beer and wine was a necessary adjunct to their business on Rte. 3A.

J. Bildner's, he said, would not be another liquor store in the town. The addition of a beer and wine license would provide the store with its desired aim, to provide its customers with one-stop shopping convenience.

The attorney stated the granting of a license at Bildner's would not interfere with the business of Sea 'n Cheese, a store located a few doors away from the supermarket. The Sea 'n Cheese offers fish and cheese, and sells various brands of wine and beer.

Bildner's was proposing to offer three or four hundred varieties of wines and 40 types of beer. They would not be "mass supplied" to the store, and would be contained within a corner display section of the supermarket, Humphreys noted.

The Cohasset store was scheduled to be the only Bildner's market to sell beer and wine. It is the largest store in the Bildner's chain.

Selectman Cliff Mitman questioned why the owners originally designed the store's concept around the sale of wine and beer when they had yet to be issued a license. "It seems a little bit backward," he said.

The lawyer agreed, explaining that Jim Bildner had never before applied for a beer and wine license in this state. "But in many ways, the town has the advantage now of seeing what the applicant had proposed," Humphreys said.

George Peters, co-owner of Sea 'n Cheese, spoke in opposition to the award of a license. After talking with a number of store owners at Cushing Plaza, "a significant majority of them indicated there was no need for an additional (liquor) outlet in the plaza. I did not find one that said an additional beer and wine license was a good thing," he told selectmen.

Speaking in opposition to his landlord, the store owner requested that selectmen extend their denial of a license to Bildner's.

Phil Alexander of Cohasset sided with Peters, noting that "big business versus small business is not healthy competition. It is big business versus a family-owned business."

Sine Pounder of Cohasset also supported Peters' opposition to the license. "I hate to see it impact badly by closing down another business," she said.

Phil Hall, a 38-year resident of the town, also opposed the issuance of a license. He termed Bildner's "the bully" who arrived from out of town.

"The Sea 'n Cheese deserves every amount of profit they can get," he said. "And I don't feel any other outfit has the right to apply for a license and take away sales this business relies on."

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur reminded those attending the hearing that the board can not deny a license based upon "the problems caused by competition. That's free enterprise and we can't make a decision on that."

As many people spoke in favor of the license for Bildner's, including the manager of Johnny Appleseed's, another Cushing Plaza tenant.

In addition, Cohasset resident David Henderson said he found Bildner's a positive addition to the community.

Selectman Diane Sullivan voted in favor of the license, which reflected her vote from Nov. 12. "Although I was not a member of the board when the Peters' were granted a beer and wine license, I do not see Bildner's request as any different," she said.

Selectman Frank England agreed, noting "unless there is a compelling reason not to, I think we should" grant the license. He noted that one-stop shopping would be a convenience for residents.

Selectman Mitman said he was voting to deny the license "in the absence of a compelling reason to say yes. I am looking at the availability and the proximity of the products." In both areas, he said, there is not a void in the town. Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and McArthur agreed not to grant the license.

Vacant town library

According to the attorney, the office and retail businesses are permitted uses in this downtown location. But because the change in permitted use requires a certain amount of off-street parking, the perspective owners will seek a variance or special permit.

Charter noted there is limited off-street parking available at the former library site, and they would like two more spaces provided in the front of the property.

Since the library vacated the premises, the building has been used by local organizations for meetings. It continues under the ownership of Nantasket Library, Inc. of Cohasset.

Atty. Richardson noted that the office and retail business would be a permitted use in the downtown business district. What is needed is a special permit or variance from the requirement for off-street parking.

The retail business would be located on the first floor with the office situated on the top floor of the building.

HOW TO EVALUATE COMPETING OFFERS

In a market as lively as this one, several offers may come in at the same time on a house that is for sale. If you're the lucky seller, it could increase the selling price of your property or allow you to sell it with more favorable terms than you had expected.

When faced with multiple offers, how do you pick and choose among them? Your realtor can help by setting up a chart comparing the main features of each proposal. First, there's price. Then consider the closing costs you may be asked to pay, such as loan fees or local transfer taxes. Be sure you understand any terms that might reduce your net profit. Can you work out a mutually agreeable date for you to move out and the new buyers to move in? How clean is each offer? Do any of the buyers want owner financing, or do they have another property to sell before they can settle on yours? Can you get reasonable assurances that the buyers will be able to qualify for the financing they will need?

Your agent can help you weigh the relative merits of each offer. Then you can accept or counter the best one, and perhaps line up one of the other offers as an alternate.

The professionals at HOME CENTER REALTY can guide you through each step of the home selling and buying process. Please visit our office at 57 Water Street or give us a call at 749-8833.

Langmaid explains reasons for stepping down. . .

They were different years in public education, he recalled. And the school committee was comprised of different members, most often concluding votes in a 3-3 split. It was a turbulent time for education and the local school board.

By the time he was elected committee chairman three years later, Langmaid said "it was pure hell" to be a member of that board. In fact, he recalled a proposal that was brought before town meeting, which requested the committee be reduced by one to eliminate the constant split vote.

"It was a really divided committee," he said, noting the dissidence on the board made policy decisions and changes difficult that year. "It was always three against three the whole year. It took a lot of time to push anything through."

He recalled one of the items voted through that year was the development of a health education coordinator for the schools. "There was a lot of fighting" for and against that position by school committee members, but Langmaid noted that Cohasset was one of the first South Shore communities to incorporate a health education coordinator into its staff.

One of the issues Langmaid promoted during his first years on the board was the scheduling of examinations at the conclusion of each semester. "I thought it was a good idea, so our students would be prepared for college where they have tests at the end of each term," he said. "Then about two or four years later, I talked to my son who told me all his tests were multiple choice or true or false. That's not an exam, that's a long quiz," Langmaid noted with his usual aplomb. "I feel strongly that if an exam is that way, the implication is that everything is black or white, right or wrong, yes or no. It doesn't get at the educational process. We are not analyzing the student's critical thinking process."

"I'm going to miss it. I'll miss the give and take, the searching for ideas, trying to make things work."

Jack Langmaid

He said the examinations should be reviewed "and made more rigorous at the high school."

Langmaid would also like to see more writing at all levels. "A student should be able to write a good, intelligent, grammatically-correct paper by the sixth grade.

"A lot of things take a lot more work by the teachers," he added. "Learning to write, for instance, you can't do by just standing there. You have to do it, with a lot of effort from the teachers. It takes dedication by the teachers. I'd like to see it so there are less students with each English teacher, so they will take the time to write, critique and review the work with the student. These things take time, and some imaginative scheduling to develop."

Not one to silence his feelings, Langmaid continued, "all I have read suggests that the more intelligent the teacher, the better teacher he or she is. They get the student excited and interested in learning. The public school sector limits itself to those people who are certifiable. And those people are certified at state colleges. And those state colleges are not selective. We do not get teachers from selective colleges, such as Smith. And that's the person who will succeed as a teacher, she'll be the better teacher.

"We have a teaching college organization now that is a bureacracy and is inbred," he added, noting that Cohasset teachers, nonetheless, are there because "they want to be. They are excited about working with children."

Looking at his past nine years as a school committee member, Langmaid remembers them as "productive and certainly happy except for the year I served as chairman."

He declined to assess the school system as he leaves public office. One of the items he would like put back into the budget is instrumental music at the high school, although a revamped program will cost more money and push the budget even further over its allocation.

He is optimistic about the new school superintendent, Stephen Hart. "I'm hopeful he will be a fine, active superintendent," he said. "I certainly believe he's done everything we've asked him to do, and he's done it well. Every new job he's been asked to do, he's been able to do."

The departing committee member noted, "we ask too much of our administrators. There are too few administrators. Somebody has to be there to read and learn about the new changes in curriculum, management and scheduling in public schools. We have to know what is new in schools and what should be brought into Cohasset. But no one has the time to do this. Our administrators barely have enough time to bring in their own reports."

Langmaid, who has a master's degree in geology from Yale, admitted he is sad about his decision to leave the committee.

"I'm going to miss it," he stated, joking that he'll really miss the lousy coffee served at the meetings. "I'll miss the give and take, the searching for ideas, trying to make things work."

He is optimistic that his condition may improve after operations to his legs and hips. "But it's going to take some time," he warned.

"It can be frustrating. It's painful, and it's been frustrating not to do the things I want to do. I haven't been out of the house since the last committee meeting last week," he said. "I don't know what I'll do. Maybe after the operations . . . I'll have to see how things go."

Golden discusses importance of regional cooperation

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

"The greatest challenge facing us is learning to cope with and manage change," State Senator William Golden told the Cohasset League of Women Voters.

Golden addressed the league at their annual potluck supper at the Old Parish House last Saturday night.

A Cohasset native, who now lives in Weymouth, Golden told the group of 30 men and women, "Everytime I come home, I wonder why I ever left."

Sen. Golden is perhaps best-known for his work on toxic waste disposals, cleanup of Boston Harbor and his founding of the South Shore Coalition.

The coalition (S.S.C.) is comprised of the coastal town from Weymouth to Duxbury and includes, Rockland, Norwell and Hanover.

Golden helped develop the S.S.C. to bring attention to the problems peculiar to the South Shore and to gain more attention for them in the State House.

He described the coalition as unique in this state.

"Nowhere in the state have 10 or 11 communities joined together to find common solutions to shared problems," he said.

These problems include transportation, disposal of solid waste, development growth and polluted harbors.

Golden said the South Shore was "going through a change unparalleled at any time.

Once a century there is a tremendous economic spurt. The South Shore was exempt from this in the last century. We didn't experience the impact of growth or change," he noted.

"We want economic growth, but we also want to control it. If there is an essential thing we have to deal with, it is managing change, both in our personal lives and in society," he added.

Golden said the towns on the South Shore are all at much the same level of development.

"I have tried to get the town of the South Shore to do something they haven't done since the revolution. Sit down at one table and talk.

"We need the voluntary organization of the South Shore to come together. If we don't we will drift farther and farther away from what we want the South Shore to be.

It will become part of the megalopolis from Boston to Washington D.C."

According to Golden the coalition will bring a higher percentage of government grants to the area.

It makes it easier for the secretary to look at one application instead of ten , he explained.

"What we have done here is not only define the South Shore. That doesn't get you a lot of clout on Beacon Hill. We had to come together to make it work," he said.

Golden stressed that he is not the S.S.C. — people are.

"It goes from town to town. Whoever is designated from that town chairs it. The meeting is held in the town hall," he explained.

He commended the league for their work in educating the public, but also asked them to work harder.

"The biggest problem I see is apathy. I ask you to double your efforts in the area of getting people involved in politics," he advised.

The S.S.C. is involved in a project to get the commuter rail once again running to the South Shore again.

They are looking for volunteers to serve on the advisory committee. If anyone is interested contact the Cohasset league to obtain more information.

Advisors approve summer police officers

Additional summer police help will be more beneficial to the town than another full-time officer, the advisory committee decided Tuesday night.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey defended his requests for an additional full-time officer, six part-time summer employees, a full-time clerical/secretary, a $5,000 cleaning contract and a part-time matron.

The committee voted to recommend the part-time help, the secretary, cleaning contract and matron but cited lack of evident need as they did not approve the additional full-time officer.

Kealey told the committee he needed an 18-man force to fill out the 2/4 work schedule. Six men are assigned to each shift with two off and four on. The 12-8 a.m. shift currently has only 5 men assigned.

"Originally (the force) had 18 men. A 2/4 work schedule should never go below that" Kealey said.

He also claimed an additional officer would reduce the amount of overtime.

"Anytime we go below minimum manning, (three on duty according to contract regulations) we have to have overtime," he said.

Kealey explained to the committee that the new officer could not be a floater. Under the contract he could only be assigned to one shift.

Chariman Jacqueline Dormitzer expressed her reservations about the appointment.

"It doesn't seem to be responding to a need in the community in terms of crime," she said.

Selectman Diane Sullivan responded that the selectmen were constantly getting letters from people complaining about lack of patrols.

"You need a certain level of coverage," she told the committee.

Sullivan also pointed out that selectmen had voted unanimous approval of this budget.

"I think these changes are long overdue," she added.

"I have the feeling the town will react more favorably to the summer help," Dormitzer said.

The committee voted 7-1 to retain a 17-man force.

The committee did approve Kealey's request for $14,400 for summertime help.

Election takes on new look each week

The field of candidates is ever-changing as the town approaches the April 5 elections. Candidates have until Feb. 27 at 5 p.m. to file their nomination papers at the Town Clerk's office.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England announced at the conclusion of Monday night's meeting he will not seek re-election to the board. He is concluding his first three-year term on the board.

Selectman Cliff Mitman has obtained nomination papers for re-election to that office.

James Gallagher of 19 Short Street, took out nomination papers for a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen. He was a candidate for the board in last year's municipal election and had been a member of the Recreation Commission for several years.

They are joining a potential field of candidates for selectmen which includes former Fire Chief Martin Dooley, Vito Conte of Hillside Drive, Jerome A. (Andy) Whitney III of 714 Jerusalem Road, Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road, John K. McNabb Jr. of Pond Street, and David Spencer Duncombe of 2 Sheldon Road.

There are two three-year seats available on the Board of Selectmen.

There were new additions to the school committee race this week. Thus far, incumbent Diana Kornet has obtained nomination papers for re-election. Jack Langmaid said he will not seek a fourth term for his seat on the school board.

Other candidates for the two three-year positions on the school committee are: C. Christopher Ford of 145 Border Street, James Leonard, 245 South Main Street, and Dane Hahn, 44 Black Rock Road.

Robert Davenport, 135 Sohier Street, and Mark Trask, 55 Bancroft Road, will challenge incumbent Daniel Cotton of King Street for a five-year term on the planning board.

Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis of Forest Avenue has obtained nomination papers for re-election to that board. This represents an attempt for a second three-year term on the board. He was originally appointed to fill one year of an unexpired term on the commission.

Ronald Goodwin, 196 Pond St., will face Robert Jackson, 9 Ash Street, in the race for a three-year term on the water commission. Incumbent Peter Pratt said he will not run for re-election.

Housing Authority incumbent John Muncey, 377 South Main Street, obtained nomination papers for a five-year term on that board.

There are three, three-year positions available on the Paul Pratt Library Board of Trustees. Incumbent Michelle A. Buckley has taken out papers. Cynthia Johnson Whealler, 619 Jerusalem Road, has also obtained nomination papers for the race. The three positions are currently held by Buckley, Barbara Power and Lucia Wood.

Vo-Tech hires P.R. firm through state ed. grant

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

For the first time in its 24-year history, South Shore Vocational-Technical High School has two public-relations consultants who aim to increase awareness of the school's programs among parents and students in the eight-town school district.

Russell and Helene DeCoste of Abington were hired by the school last fall after the state Department of Education awarded it a $3,000 grant for public relations.

"Regional school systems tend to have more recognition problems than municipal schools do," Russell DeCoste said in a recent interview. "People naturally tend to look no further than their local high school."

Hanover and Abington residents tend to be more interested in the school because the school has buildings in both towns, they said. Thus, they plan to concentrate efforts in the six other member towns.

VoTech offers 17 vocational programs and traditional academic subjects in its Hanover and Abington campuses. The DeCostes' primary job is to promote school programs through press releases and presentations at area junior high schools.

In addition, the consultants want to break the 'trade school' perception many have of modern vocational schools.

"Trade schools of old were the places where they sent the thugs of the town for their 'education,' " he said. "Vocational schools today are much broader than that, and it's important for them to overcome that image."

The husband-and-wife team combine knowledge of the schools, public relations and news media to spread the word about VoTech.

Russell DeCoste is a social studies and English teacher at the Hanover campus. He began teaching at the school in 1968 and has 10 years' experience as a guidance counselor at VoTech.

"I wanted to get back to the classroom," he said of his move back to the classroom this year. "In guidance, you spend a lot of your time with troubled kids. I wanted another chance to teach."

Helene DeCoste is also a teacher, but she brings knowledge of writing and publicity to the association through her years as Abington correspondent for the Brockton Enterprise. She taught a business course at Massasoit Community College during the fall semester.

"I liked writing features while I was a correspondent," she said. "Sooner or later I'll probably go back to full-time teaching, but I enjoy writing good, positive stories about these programs and about the students in this school."

After the application deadline for next year passes, the couple plan to publicize the success stories of graduates, the services VoTech students have offered area towns and the school's 25th anniversary in 1987.

"Many don't know that VoTech students helped build Norwell's fire station and the South Shore Natural Science Center," also in Norwell, Helen DeCoste said. "Some students have also assisted Scituate's public-works department on a number of special projects."

Plymouth County Commissioner Kevin Donovan is a graduate of the school, they said, as is Bruce King, owner of the two-year-old King Collision Center auto-body shop in Pembroke.

"These are some of the good, positive stories that have resulted from the school's programs," Russell DeCoste said.

VoTech offers a full high-school diploma based on state standards, but many don't know that the school's programs can benefit college-bound students as well as those who plan to enter the workforce upon graduation, they said.

Since it offers most subjects colleges require for matriculation, Russell DeCoste said it's possible for students interested in electrical or mechanical engineering to attend VoTech and decide whether their career choice is the right one.

"These programs give the practical side of the field. Students can use this knowledge as they pursue a college degree," he said.

All 120 students who graduated from VoTech in 1985 have gone on to jobs, college or military careers, they said. Usually, 15 percent of graduates enter college and the military, while the remaining 70 percent go to work in their field of training.

"Having been on both sides of the fence, I feel education doesn't get the media coverage it deserves," Helene DeCoste said. "This is our chance to correct that shortfall."

The couple said the school would remain largely unknown without the state grant funds with today's tight municipal budgets.

Because of this factor, "the school committee would be unlikely to request funds for public relations, he said.

Governor notified. . .

nant capabilities had been documented.

In the correspondence to the governor, the water commission requested the state executive render a decision to close the commercial operation, or direct that the operators contain, close and halt the environmentally-damaging discharges into the town's surface and ground water, "and that the public water supply of Cohasset be held harmless from the operations of Cohasset Heights Ltd."

"We are fully aware of the extraordinary nature of this request," Pratt stated Tuesday. "But we would not be making this request if it was not of the highest urgency and for the protection of the town's water supply."

"The DEQE is vey close, we understand, to making a decision on filings for expanded operations at the landfill," Pratt stated. "And we didn't think this should be considered without the town's water supply and land use an issue."

The commissioner added, "we are not attempting to politicize the issue. Should the governor take this matter under his consideration, we believe it is a matter of public policy that is utmost in his mind. The commission felt it is not an improper action when the administrative wheels of bureaucracy are not listening. We decided to take this matter to the highest level."

Advisors approve summer officers

He outlined his plan to the committee to hire six college students over a 10-week period for $6 per hour.

"I have already met with professors from Northeastern and they are all ready to give us students," said Kealey.

These extra men or women would provide additional patrols at the beach areas and at the bridge.

"This is something the Board of Selectmen has backed every year but it has never been funded," Kealey claimed.

After discussing the possibility of reducing the amount, the committee voted to recommend the request.

"We're more likely to go back and cut than go back and add," said one member.

The committee also voted to approve the position of a full-time secretary at $13,291 a year.

"All the police officers do clerical work," Kealey stated," including the reports going to court and the payroll."

The chief rejected the idea of a part-time secretary. "It would be better to have none."

The committee approved $1,500 for a cleaning contract.

Presently the force relies on a part-time student and themselves.

The total personal expense budget equalled $373,330. The general expense budget equalled $56,803.

Osgood School magazine to include students' thoughts

It's an attempt by teachers and parents to lift their children's self esteem. The literary magazine will incorporate the sentiments, thoughts, expressions and emotions of each student of the Joseph Osgood School.

The magazine, which is being produced through the combined efforts of students, parents and teachers, will boost the confidence of those who participate and those who read it.

That was the hope of the Literary Committee formed last year at the school. Parents and teachers wanted to create some lasting tribute to the students of the Osgood School. As they continue their education at the Deer Hill and later the junior/senior high school, the students and their families would always remember the work they accomplished as elementary students.

It was important to the committee members that no student be excluded from the magazine. A writing sample from each student will be included in the final version.

The initial idea was to produce an Osgood newspaper, according to Barbara Hislop, one of the parents involved in the yearlong project. But when she eyed a magazine produced by a Connecticut elementary school, she imagined a similar success for Cohasset students.

A number of parents encouraged Hislop and the idea for a literary magazine. Many volunteered their help, including co-room mother Carol Bishop. "The teachers were very interested in it, too," she said. "It is really something that involves many, many people."

In fact, one parent donated the paper to be used for the magazine. Parents have volunteered to bind the pages together, and the school's copying machine is being put to use for reduction of photos and printing.

"The paper for the magazine probably would have cost us between $500 and $1000," Bishop and Hislop estimated. Tagged onto all the other publishing costs, the entire project will likely total about $2,000, they said.

Parents quickly came to the aid of the project coordinators, as they volunteered to typeset the copy on the high school word processing computers.

"It's hard to say how many parents have been involved with this," Hislop stated. "We haven't really got into the typesetting and layout yet."

Tanna Kasperowicz of South Main Street, has been working alongside the parents, offering advice and critiqueing the project as it progresses.

"I'm amazed at the number of mothers who've had this kind of background," Bishop stated. "They all came forward and helped."

The project was given a boost of its own with a $250 Arts Lottery grant. The mother of one of the students, Donna O'Donnell, saw the information about the arts grant in the paper and she applied for it.

Artist B. Spencer Green displays her primitive rendering of the Osgood School. The painting will be displayed at Saturday's open house.

The Literary Committee is excited about the process they are involved in, and its pending results. One of the nicest features of the publication will likely be the cover, they said. It will be a reproduction of the B. Spencer Green primitive painting of the Osgood School.

Bishop noticed the painting in the window of the Kit and Kaboodle. "I really felt it belonged to the school," she said. "I talked with Mrs. Green, who had been a substitute teacher at the Osgood and her children attended the school. She donated the rights to the painting's copyright. We will also have the painting at the Lothrop House the night of the Wine and Cheese reception."

The open house will be held Saturday, Feb. 8 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Lothrop House. Proceeds from the reception will benefit the Osgood School literary magazine.

Along with the wine, cheese and conversation, there will be a sale of original art work by local artists, including the Osgood School painting by Green. Other featured artists include Sue DeMichele, Claffy Williams, Mary Lou Slotnick, Donna Green, Jeanne Replogle, and Gil Coyle. Several of their works will be exhibited at the open house.

In addition to the art exhibit, there will be a raffle conducted at the open house. Included among the gifts to be raffled are: a breakfast basket from J. Bildner's, a wine and cheese basket from the Central Market, bottles of wine donated by a "Friend of the Osgood School," a mystery raffle from the local doctors and dentists, and a floral arrangement from Reed's Country Way Nursery in Hingham.

Chairman of the fundraising event is Mrs. Mary Larson.

Members of the Osgood Literary Committee are excited about Saturday's fundraiser, and the school's publication. They envision the magazine as a fitting tribute to the imagination of children. With pictures and writings created by the students, the magazine will indeed serve its purpose - "to boost the confidence of the students of the Osgood School."

☐ David Kierce and Kate A. Collins have been named to the dean's list at Nichols College for the fall semester.

Kierce, a freshman majoring in management at Nichols, is a graduate of Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kierce of 189 S. Main St.

Collins is a freshman at Nichols. She resides at 2 Jerusalem Lane.

☐Wayne Sawchuk of the Wayne Sawchuk Company in Cohasset has been accepted for membership in the Builders Association of Greater Boston following a vote of the organization's Board of Directors. The announcement was made by Dale Halchak, President of the organization.

As a member of the Builders Association of Greater Boston, Sawchuk will also enjoy dual membership in the Home Builders Association of Massachusetts and the National Association of Home Builders.

The Builders Association of Greater Boston is a non-profit trade association of builders and associates serving 120 cities and towns in eastern Massachusetts.

☐ Dane Hahn has done his share to put our fair town on the map in the business world. He has been named to the position of national consumer advertising director of Yankee Magazine in Dublin, NH. He will operate his new job out of the Yankee sales office at 33 Union St. in Boston. Sure is nice that a grand magazine like Yankee has a Cohasset man at the helm . . .

☐ Carol Davis is staying with her sister, Monica Lee, in Petaluma, CA where they are making arrangements for Carol's coming wedding. Carol is a 1983 graduate of Cohasset High School and Mansfield Beauty Academy of Quincy. Carol worked at Hair Imports in Cohasset. She is the daughter of Linwood and Andrea Davis.

☐ Amy Doncombe of Cohasset recently competed in the Women's Eastern Championship Series Giant Slalom and Slalom races held at Attitash in New Hampshire Jan. 6-7.

☐ There is a nifty idea that has already taken shape that might appeal to some of you skaters (or would-be skaters). Every Saturday night there is Adult ice dancing, having group lessons, up at the Cohasset Winter Gardens. You will learn the basic steps leading up to waltzs, fox trots, tangos, swing dances, blues, rumbas, etc. Never too late to learn to skate is what they are preaching up there . . . singles and/or couples are welcome, the hours are 9:30 to 11:30 p.m. Beginners will be taught edges, stroking, three turns—if you are interested and consistent, you can be in inter-club competition if you so desire. Set your own goals, then progress at your own speed and capability. Call the Winter Garden for more information at 383-9447. Also good to know that there is public skating back at the Winter Garden, and it's the only place around that has it. Takes place on Friday and Saturday nights, call for more information on that too. Happy skating!

☐ Gia Barressi makes the news at Harvard again! The honor this time is that she was elected to be the captain of the Field Hockey Team next season! Congratulations to you Gia.

☐ That is the news from here for the week. Please be sure to let us know all about you and your family, that's what this Around Town is all about!

Judy Gilman returns with a supportive letter

(The following letter was written to Mariner readers by Hingham Mariner Editor Judy Gilman, who is at the Greenery Rehabilitation Home in Brighton recovering from a serious automobile accident. Judy has been moved to a special living unit at the Greenery which will allow her to make a better transition to living-at-home situations.)

Dear People:

First of all, I want to thank you for your much-appreciated support.

I am getting better, thanks to all my visitors and the Mariner staff and, also, most importantly, the staff of Brighton's Greenery.

It's just a great place and they do, believe me, have everyone's welfare in mind.

Also, all my mail and the edition of the Mariner every week really makes the time pass quickly.

It's nice, no super, to know that people think of you even while you're recuperating. The Greenery staff has taken some good cues from my behavior. When I say I wake up early they now know that I'm not kidding and that I can be gotten up for my daily shower at 5:30 a.m.

The aides are heard to say, "I went in at 5:30 and she was awake." Some habits die hard.

Along with walking, I also make my bed every day, make lunch on Tuesday, and take a shower standing up. The goal is progress all the way.

Once again, I want to thank you all for your kind holiday thoughts.

American Cablesystems strives to fight illiteracy

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Citing what it calls the increasing problem of adult illiteracy, American Cablesystems Corp. is planning local discussions, programs and advertisements in a campaign to fight illiteracy and encourage school-age children to read and write.

Executives of the cable-television carrier announced the campaign Monday in a press conference held in Cambridge. The campaign, to be called "Reading Is All-American," will begin Feb. 13 with a one-hour documentary on the illiteracy problem to be aired in all six area towns served by Cablesystems.

Central to the campaign are plans to encourage parents to shut off their television sets for at least one hour each evening to allow more time for reading by all family members.

The campaign kickoff and initial programming are being held in conjunction with the February school vacation.

"We believe cable television can be useful in calling attention to this problem," said Barry D. Lemieux, Cablesystems executive vice president and chief operating officer. "Starting today, we're asking that subscribers with school-age children turn off their sets. . . and have their children read and do homework without distraction."

The company, which serves cable TV subscribers in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Scituate and Randolph, began planning the campaign last fall after employees discovered that 46 million adult Americans —one in five — are now functionally illiterate.

The problem appears to be getting worse, Lemieux said. He cited estimates which claim that up to 70 million adults could be considered functionally illiterate — at a sixth-grade reading level or below — by the turn of the century.

The Feb. 13 documentary, "Can You Read Me," will be followed by local panel discussions of the problem and on how to improve reading, writing and studying skills.

School officials and library directors from five towns will take part in a live discussion following the showing of "Can You Read Me." The discussion will be held in Cablesystems' Scituate studios.

Scituate Schools Supt. John P. Kulevich is scheduled to take part in the discussion, according to Scituate program manager Wendy Forman. School officials from other towns will participate, but their names were not released this week pending confirmation, she said.

In Randolph, volunteer teachers will take to the airwaves during the school break and beyond to offer 15-minute extra-help lessons over the town's community channel, according to John King, the company's general manager for the South Shore area.

Forman said teachers are also volunteering to conduct reading-skills programs on Scituate-area cable systems.

Throughout the campaign, the company will highlight locally-produced shows such as "Scituate Library Presents" and "Literature for Children," a storytelling program, she added.

"Can You Read Me" will be aired on all 27 local systems American Cablesystems operates in the Bay State. Lemuiex said the campaign will be publicized in company program guides, advertising and customer invoices.

"We've always encouraged planner viewing since cable TV offers so many alternatives," he said. "You only need to take it one step further to encourage people to plan their non-viewing time wisely as well."

Lemieux said the campaign will allow greater use of local cable-TV production facilities while fulfilling part of the company's community-service obligations to towns in which it operates cable systems.

American Cablesystems began operations in in 1978 and has 300,000 subscribers here and in New York, Florida, Illinois and California. The literacy campaign will be introduced in those states in coming months.

Our thanks

The April election is certainly taking form as the weeks progress. There seems to be a healthy amount of competition in most races - far different than just one year ago when a majority of seats were unopposed.

There will be some changes in the makeup of town government in the coming year - that is inevitable.

For the first time in almost a decade, the school committee will be without the dedicated service of Jack Langmaid. Whether or not you agreed with his opinions on all matters, you must respect him.

Year after year, week after week, Jack plowed through the rhetoric and stuck to the basic facts. He is not a politician, and never favored double talk. Jack is a straight shooter. He says what he thinks, and he thinks a lot.

His health is preventing him from seeking a fourth term on the school board. Maybe he'll be back; we can only hope.

Maybe his health isn't the best, but his mind is.

Selectmen Chairman Frank England has decided, for his own reasons, to call it quits on that board. He served as chairman during the past year.

Frank is another public servant who does not easily tolerate foolishness and doubletalk. Frank could never be accused of beating around the bush. He is not afraid of the repercussions he might endure as a result of his convictions. He took each vote on that board as they came, one at a time. He did his homework, listened to both sides, and voted the way he thought best for the town.

Frank does not belong to any political faction in town. He's a dedicated veteran and businessman. No one 'owned' Frank - he was an independent voice on the Board of Selectmen.

We commend Frank for his fine job as committee chairman. He enabled the board to move through meetings with a minimum of wasted discussions. He listened, but never allowed the board to be sidetracked by irrelevant conversations.

With Frank at the helm, the board meant business. They accomplished much this year; the personnel reclassification study, employment of a new fire chief and executive secretary, progress toward a new town hall, and police and fire station renovations. He is to be commended for directing the town and its municipal leaders onto the right course.

Elegant gesture

There has been a disturbance in town as a result of an innocent gesture on the part of grieving relatives. It seems the relatives of a deceased town resident, Helen Barrow, requested that the American flag be flown at half staff last month in memoriam to their sister.

A veteran of the U.S. Navy, and an active member of the town's Democratic committee, Helen was a familiar person to most Cohasset residents. She was patriotic to a fault, according to her family. She loved the American flag and was dedicated to the principles which it symbolized. They believed it would be a fitting tribute to fly the flag in her memory.

Whether or not their request was proper within the town bylaws seems irrelevant at this point. We can't think of anyone who should rightly complain about lowering the flag in Helen's memory.

No, she wasn't a town, state or national leader. But she was as patriotic and loyal to this country and its flag as any prominent official.

So what if more people request the flag be lowered in the memory of others? Is it such a huge task to lower and raise the flag?

At this time in particular, when all flags are lowered in memory of last week's national tragedy, we can visibly see the importance and significance of this tribute. Surely we can take a few minutes to make this small, but elegant gesture for our loved ones from Cohasset.

Flag lowering in job description

(This letter was written to The Board of Selectmen. Ed.)

Dear Members:

Our family was deeply distressed to read in the January 23, 1986, Edition of the Cohasset Mariner, portions of a letter to the Selectmen, from Tree, Park and Cemetary Superintendent, Mr. Peter Laugelle regarding his complaint that he was ordered to lower the flags to half staff in memory of our sister Helen, on January 3, 1986.

We were especially upset that Mr. Laugelle chose not to perform his assigned duties while our family was in a period of bereavement. Had it not been for several of Helen's friends on the Democratic Town Committee, the flag most probably would never have been lowered. To those individuals we extend our gratitude and heartfelt thanks.

Mr. Laugelle claims that he has attended to the flags on a volunteer basis for the past 13 years. However, Item #7 (of the Tree, Park and Cemetary Superintendent job description, Ed) of his job description says: 'Oversee the placement of raising and lowering of all town flags and flagpoles'. This document further states that he is to do so under the 'direct supervision of the Executive Secretary and the general supervision of the Board of Selectmen'.

Perhaps if Mr. Laugelle does not see fit to fulfill the duties that his job requires, the Board should seriously consider replacing him with someone who is willing to do so.

Respectfully,
Jean M. Salvador

Let's work together for Town Hall ramp

To the Editor:

I wish to extend my apologies to the Cohasset Historic District Commission for the impression given by my recent letter to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen concerning the handicapped access ramp to the Town Hall.

It was not my intention to accuse the Commission of obstructing the construction of this ramp or of frivolously requiring its removal last April. My purpose in writing was to request of the Selectmen that all the town officials responsible for handicapped access to the Town Hall act immediately to rectify the current situation.

In fact, the Historic District Commission through its Chairman, Jim Sandell, had pledged their support to work with the Selectmen, the Building Inspector and the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee to implement both a temporary and a permanent solution to the problem. The Commission is on record as being in support of a properly designed ramp.

By working together as a community we can be responsive to the access needs of the handicapped in Cohasset.

A 'gentle man' prefers hometown practice

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

When told he is a true 'character' of Cohasset, Dr. Roger Pompeo laughed. "A character?" he repeated. Rather than interpret it as derogatory, the physician was pleased with the whimsical description.

For although he is a conscientious physician, Dr. Pompeo never takes himself too seriously.

His patients have known him for the 15 years he's been in practice as a caring doctor. During his year in Vietnam, he was called Gentle Man. Residents of Cohasset have long respected Dr. Pompeo as a good neighbor and a family man.

"I'm so ordinary. Why would anyone want to interview me?" he questioned several times prior to his conversation. But it easily became apparent why Dr. Pompeo has been anything but ordinary -to his family, his friends and his patients.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, Dr. Pompeo explained that his life during the following years has been "very lucky. All I can say is that God blessed me, and I'm a very lucky man. I love my life," he said.

Life for Roger Pompeo was idyllic in high school where he played football and later married Ann Chatterton, the sister of his best friend, Clark. The athletic director for the Cohasset schools and Dr. Pompeo have remained best of friends.

It was during undergraduate studies at Bowdoin that Pompeo decided to become a doctor. Although he had yet to begin his medical studies, the school's physician imparted a bit of knowledge that has remained with Dr. Pompeo throughout his career.

"Dan Hanley at Bowdoin College told me, 'you know, doctors are just like everyone else. They put on their pants one leg at a time.' I have always remembered that - because it's true. We're no better than any of our patients," he added.

It was in 1967, with a wife, two daughters and a third on the way, when Dr. Pompeo decided to volunteer for overseas duty in Vietnam. "Why did I go to Vietnam when I could have been stationed on a carrier or at Pearl Harbor? I guess it was the adventure -it was exciting, and I wanted that educational experience of meeting new people. I figured if I was going to put in the time, I might as well make it educational. You have to understand me, I couldn't pass up meeting like these," he said.

He was in the Navy, supervisor of a medical clinic "similar to a M.A.S.H. outfit," he said. The surgical unit was located at the edge of the Delta on the border of South Vietnam. It was a rare occasion when an American soldier was seen in this area of the war-torn country.

"We operated on South Vietnamese and North Vietnamese. If they were wounded and needed help, we helped them. It didn't matter what their dog tag said," he recalled. The 27 year-old surgeon was there to assist the South Vietnamese, people he continues to hold in high regard.

"They are among the most gentle, sensitive, and proud people I have ever met. They are truly wonderful people," he noted.

The first thing the young doctor did upon his arrival in the jungle was to question a few of the American veterans - men who had been stationed in Nam for two or three years. "I asked them what I had to do to stay alive. And they told me. It saved my life," Pompeo said, remembering the death of two of his corpsmen who worked alongside him. Because of "stupid" mistakes they were killed. Dr. Pompeo vowed that would not happen to him.

"We were shot at - there were no guarantees that because we were doctors we wouldn't be killed. Sometimes I had corpsmen stationed outside the surgical tent. The Viet Cong were sometimes 50 yards away. Most of the time, I operated with a 45 revolver tucked under my surgical gown," he stated.

As the physician explained, "my experiences were a little different from the combat soldier's. I never once used my gun. I was busy fixing up Cambodians, South Vietnamese, North Vietnamese and United States soldiers. My experience was rewarding. I saw the Cambodians and the Vietnamese as people with strong family ties, with love and laughter. I saw the sacrifices they were making. If I were to discuss Vietnam with a combat solider, we would be at opposite ends in how we regard the Vietnamese."

The 27 year-old surgeon made many friends during his year in Vietnam. He returned with many stories.

"I was assigned an interpreter, a young Vietnamese girl. I had gone on my medical rounds, and it was time to make my 'social rounds' where I talked with my patients and their families. In Vietnam, the families would stay in the hospital with the wounded person. Throughout my rounds, I continually heard them call me 'Ong Nghe' which I had never heard before. I asked my interpreter what it meant, and she said, 'gentle man.' That's the best compliment I have ever had in my life. If I could leave one impression in my life, that would be it," he said, smiling.

Dr. Pompeo left Vietnam in 1968, returning to his wife and daughters, thinner, but in good spirits. "My wife said I changed a bit, but I didn't suffer the depression that others did," he remarked.

It had been a sad parting from his interpreter and friend, whom he assumed he'd never see again after the Communist takeover. But he received a letter from her in 1980, asking the Pompeos to sponsor her quest for freedom to the United States. She had traveled by boat from South Vietnam to Thailand.

"I was pretty busy in my practice then," the doctor explained, "so my wife Ann took over the responsibilities of sponsoring Co Cuc. She arrived one cold winter day at Logan Airport by herself. Ann had brought along warm clothes and a coat. For the next six months, Ann helped Cuc get into school and find a job. She spent six months living with us.

"Well, after a while in her job, she met and then married a man she met in Boston. He was actually from the same province as Cuc. We were invited to their wedding. They both have jobs, and had a baby. We held the baby's first birthday at our house. They named her Ann, after my wife," he continued. "We kid Cuc a lot because her baby is already an American citizen, and after five years, she was not," he added.

About ten years ago, Dr. Pompeo was named Cohasset's Medical Examiner. It is a responsibility he accepts out of obligation, not pleasure. "I got started in this to help out the Cohasset police and the people in this town. Cohasset is geographically separated from the rest of Norfolk County, so we are like a separate district. I figured I might help expedite the proceedings for the Cohasset police and the families involved," he said.

As Medical Examiner, Dr. Pompeo is called at any hour to rule on the cause and manner of a sudden death. "I don't like the job, and I didn't get into this for the excitement. It's a very difficult job -to see the tragedies I have seen is really quite horrible. But I try to do everything to ascertain the cause and manner of death. My conclusions will frequently have a bearing on the insurance policy and the survivors," he added. "It's a stressful job with bad hours. I don't like it, but I don't like a shallow investigation. The role of the Medical Examiner is to rule out suspicion of foul play. After that, I must think of the family."

What Dr. Pompeo loves most is his family practice in his hometown. "I had a lot of questions about practicing right in my hometown. But I love it. I see my friends all the time - guys I played football at the high school with. It's much more enjoyable knowing the people you are treating," he said.

Among his patients are former classmates, neighbors, relatives, and his childhood babysitter. "She's great," he noted. "She makes me the best apple pies. I get a lot from my patients. There's a lot of love in this small office."

This family practitioner still makes house calls to many of his patients. He admits the most difficult part of caring for neighbors and friends, is death.

"They all start out being my patients, but you couldn't believe how they grow on you and you love them. You develop such close relationships with them, love them and it's very difficult to go through a terminal illness with them. Their death and their problems affect me emotionally. The burden is tremendous - it wears on you. That's why it's so important to take a little break," he said, explaining the weekend 'getaway' he had planned with his wife for their anniversary.

"Unless you're a physician, you can't appreciate the burden we feel for someone," he added.

There are many positive elements in having a local family practice, Dr. Pompeo insisted. One of his favorite stories embodies that philosophy.

The patient's name was Domenic (accent on the last syllable, Dr. Pompeo noted). "He was a great Italian man in his 80's. Domenic had many serious medical ailments, and was also suffering from terminal cancer," the doctor explained. "He was in the hospital for many months and finally went home. An insurance check came to his house that was meant for me, but he accidentally spent it. He apologized and felt very bad about it. He said he'd pay me back $20 each week until the entire amount was paid. Well, every week I received a check for $20 until he owed me $40. He came in and gave me a check for $20 and said, 'no more.' I asked him why, when he owed me another $20. He told me, 'if I still owe you money, you won't let me die.' I laughed (and he still does). He was so great. We kept him alive a long time after that."

The physician noted that his life has not been so very interesting. Others would surely disagree.

"But I love it," he concluded.

Cohasset special needs students compete in Olympics

A group of eager young skaters will represent Cohasset Special Olympics Feb. 5-7 when they compete in the Winter Games of Massachusetts Special Olympics at Eastover in Lenox.

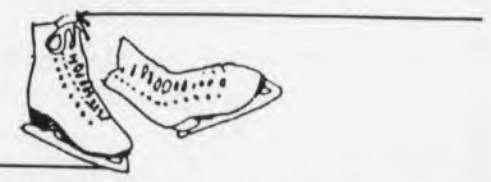
The seven boys and one girl from several area towns are all students at Osgood and Deer Hill Schools in Cohasset or South Shore Collaborative classes. Matthew Grassey, Jay Nothnagle, Ryan Wiggs, and Peter Plante of Cohasset, Michael Goodhue of Norwell, Joey Hegner of Hull, Brook Miele of Quincy, and Paul Mullare of Hanover are part of a larger group of special needs students who have been training for an hour every Monday morning since mid-November.

They are coached by Katy Hayden, teaching pro at Cohasset Winter Garden, their classroom teachers Toni Jillson and Claire Lund, classroom assistants, CHS student Chip Muncey and members of the CHS hockey team. The ice time and skate rental are donated by the management of Winter Garden.

Four of the Cohasset skaters went to the Winter Games last year, but for the others, this will be an exciting new experience traveling away from home and competing against athletes from all across the state.

The Cohasset team is entered in developmental and speed skating events, but in addition, the Winter Games will offer figure skating, floor hockey, and cross-country and downhill skiing, as well as social activities for persons with special needs ages 8 through adult.

This is the fourth year of skating classes for special needs students at Winter Garden. Some started unable to walk unassisted on the ice. Now many of the athletes race across the ice skillfully and in control.



The goal of Special Olympics is to train persons with developmental disabilities to participate in athletics. The families of the Cohasset skaters encourage these Winter Games because skating is a sport these youngsters will be able to enjoy now and as adults. Cohasset Special Olympics also sends a team to the spring Track and Field Meet and the State Summer Games. The team is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, the Cohasset Sports Boosters Club, and private donations.

Best of luck to the Cohasset Speed Skaters!

It's a group that began just last year, but already they've earned the respect and honor of competitors throughout the area.

The Winter Garden I.S.I.A. team (Ice Skating Institute of America) recently returned to Cohasset loaded with medals and ribbons earned in a New York competition.

The Winter Gardens group is comprised of skaters of all ages. Although it is a "building team," according to Coach Marcia Breen, the members have already established themselves as serious contenders.

According to their coach and choreographer, each of the 28 skaters glided away from the Lake Placid competition with at least one medal. Cohasset's Leslie O'Grady received five medals in the weekend competition.

Breen was proud of the Winter Garden's tot precision team which wowed the audience in New York during the weekend of Jan 17. The children, the majority of whom are six years and under, were named the Lake Placid 1986 I.S.I.A. champions in their category. They performed to 'Annie" complete with pinwheels and colorful costumes.

Erin Singleton, 4, of Hingham, was the youngest competitor at Lake Placid. The most senior competitors were husband and wife, Ann Healey and John Landrey of Hingham.

The production team of 14 skaters competed against much larger teams with 30-40 members, Breen explained. Despite the overwhelming odds, they earned a silver second-place trophy for their performance of "The Wizard of Oz." Once again, the skaters were equipped with colorful costumes to enhance their performance.

"We were the smallest group there, but we got the most applause," Breen said this week. Costumes for the skaters were created by Nancy Stevenson and Nancy Dietze of Scituate. The team also borrowed costumes from Diane Purdy's dramatic workshop.

According to Breen, who has choreographed skating competition for more than 20 years, the I.S.I.A.'s theme is "participation, not elimination." They encourage skaters of all ages and abilities. It is less competitive and more affordable for the average skater than the 'serious' competition of the U.S. Figure Skating Association. "They're more serious than this group. The Winter Gardens has the Silver Blades in the U.S.F.S.A., and some of our skaters feed into that program," Breen explained. "But if it wasn't for the I.S.I.A., our older couple wouldn't compete at all. And that is their dream. They love it."

The I.S.I.A. team practices at least once a week under the direction of Kate Hayden.

"A lot of them practice twice a week," she noted, adding that they paid for the cost of the trip to Lake Placid. Fundraisers helped defray the expense, along with a raffle sponsored by Winter Gardens owner Jim Hoban. The owner even supplied food and soft drinks on the bus during the several-hour journey into New York.

"There's no age restriction. And we just started the team competitions this year. We're just building, which is why I'm so proud of what they did in Lake Placid," Breen said. "That theme of participation, not elimination is so important.

"The kids are so happy," she added. "Even though some did not win individual medals, everyone left with a medal for team competition. They were all happy to participate in the competition."

Their next I.S.I.A. competition will be held March 1 and 2 at the Bay State Winter Games in Williamstown.

Leslie O'Grady, two gold, two silver, one bronze
Kerry Williams, one silver
Jennifer LaPointe, one silver
Laura Haly, one gold, two silvers
Katie Leeber, one silver, one bronze
Kim Ward, two silver
Cathy Robinson, two silver

Scituate Etrusco Group aids recuperative efforts

To the Editor:

If you live in one of the eight towns served by The Scituate Etrusco Associates, you should know that the organization is there to help you.

When you need an alternative to a nursing home for a loved one, the Etrusco Group provides beds and many other recuperative or maintaining aids needed to keep your relative at home, not only in a familiar surrounding, but with caring family members close by.

Many hospital patients may reduce their stay and decrease expenses by borrowing recuperative equipment for home use at no charge. Crutches, wheel-chairs, commodes and walkers, for example, are available to be borrowed to help the injured, ill or aging individuals. Their doctor, nurse or therapist must be consulted for the proper use of borrowed items.

People do not have to be a member of Scituate Etrusco Associates to avail themselves of any of the provided equipment, only to reside in Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke or Scituate. They must pick up the equipment or send an "Agent" to act in their behalf to choose the items they want to use at their home. These aids are available for temporary use, and if there is a long-term need for them, other arrangements should be made.

Besides the small membership fee donated for active membership, contributions are received all year long to help the organization continue to provide this service at no charge.

The most meaningful are sent in memory of loved ones who have passed on. In 1985 there were 51 good people in whose name donations were sent to Etrusco.

They are as follows: Robert H. Best, Joseph Bethony, Ted Borsack, Gertrude Spencer-Brooks, Frank Caristi, Katherine M. Collins, Agnes Lehr-Devine, Mary B. Donovan, Anna I. Duggan, Russell H. Town growth control

To The Editor:

At least one Sewer Commissioner has stated that his real interest is in preventing growth in the town, and sees minimum sewers as a means to that end. Many opponents of the Metcalf and Eddy plan (to build our own sewage treatment plant) have openly and strongly expressed that view.

Nevertheless, the town must address its pollution problems, and delay only increases the final cost of the adequate solution which eventually must be adopted.

Growth is best controlled by adequate planning and zoning, and effective enforcement — not by providing inadequate town services — whether it be schools, roads, water, sewage disposal, police protection or whatever. The quality of the town surely is more important than whether a few currently unuseable lots become useable.

R. M. Campbell
Old Pasture Rd.

A reply from the Sewer Commission chairman

To the Editor:

I can't, nor do I believe that the editorial staff of the New York Times could, keep up with Mr. R. N. Campbell's voluminous correspondence. I will, however, respond to Mr. Campbell's January 30, 1986 lament in the Cohasset Mariner.

On November 29, 1982 Cohasset indeed "jumped ship" and abandoned the constraints of the Agreement for Judgment. That unfortunate ship was sinking fast with the future of Cohasset aboard. I note that we are not alone in our distaste for such documents. Mr. Bellotti whose Attorney General's Office drafted ours, concurred with Cohasset when he recently declared, "I don't believe in Agreements for Judgment!" These memorable words were utterd concerning the clean up of Boston Harbor. Cohasset's action on November 29, 1982 was dictated by the document itself, for even its flawed script prescribed that all parties must adhere to the provisions of the Clean Waters Act.

In April of 1983 Cohasset rejected a design advance of $1,000,000 for the ill-advised project. Cohasset could not accept an advance for a plan lacking.

1. MEPA review
2. NEPA review
3. A completed dye study of the proposed ocean outfall
4. A complete analysis of alternatives to conventional waste water disposal
5. A completed FNSI [EPA issued Finding of No Significant Impact]

We were not about to contribute $500,000 of our own precious money on a three foot pile of blueprints that we knew would never be used. In fact on June 18, 1985 the Regional Administrator, EPA Region I, stated, "Cohasset's vigorous effort to achieve the most cost-effective alternative, and to impress upon the Commonwealth and the EPA that it is doing so, is not only appropriate, but is in fact required by the statute and regulations." This is the type of offer that the town can and should enthusiastically refuse. Good riddance!

Most fortunately our large conventional waste water treatment plant has been removed from the DWPC/EPA priority list. It has been replaced by the Cohasset-Hull Intermunicipal Project at an immense saving to the Commonwealth, the Federal Government, and the Town. More significantly for the long term impact on Cohasset, the Ward Engineering on-site waste water system rehabilitation plan has been placed on the "extended" portion of the priority list—a list for projects to be funded in the future.

I think that there is a lesson here for Mr. Campbell and perhaps a good review for us all. In America the community determines its own future. A community determines what projects it can afford and best fit its environment.

Perhaps, in other countries it is done differently. Cohasset's vigilance, tenacity and belief that only the Town can determine its destiny have prevailed. This Town will participate in waste water projects that solve problems affordably, effectively and within the context of the law. We will never participate in projects that exist only to benefit major engineering firms or other special interests.

Sincerely,
Charles DeSantis, Chairman

Cohasset midwives assist in home births

By Deena Strauss Beals
Mariner Staff

Johnna Albi gave birth to her daughter, Ariana, at her Marshfield home Nov. 17. It was truly a family event. Five-year-old Gabriel was at home playing as usual and going in and out of his mother's room to watch her progress. Louis Vanrenen, Johnna's husband, actually caught the baby with the aid and coaching of the midwives.

Johnna teaches natural food cooking classes in her home in Marshfield, and Louis is an acupuncturist, whose office is in Hanover. So it is not surprising that this couple would opt for a non-traditional birth.

When asked why she chose to have a homebirth, Johnna responded, "I wanted to be in an atmosphere conducive to a normal birth. I figured my body was able to do what it is made to do, so I wanted to take that responsibility, and I was ready to take the consequences if something went wrong."

Johnna had prepared conscientiously for her homebirth. She watched her diet during pregnancy, had regular prenatal checkups and took a refresher course in natural childbirth. She also contacted the local ambulance when she went into labor and arranged to have a backup physician in case of an emergency.

She chose Dr. Leo Sorger of Malden because of his supportiveness of natural childbirth.

Fortunately, Johnna's labor and delivery progressed very well at home. Said Johnna of her labor, "I enjoyed the freedom I had at home. After my labor began, Louis and I went for a walk outside and that really got my contractions going."

Johnna said she felt that she had total freedom to experiment with different positions during her labor, something she would not have had in many hospitals. In fact, Johnna gave birth while standing next to the bed and holding on to the bed post. She found this to be most comfortable and welcomed the assistance of gravity. Hot compresses were applied to Johnna's perinneum during labor for comfort and to prevent tearing. The nostrum worked very effectively.

After Ariana arrived, she was weighed, measured and inspected by all present. And the next day, Dr. David Morin, a Scituate pediatrician, came to the Albi-Vanrenen home to examine Ariana.

The midwives' job does not end when the birth is completed. The mother is always seen later for a post-partum examination. The three midwives who attended Johnna's birth were Kate Caldwell of Cohasset, Madeline Fooden of Plympton and Lista LeQuire of Cohasset.

Peggy Gallagher of Kingston also planned to have a home birth. Having gone through all of the preliminary classes and preparations, she felt confident that she could deliver her baby at home.

Peggy's feeling about homebirth is that "people shouldn't do it [have babies] at home unless they have lots of support and help and are willing to assume the risks," she said.

On June 15, Peggy went into labor. After laboring at home for five hours with the support and assistance of her midwife, Madeline Fooden and her friend, Pine Dubois of Kingston, they decided that the delivery would be too complicated to risk at home.

The baby was in a breach position and did not appear to want to turn around. Madeline and Pine accompanied Peggy to the hospital and provided labor support throughout her labor and delivery. Iris arrived, weighing in at 8½ lbs. Despite her breach position and her above-average size, she was delivered vaginally.

Gallagher said, "You have to be prepared for the birth not to turn out as you planned." Although Peggy had to go to the hospital, she was pleased she was able to avoid having the baby delivered by Ceasarian section. Gallagher said her physician, Dr. Richard Feingold of Wareham, did an outstanding job.

"I was flabbergasted to find out how much a hospital birth cost," she said. "And the system which is set up to keep you apart from your baby gives the implication that you are not competent to care for your own baby." Peggy said she felt the hospital routines violate a person's privacy. "I believe that women have to believe in themselves and their own abilities."

Lista LeQuire of Cohasset gave birth to Dustin at home nine months ago. But Lista's interest in homebirth goes beyond her own birthing experience.

Lista is an assistant midwife. After apprenticing for two years and attending about 25 births, Lista reached the status of assistant lay midwife. Her status allows her to give prenatal care in conjunction with a more experienced midwife and to assist a primary midwife at births.

Lista explained that she must attend 50 births and meet skills standards set by the Massachusetts Midwifery Association before she will be able to apply for the status of supervised primary midwife.

At that time, she will be given an oral review by her peers, but she will still have to be accompanied at births by a more experienced supervising midwife until she passes all the standards and requirements to ascend to that status.

Lista explained that there are generally two or three midwives in attendance at any birth. Three is the optimum number to provide the best support and care for the mother. Lista said midwives prefer to leave the husband unencumbered by tasks so he can give all his attention to comforting and providing moral support for his wife.

When asked how she felt about homebirth on a wide scale, Lista said, "Homebirth is not for everyone. Women should have their babies where they feel most comfortable.

"If they would feel more comfortable in a hospital, then that is where they should give birth. But it is essential people are informed about birth, their options, rights and alternatives.

"People should plan their birth the way they would like it to be and also plan for the unexpected," she said.

If a woman chooses not to have her baby in a hospital setting and does not feel comfortable having a baby at home, a possible compromise would be a birth center. Many people do not realize that these alternatives exist. A good resource, according to Lista, is a book called Having a Baby in Boston and Surrounding Area by Barbara Rosenbaum and Toby Schlein, Harvard Common Press.

Lista said she feels strongly that people should approach their prenatal care and birth with consumer attitudes and seek out the kinds of services they want.

LeQuire said, "Doctors are doing us a service so they should cater to our needs, rather than fitting us into their schedules.

"Many people are particularly vulnerable (to other suggestions) during labor, including the husband," she said. Hospital staff often try to persuade the couple that intervention would be best, even if the couple has strong preferences for a natural birth.

Lista recommended that couples without birth experience consider hiring a labor support provider who will accompany the couple to the hospital and advocate on their behalf for the kind of birth and services they want.

A labor support provider is not affiliated with any particular physician or hospital. Besides advocating for natural birth, a labor support provider can give reassurances and support should intervention be necessary. Lista quoted one of her clients: "You wouldn't dream of going to court without an attorney, why go into a hospital without an advocate?"

Take the law to heart.

For further information on the club, please call in Scituate, Jean at 545-6654, or in Cohasset, Linda at 383-6849. If you are a new resident of either town, please give us a call, or stop in at the library on Feb. 10.

'Candid & Shel's Sister'

Feb. 9 two important new playwrights will visit Cohasset to see the Cohasset Drama Workshop's production of their most recent works. Michael Scanlan, author of "Candid", and Terrence Ortwein, author of "Shel's Sister", will be in the audience when the two one-act plays are presented under the combined title of "Family Portraits".

This will mark the first full-scale production of "Shel's Sister" and the first such production of the revised script of "Candid". Both works emerged from Discovery '85, a program devised for the development of new and worthwhile plays for secondary school theatre and sponsored by Choate Rosemary Hall, a private school in Wallingford, Connecticut.

Ron Emmons, who is the director of both plays, worked on "Shel's Sister" as director and on "Candid" as an actor in the Discovery '85 program. Said Ortwein in commenting on his work, "Ron Emmons' approach to directing "Shel's Sister" — a focus on the development of the script rather than the usual 'papering over' the awful parts — was incredibly helpful in strengthening the work." Ortwein, who directed "Candid" in the same program described the play in these words, "Michael Scanlan's "Candid", like the playwright himself, is thoughtful, fun, sensitive and important. Ortwein's comments appeared in the January issue of 'Dramatics".

Appearing in "Shel's Sister" are Jacqui Fahey, Kelly Freeman, Glen Hochkeppel, Jen Hynes and Laura Kuhn. The cast of "Candid" includes Karin Anglin, Erin Browne, Jenna Emmons, Andrew Glasfeld, Glen Hochkeppel and John Kuntz. Show times for "Family Portraits" are 8 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 8, and 7 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 10 at Cohasset High School. Tickets are $3.

Full-time assessor request will be T.M. agenda item

An article creating the position of a full-time assessor will appear on the April Town Meeting warrant with or without the approval of the Board of Assessors, the town Government Structure Committee decided Tuesday night.

Chairman John McNabb, Jr., and committee member John Whoriskey met with the Board of Assessors to discuss resubmitting a similar warrant article from last year. The article had been deferred because of a $60,000 revaluation expense.

"They hadn't discussed it all," McNabb reports to the committee. "They had no problem with the rationale, but they thought it was financially unfeasible. Right now they are trying to increase the hours of their part-time staff."

With the suggestion that the assessor not begin duties until January 1 after the completion of the revaluation, the committee agreed that a full-time assessor would be needed to keep the records at 100 percent.

"It will save money in the long run," said McNabb.

Lacking a quorum, McNabb decided to go ahead with a draft of the article to the selectmen on the strength of last year's vote. Modeled after the article for executive secretary, the draft called for an "Assistant Assessor." The title assessor belongs to the board itself.

According to McNabb, Tom Duggan, chairman of the Board of Assessors, said he did not think it was proper for a committee to put in an article concerning another town board.

"Tell him we do it with reluctance but with the objective of being helpful," said committee member, Osborne Ingram.

Member Jane Cotton said she would feel better if they (town government committees) weren't sponsoring the article.

"They should say it was done on our suggestion," she said. "But it is right to hold the place (on the warrant) no matter who does it."

The consensus of the committee was that a full-time assessor would decrease long run costs and bring consistency to the office of assessors.

Currently the assessors employ Leo Hannon as a part-time consultant. This year $60,000 is contracted to complete a 100 percent revaluation, required by state law every three years.

"If they had a full-time position they could keep it at 100 percent, eliminating that cost and the part-time position," McNabb said.

He stressed the importance of putting it on this year's warrant.

"Otherwise, there will be a backlog to catch up on," he said.

He also pointed out that budget deficits resulting from late tax bills cost the town tens of thousands of dollars every year.

"That alone would make it worth it," he noted.

Rev. Cutler offers comfort in times of tragedy

By Rev. E. Clifford Cutler
Special to the Mariner

(This was the sermon given by Rev. Cutler of St. Stephen's Church at Sunday services, Feb. 1 Ed.)

This past Christmas, our Bishop, John Coburn, shared a prayer which said of Jesus: "The wood of your crib and your cross comes from the same tree." We don't think of Christmas and Good Friday as having much in common. We look forward to the one, and try to look past or beyond the other.

And yet they are part and parcel of the same creative act of God. Jesus shared our humanity from the baby's cry in the manger crib to the forsaken cry on Calvary's Hill. By so taking on our fraility, even succumbing to death itself, he was able to overcome every lonely trial, every dropped tear, every wrenching end by the power of his love. As the letter to the Hebrews concludes: "Since he himself has passed through the test of suffering, he is able to help those who are meeting their test now."

There is no contradiction between the crib and cross. If anything they are paradox - held together in the love of God.

This is very much the message of this Sunday on which we celebrate the presentation of Christ in the Temple. Today marks the turning point from Christmas to Good Friday. Forty days after Jesus' birth, his mother offers a modest sacrifice on behalf of her son at the temple. It is while there that Simeon guided by the Spirit proclaims Jesus the deliverer, the revealer of light and glory; and then adds these forbidding words: "This child is destined to be a sign which men reject; and you too (Mary) shall be pierced to the heart." And with these words we see the dark shadow of the cross pass over the blessed birth of the boy Jesus.

And we are reminded again that there is no contradiction betwee the crib and the cross. They are made of the same tree. The one joy and beauty, the other terrible and tragic - but Christ is to be found in each.

I was made aware of this so vividly as the news came in on Tuesday about the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger and the loss of its seven member crew. It was a numbing, tearful shock, a time for prayer. We stood in the parish office saying the service for noonday. And it was during these prayers that the image of the exploded shuttle was superimposed upon another. We prayed, "Blessed Savior, at this hour you hung upon the cross. . . " God in Christ who hung on the cross was with the crew as the shuttle disintegrated, embracing them in his outstretched arms of love.

These superimposed images gripped me and remained with me that day. Later in the afternoon a woman entered the office for whom this tragedy heightened her own grief and pain at the recent loss of her father. And in her grief I could hear the refrain, "Blessed Savior, at this hour you hung upon the cross. . . " Another remembered the even greater loss of life when the airplane carrying members of the 101st Airborne crashed last year. "Blessed Savior . . . " I heard.

What tragedy or loss can we think of and the Blessed Savior is not there? The pain of unemployment, or underemployment: "Blessed Savior, at this hour you hung upon the cross." Those times when we are so down that we wonder whether there are good anymore. "Blessed Savior. . . "

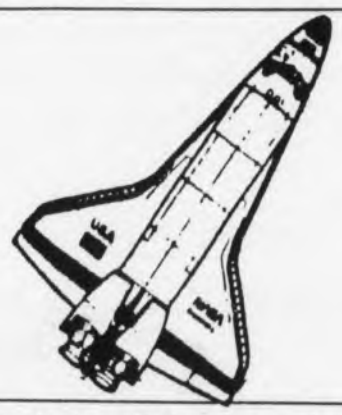
Yes, the Christ of the crib is the Christ of the Cross. Yet how hard it is for us to hold the paradox together. We tend to exalt the one and repudiate the other. Simeon's prophecy rings true. "This child is destined to be a sign which men reject." We cannot allow Jesus to undergo sufferings and be put to death. With Peter we rebuke him. The cross is a scandal to us, a stumbling block to our faith.

When I counsel couples prior to marriage or the Baptism of a child, we talk of the Gospel and I always ask: What barriers to faith have you experienced? Invariably we all experience death and loss as an obstacle to God's presence. We view death as a failure rather than a fulfillment. We see it as a closed door and not as a gateway to a new, changed eternal life. Consequently, we become controlled by death. We let it have power over us.

We are compelled to deny it. We wistfully dream of life extension as though we might avoid death altogether. We amass power, material and prestige beyond all possible need in the effort to become invulnerable, untouchable by the changes and chances of life.

The letter to the Hebrews also recognizes that our fear of death holds us in bondage. We are afraid to talk of it. We push down our feelings of loss. We tough it out and try not to break down. We resign ourselves to a life without risks. We play it safe and can hardly imagine heroes.

And yes when this happens we pay a price. It is the costly sum of denying our own humanness and of blindness to God's presence. We reject a God who suffers and dies and identifies with our frailty. We are shocked when death comes. It represents a wrenching loss, we feel empty inside, bereft. We are reminded forcefully of our frailty. We angrily demand to know, where is God in all of this? We cry out "Why?" And the only answer that we can hear is the "Why?" of Jesus echoing back from the cross. You see, there is no neat answer that resolves our "why," only a love that identifies with it.



The explosion of the space shuttle was a vivid reminder of our frailty - vivid because we were allowed to know so well one of the crew. She would have caught us from space. Our children were watching.

What television couldn't show, but what faith reveals so dramatically is God's outstretched arms with the shuttle crew, and with us in our loss. In our weakness and at our end, we have company. "Blessed Savior, at this hour you hung upon the cross."

And perhaps, after all, we were taught from space. We relearned that through his own death Jesus broke the hold of death upon our lives. We need no longer grasp after the illusion of invulnerability retreating behind a shell of toughness. We can choose a simpler, truer view of our own humanity, aspiring to the greatest realization of all that we are, with a clearer vision of God's love. It is good to be frail and human. We touch and are touched by others in our common neediness. It is there that love is found. Vulnerable as we are, we are people of vision, courage, and ultimate value. We are people embraced by God.

Because of this embrace, because God in his love has identified with us and shares in our love, we are free to express our fears and able to listen to the fears of others. That is the basis upon which we encourage our children and one another. in times of loss and testing, to talk about it. The love of God imparts the courage to express our fears, our angers, our shock and dismay.

Agatha Christie's 'whodunit' to be performed Feb. 28

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter season production of Agatha Christie's "whodunit" "The Hollow" will be presented on the Cohasset Town Hall stage Friday, February 28, Saturday March 1 and Sunday, March 2.

Curtain times for the Friday and Saturday performances will be 8 p.m. and the Sunday show will be a 2 p.m. matinee.

Directing the production is Cohasset's Julia W. Jordan. Betty Miessner is the Producer, Sheldon Ripley is the Set Designer, and stage lighting will be designed by Clark Young.

Agatha Christie, popular author of numerous English "whodunit" novels, wrote "The Hollow" in 1946 and adapted it for stage presentation. In America the book was first known as "Murder After Hours".

"The Hollow" opened at London's Fortune Theater in June of 1951 where it ran for 360 performances. The play is a classic Agatha Christie, with the murderer's indentity carefully concealed thoughout much of the play.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "The Hollow" draws upon the presence of a talented cast of local community theater enthusiasts. Cohasset's Ginny Barcomb has been with the Dramatic Club for 20 years. Her first appearance at the Town Hall was in the play "Skin of Our Teeth", and she was seen recently in last fall's "Death of A Salesman". Hingham's George Ela has appeared with 15 South Shore theater groups including Cohasset productions of "Detective Story", and "Christmas Carol". Dennis Ripley's experience with the Cohasset Club dates from the 1950's both as actress and director. Recently she directed club performances of "Strange Bedfellows" and last year's "Morning's at Seven".

Scituate's Bonnie Haley appeared in "Detective Story" at the Town Hall and has been active with Curtain Call Theater. Harry Heineman, also from Scituate, has both acted and directed on the Town Hall stage, appearing in, amoung other shows, "Uncle Vanya", "Detective Story" and "Christmas Carol". John Kuhn has appeared in Cohasset productions of "Christmas Carol", "Forty Carats" and "Death of a Salesman". David Barrett has been involved in a dozed Cohasset community theater shows including recent productions of "Scapino" and "A Man For All Seasons".

Marshfield's Joan Paquette has been in several productions for the Bay Players and in Cohasset's "Christman Carol". Ed Lappen has appeared in "Forty Carats" and "Detective Story" at the Town Hall. Rounding out the Cohasset Club's cast for "The Hollow" are two newcomers to the Town Hall, Hingham's Fraser and Joan Scorgie, who bring with then experience in community theater and education.

This winter's Cohasset Dramatic Club production of Agatha Christie's mystery "The Hollow" also combines the talents of two long-time Club members, set designer Sheldon Ripley and lighting designer Clark Young, whose combined experience with the Dramatic Club total more than half a century.

Tickets for the Town Hall performances of "The Hollow" will be $4 each, available at the door at times of the performances and in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Senior Citizens are invited to attend the Sunday, March 2 matinee at no charge. Plan to see the Dramatic Club's winter performance of this classic Christie "whodunit".

Cohasset Candidates Corner. . . .

McNabb Selectman candidate

John K. McNabb, Jr. has announced his candidacy for a three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen at the April 12 town elections.

"I have always had an active interest in town affairs, and feel I can best put my skills and experience to work for the benefit of the town by serving as Selectman," said McNabb.

McNabb, who resides at 53 Pond Street, has served for two years as the Chairman of the Town Government Structure Committee, which he has been a member of for three years. He also was elected by the town to serve as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

McNabb is a 1974 graduate of Cohasset High School, where he was elected President of the Student Council, and was elected twice as a Student Representative to the School Committee.

He is a former Assistant Scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 28, where he earned the Eagle Scout Award. McNabb also was active in the anti-casino movement on the South Shore.

McNabb is a 1978 graduate of Bowdoin College, and is employed as Assistant Legislative Liaison for the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

"As a Selectman," said McNabb, "I would work to ensure that decisions are made in an open, equitable manner, in compliance with the state open meeting law. I will always be open and accessible to all residents of the town, and will strive to represent every resident of the town of Cohasset."

"The Selectmen must do more to professionalize town government and the management of the towns $8.3 million budget," said McNabb. "I would act to provide positive leadership to identify and deal with the issues confronting the town, and would do all I could to ensure the fair treatment of all town employees."

"I will take a fresh approach to the position of Selectman, and will do my best to work cooperatively with all town officials and residents," said McNabb. "We need more planning and foresight in town hall to meet the problems of the 1980's."

John K. McNabb Jr.

Hahn runs for School Comm.

Dane Hahn, 44 Black Rock Road, has announced his candidacy for a three-year seat on the Cohasset School Committee.

National Consumer Advertising Director for Yankee Magazine in Boston, Hahn moved to Cohasset two years ago from Wilmette, Ill. He is a member of the Cohasset Rotary Club and the Second Congregational Church. A member of the Cohasset PSO, Hahn is also a member of the PSO board and is involved with finances and project direction through the finance committee.

Hahn is a graduate of Franklin Pierce College and received a Masters degree in Business Administration from Syracuse University.

"As a parent of two children in the Cohasset public school system, and as a board member of the Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO), I have a strong working knowledge of the school system, its major players, and the problems it faces," he said in announcing his candidacy.

"I bring a businessman's viewpoint to the board," he added, "especially regarding expenses and expenditures. I bring compassion for taxpayers - both parents and non-parents alike. And I bring a closeness to the system as a father and Sunday School Fellowship teacher of junior high students. Finally I bring pride in what has been accomplished, and energy to continue to provide Cohasset with what may be one of its few marketable natural resources -well educated, well-rounded high school graduates."

While a resident in Wilmette, Hahn received endorsement for candidacy to the school board there. He did not run for office because of his family's impending move to Cohasset.

Dane Hahn

According to the candidate, "Our goal must be to continue with the strong academic programs without skrimping on those activities which make Cohasset schools one of the best systems in which a student with can get a liberal education. Clearly not all students will persue additional education following high school, and they must not be cheated by a system that only prepares graduates to go to college. The problems faced by the board over the next year and beyond are complex and need to be addressed by a competent, professional group."

Obituaries

John Pereira

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday morning in St. Anthony's Church for John Pereira, 39, who died Saturday at the New England Deaconess Hospital after a long illness. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

A past president of the Cohasset Jaycees and the Cohasset Little League, Mr. Pereira taught junior and senior Confraternity of Christian Doctrine classes at St. Anthony's Church. He also participated in the annual Cohasset Village Fair.

A longtime soccer and baseball player and fan, Mr. Pereira had coached a Cohasset soccer team.

He was a self-employed truck driver, and drove throughout the northeast for the past 15 years.

Born in Portugal, Mr. Pereira came to the United States in 1955 and resided in Cohasset for the past 31 years.

He leaves his wife, Diana (Fischer) Pereira; two sons, Anthony J. Pereira and John C. Pereira, both of Cohasset; a daughter, Holly L. Pereira of Cohasset; two brothers, Joseph Pereira of Somerville and James Pereira of Cambridge; and four sisters, Isabele Borso and Simeria Medeiros, both of Somerville, Fernando Morgan of Cambridge, and Millie Muzyka of Brockton.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the Sparrell-McNamara Funeral Home, 1 Summer St.

Roy Macdonald Jr.

Private funeral services were held this week for Roy A. Macdonald Sr., 72, who died Saturday at his home after a brief illness. He was buried in Woodside Cemetery.

Born in Quincy, Mr. Macdonald later moved to Cohasset where he resided for the past 36 years.

He worked as a wool broker for 35 years at the Macdonald and Maltby Co. in Boston until his retirement at the age of 70.

He attended Quincy schools and graduated from the Lowell Textile Institute.

He was a member of the Quincy Neighborhood Club and the Algonquin Club, the Wool Trade Association, and the Cohasset Golf Club for the past 36 years. He was a co-founder in 1951 of the Cohasset Little League.

King St. intersection hearing slated for Feb. 25

two cars collided head-on at the intersection.

Police said a Scituate Police cruiser driven by Officer Paul Andrade collided with a vehicle driven by Bianca C. Strang, 66, of Milton. Both persons were treated and released from South Shore Hospital.

According to Cohasset police, Officer Andrades was driving north on King Street to Hingham District Court at 11:41 a.m.. The car driven by Strang was pulling out of lower King Street and failed to go into the proper southbound lane. The cars collided head-on, according to police reports.

Strang reportedly had problems seeing the oncoming traffic as she was driving from King Street onto Rte. 3A, police added. Two passengers in her car, Mary Camia of Dorchester, and Denise Strang of North Weymouth, were not injured in the accident.

Longtime King Street residents Daniel and Jean Cotton alerted selectmen to the traffic problems in early November. In a letter to the board, Cotton noted that six serious accidents have occurred in that vacinity in recent years. One of the more recent accidents resulted in a vehicle being pushed into the front entry of Cotton's home at 27 King Street.

"There is a tendency," he wrote selectmen, "for westbound traffic on Rte. 3A to maintain speed even when veering to the right on King Street. This tendency is heightened by the downward slope on 3A. Squealing tires are an everyday occurrence; near misses are too frequent for comfort."

Joining the push to realign the intersection are other longtime King Street neighbors, Arnold Jenks and Anne Hardie.

The problem, according to Cotton and Jenks, is the design of King Street. One of the oldest streets in Cohasset, King Street was a dirt path carved from North Main Street more than 300 years ago. The curve in the street was necessary because the path could not slice through the Bread and Cheese swamp from the area near the present day Water Dept. building.

Increased population along Forest Avenue and King Street has heightened the traffic problem at the intersection, according to the residents. Jenks explained that King Street isa popular access into and out of Hull. Because of the downward curve of the street, cars tend to travel faster as they approach the highway intersection, he noted.

Jenks has lived on King Street for 38 years. He has witnessed the spreading population along King Street and Forest Avenue and the increasing amount of vehicles traveling the route onto North Main Street and Jerusalem Road.

He stated, "they come off the highway going like hell. Most people travel 60 miles per hour or better. But King Street isn't wide enough and not graded well enough to support that kind of traffic at such high speeds."

District traffic engineer Frank Thompson, who visited the site in November, said then that the intersection should be redesigned, with the possible addition of a turning lane and a turn-off at a right angle which would force drivers to slow down.

After the design is completed, the next hurdle will be funding for the reconstruction.

"I'll be lucky if I live long enough to see this road fixed," Jenks has commented. "It's getting the plans approved and funded that will take a long, long time.

Sen. William Golden met with King Street residents in November to discuss the realignment of the intersection.

First Parish

Our thanks - to Marianne White, Barbara Anderson, Laurie Hamilton, and Cam Long for preparing a scrumptious dinner for 62 persons from the South Shore Cluster of Unitarian Universalist churches last Thursday evening.

More thanks - Friday night a delicious Pot Luck Supper was enjoyed by our Junior High youth and mentors for our Coming of Age program. Thank you Joan DeCruz, JoAnne Chittick, Mary Lou Studds, and Jane McGuiness for coordinating the meal. We all agree it was one of the most enjoyable and degenerational activities we have ever shared at First Parish.

Committee honored

The Service and Rehabilitation Committee of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society, covering eight South Shore towns, has been named "1985 Committee of the Year" by the Massachusetts Division of the Society, topping the service committees of 48 other units throughout the state.

The South Shore Unit embraces the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

A plaque signifying the honor of being Number One in the state was presented to the Committee by representatives of the state organization at a meeting in the Hersey House, Hingham. Receiving the award for the Committee were retiring chairperson Carolyn Housman of Hingham (a social worker for the Cohasset Social Service League), and incoming chairperson Barbara McDonald of Scituate.

Cohasset Boy Scout news. . .

The Bowlarama prizes are in and will be distributed to the twenty-five scouts who participated in this district fundraising event.

The four outstanding scouts who collected the most pledges were: Josh Roth, Kevin O'Donnell, Herb Crehan and Mark Beals.

The Webelos are commended on their efforts for participating in the Christmas Church Fair. They attended a workshop at the Community Center for making gingerbread houses. They made and donated five to the fair. They did a fine job, as all the houses were very quick to sell.

The Webelos have been busy working with the Boy Scouts, Mike Lelecas and Bill Anstead, who have been helping the Webelos earn their Forestry and other badge requirements.

Present News

Pack 38 welcomes a new Scouter from Norwell-Spencer Henderson. He is now in Den 4.

Our Pack qualifies for a special 76th Anniversary ribbon for our unit flag and patches for the scouters who participate.

The requirements are:

1. Conduct a service project for your community (All scouts participated in the Church Fair in Dec.)
2. Scout Religious observance on Feb. 2 or Scout Sabboth on Feb. 8. (All scouts expected to attend their church in uniform)
3. Blue and Gold Banquet (To be held on Feb 23)
4. Window display in Cohasset portraying Scouting programs and scouting projects. (Each Den can contribute a sample of projects scouts have made) Window display to be a Cohasset Pilgrim Bank.

The Blue and Gold Banquet is an annual Cub Scout dinner and award night. Each scout's family will be receiving their invitations for Sunday, March 2, 1985 from 6-8 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House on North Main St.

Each Den will be supplying their own dinner as arranged with their Den Leaders. Coffee and dessert will be provided by the Pack.

Parents should encourage your scouters to complete his achievements for advancements. The Den Leaders will be busy working on the requirements for the Blue and Gold Dinner the scouts have to make so we ask the parents to review anv badge requirements from the scout book with their sons.

March 26 will be the Pinewood Derby. All scouts were given a Pinewood Derby car kit in December. They should be building them with the help of an adult. The instructions are in the kit. For any questions call Jeff Forsdick 383-6329.

Our Blue and Gold Committee Members are: Mike Sasso, 383-1380; Ken Roth, 383-0496; Bill McKenna, 383-6369; Earl Bestick, 383-1410.

Happiness Foundation Open House

On Saturday, March 1, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., the Children's Happiness Foundation will hold an open house at their new office at 1900 Ocean St., Marshfield, across from Toabe's Hardware.

CHF is the South-Shore based organization that grants wishes of children facing a life-threatening illness.

The purpose of the open house is to give volunteers, supporters and the public the opportunity to meet and learn about the work of CHF.

Refreshments will be served and background information on the Children's Happiness Foundation will be available.

Frank Murtagh, newly-elected president to the Children's Happiness Foundation, says that one major goal he has this year is to increase the public's awareness of CHF.

"In order for families to know about the work of CHF, we must constantly keep members of the medical profession and the general public aware of the service we provide," Murtagh said. "This open house will provide an opportunity for CHF to let people know more about the 195 wishes that have been granted since the organization's founding in 1980."

The Children's Happiness Foundation is always looking for new volunteers to help with special fundraising events, as well as individuals to serve as town representatives who can help increase their community's awareness of the foundation.

Cohasset School news

Settling Down

By Chris Ford
Grade 5

Mrs. Silvia, a substitute teacher at Deer Hill School, is going to settle down in one room for a while. Mrs. Patricia Sullivan a fourth grade teacher at Deer Hill School is leaving to have a baby.

Mrs. Silvia is taking her place. According to Mrs. Silvia, she says she is very happy about taking Mrs. Sullivan's place in the fourth grade.

Mrs. Silvia tells me she likes substituting, but she says she would like to settle down in one room rather than going from one room to another. Mrs. Silvia has been doing alot of substituting this year and says she knows every child in the school.

In my opinion Mrs. Silvia is a good person for the job. She taught for seven years in both Scituate and Cohasset schools. Don't you think Mrs. Silvia is a good person for the job?

P.S. Mrs. Sullivan's baby's name is Sarah Elizabeth.

Fairy Tale police briefs: according to Deer Hill students

The sixth grade is having a writing contest. The teachers will assign a certain subject for the children to write about every week. When Monday comes, the stories are judged by the teachers and students. The students accumulate points for writing the best stories. At the end of six weeks, the students with the most points will be awarded prizes.

Tragic Tumble Takes Life

Eggville: This t i ny hamlet was in shock yesterday to hear of the death of Mr. H. Dumpty. Witnesses say that as they walked by they saw Mr. Dumpty, who had been sitting on the Great Wall of Eggville, leaning over the wall to say hello to Mary and her little lambs. No one knows what happened next. In the blink of an eye, a catastrophe occurred. Mr. Dumpty fell off the wall and smashed into a million pieces.

All of the king's horses and all the king's men were at the scene of the mishap in a flash but they couldn't help Mr. Dumpty. They called the local ambulance because they didn't know what to do. The ambulance took Dumpty to Eggville Hospital. As they took him into the Glu ing Room the doctors feared that not even the strongest Krazy Glue in the land would put Mr. Dumpty back together again.

As they started putting him back together the doctors realized that some pieces were missing and they couldn't put Mr. H. Dumpty completely back together.

Funeral services will be held Saturday, Jan. 18, 1986 at 10:00. Dumpty leaves his loving wife, Ms. Mumpty Dumpty, and his son Zumpty. He also leaves his prospering insurance company to his son. Dumpty will be missed by all in Eggsville and Fairyland.

If you have any further information about this tragic fall, please contact the local Eggville police. In memory of Mr. Humpty Dumpty this poem has been written by a dear friend of the family, Mother Goose.

Humpty Dumpty sat on the wall
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall.
All the king's horses and all the king's men,
And even the hospital's gluing room,
Couldn't put Humpty Dumpty together again.

Miss Muffet Missing

Washington, D.C.: Miss Muffet has disappeared from underneath a cherry tree along the Potomac River. Police are looking at the possibility of foul play. Her bowl of curds are being treated for traces of poison and drugs. An eye-witness has given the police a description of a spider that was seen with Miss Muffet before the disappearance. The eye-witness, Georgie Porgie, is also missing... Detective Jack Horner has been assigned to the case. Another clue left behind was Miss Muffet's tuffet. The tuffet is a standard model according to Mother Goose, the owner of the Down Shop.

If anyone has any information about this case, please call Detective Horner at 555-1212.

Three Mice Lose Tails

Miami: A life guard here saw three mice stumbling along the beach today. It is reported that they suddenly fell to the ground.

Miami F.D. Rescue was called to the scene. The mice were found to be blind and suffering shock from injuries that resulted in the loss of their tails. Miami detectives were called immediately.

Our reporter at Miami General Hospital states the mice are recovering from injuries inflicted by a local farmer's wife. When arrested she stated it was self defense. And that the mice were chasing her so she cut off their tails with a carving knife.

A trial is scheduled in Miami District Court for Friday afternoon. It is expected to take three days to select a jury.

World of Weather : Revealing the difficult answers

This month everything you wanted to know about the weather but didn't know who to ask!

Q. What is cyclogenesis?

A. This is the process which creates or develops a new cyclone, or low pressure cell. Also, it is the process which produces an intensification of a pre-existing cyclone.

Q. What is a nimbostratus cloud?

A. This is a gray or dark massive cloud layer, diffused by continuous rain, snow or sleet. The precipitation from this cloud-type usually reaches the ground. It is composed of suspended water droplets, and of falling raindrops or snowflakes.

Q. Who wrote "Death has no terror when the snow at spring sweetly discloses in a freshet streaming?"

A. This is a verse from the poem "Snow is the kindest" written by Robert S. Hillyer. When Mr. Hillyer wrote this lovely poem he was an Associate Professor of English at Harvard University. It was published in the 1936 edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac.

Q. What is a radiosonde?

A. This is a device that is carried aloft by a balloon equipped with measuring instruments that automatically convert temperature, pressure and humidity data into electrical impulses and transmits this information to a ground recorder.

Q. When did man first use the sun to tell time?

A. From time immemorial, man has used the sun to time the passing hours. The earliest mention of a sundial is found in the Bible in Isaiah 38:8, but nothing is known of this instrument which existed in circa 1700 B.C. About 400 years later, the first knowledge concerning dialing became available and remained the principle means of telling time until the eighteenth century.

Q. Could you tell me the name of the English fishing vessel that went aground off Nantucket in the winter of 1977.

A. The 78-foot British trawler Croesus ran aground off Tuckernuck, an island west of Nantucket, on January 16, 1977. She went off course due to poor visibility in a blizzard.

Q. How does the temperature change as you travel north?

A. For about every 100 miles north you travel, from 42 degrees north latitude, you will become about 5 degrees cooler.

Q. What is the average temperature of the North Atlantic Ocean.

A. The average surface temperature is 63.3 degrees. The average bottom temperature is 35 degrees.

Q. What is the change in temperatures as you dig into the ground?

A. A. The earth warms up one degree with each 75 feet of depth.

Q. What is snowbroth?

A. This is snow that has just melted. This rather obsolete word is also used to denote a very cold liquor.

Q. What is the record low temperature for New Hampshire?

A. Forth-six degrees below zero at Pittsburg, N.H. on January 28, 1925.

Q. When was the great New England Flood?

A. The most widespread all-New England Flood occurred in March 1936.

Q. What is the Indian legend about the buffalo and snow?

A. The Plains Indians believed that the buffalo was somehow produced in vast quantities in an underground cave. As the snow of the long, bitter winter began to melt, these shaggy beasts would emerge from this gigantic cave and drift northward from the plains of Texas. Actually, it was the annual spring migration and it was a spectacular sight to behold. These bands of buffalo massed from horizon to horizon with as many as a million head in a migratory herd.

Q. What are the "snow birds?"

A. This was an association formed by snowbound passengers of the Albany Express following the Blizzard of 1888. They were stranded more than 48 hours, at Hastings-on-Hudson, New York and resolved to meet annually, on the anniversary of the Blizzard.

Q. Who made the first scientific measurements of the upper atmosphere?

A. John Jeffries and French Aeronaut, Francois Blanchard, ascended in a balloon over London November 30, 1784 to become the first men to take measurements of the free air. At an altitude of 6,500 feet, they recorded the pressure, temperature, humidity and electrical potential of the atmosphere.

Q. What was the "Great White Hurricane?"

A. This was the Blizzard of 1888. Seamen gave this historic storm the name "Great White Hurricane" after it devastated the coast from the Chesapeake Bay through New England. More than 200 vessels were lost and at least 100 sailors perished in this storm that packed gale force to near hurricane winds. Of 40 vessels in Philadelphia's harbor, 27 were sunk or driven ashore and 30 crew members listed as having died. This horrendous storm lives on in the annals of the sea as one of the worst marine disasters this nation has ever known.

Q. How do winemakers protect their vineyards from frost?

A. In the spring, if a killing frost occurs, the budding grapevines would become "frost burned" resulting in only a partial crop or no crop at all. When the temperature falls to 35 degrees F, an alarm sounds and a sprinkler system is activated. The vines are showered with a fine mist that continually forms ice around the tender shoots as the temperature dips below 32 degrees F. Water gives off heat as it freezes and the temperature of the shoots remains at 32 degrees during the misting process. This eliminates the danger of frost damage which occurs at 28 degrees and below.

Q. What is the strangest weather related story you know?

A. Well, many things are strange in the world of weather, but the most bizarre I am aware of occurred in 1979, during the disastrous monsoon floods in India. As the Ganges River receded, in the Malda and Murshidabad districts of West Bengal near the Bangladesh border, a woman was found sprawled on a pasture. Her child appeared to be nursing one of her breasts and a cobra the other. All three were dead. According to a Press Trust of India report, this was one of the gruesome spectacles that caught the eye of rescue workers. Police said they had not found any sign of snake bite on the woman's body.

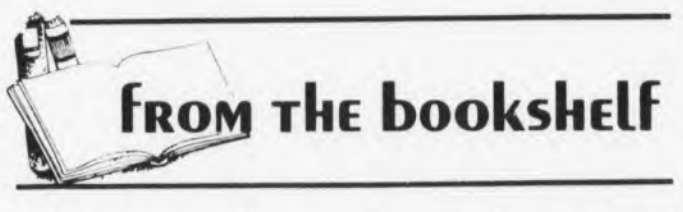
"Sharing a sense of doubt can bring men together even more than sharing a faith." Graham Greene



Chewy mystery

Some mystery books are to be devoured much as a television program is, a brief diversion, a little rest between bouts of reality. A Death In China by Montalbano and Haiaasen is a longer, chewier suspense story and a good read. A young college teacher on tour in China learns that his respected mentor, a Chinese who is teaching in America, is also in the country to visit his brother, an official. Our hero stumbles across dirty doings on a big scale and pursues the Right in a thicket of goodies and baddies. It is entertaining and somewhat informative about China under the revolutionaries. I happened to be reading it the day the Frugal Gourmet on Channel 2 prepared Peking duck, which he pronounced as "Beijing duck." It was an unfortunate coincidence, as, according to A Death In China, it's a favorite dish of tourists, and so many succumb to overeating they refer to it simply as "death by duck."

The Frugal Gourmet's cookbook is delightful. Several have taken it from the library, then bought a copy. It's taken from his broadcasts with the same lively and informative style. The recipes have chatty introductions. I haven't seen it offered on discount anywhere. You might be wise to check it out before blowing your funds.

See also...

An amusing habit of some authors is to plug another of their books in the one you're reading. The Hardy Boys and Nancy Drew used to mention other adventures with a footnote saying, "See The Adventure of the Dingtoed Whale" or other. Christine Govan who wrote several cherished books for children did the same. In A Death In China, a reporter advises a young Chinese informer to be sure to read Monsignor Quixote, by Graham Greene, so I got a copy. It was good advice, so good I'll try other Greene titles of which there are plenty.

Monsignor Quixote would be a decendant of the famous Don, if Don weren't fictional. He is the priest of a tiny Spanish village, an innocent, good man. His friend is the ex-mayor, called Sancho, a witty, political atheist. They decide to take a trip in the priest's little car whose name I won't insult you by mentioning. Sticking in cases of wine, packets of bread, cheese and sausage, plus favorite reading—religious works for the priest, Karl Marx for Sancho—they travel, argue and have adventures.

As Greene says in the quotation above, shared doubts bring them close. "The believer will fight another believer over shades of difference. The doubter fights only himself." It's a quick read, very funny, provocative, but not recommended to those whose religious beliefs are black and white and not to be questioned.

More powerful writing

Stanley Elkin's The Magic Kingdom is a best seller and an amazing feat of writing. Angela Thirkell fans will recall Miss Hampton, resident of Wiple Terrace, whose books are, according to Miss Bent, "her friend that she lives with." This Elkin book is "strong meat." He takes a subject most people wouldn't touch with a pole of any length, and treats it with writing so superb he carries it off with triumph.

More than that, I will not say. I've rejected too many books because someone says, "It's about this, or it's about that" and prejudice makes me avoid, and miss, something choice.

Save South Africa

"I wish Americans would send their books and dollars, instead of supporting sanctions," say Gatsha Buthelezi, the leader of six million Zulus. He begs for schoolbooks, from paperback classics to hardcover math texts, to supply black schools. "Our children are educated in shells. They need libraries." He suggests sending contributions to a A Book and A Buck Trust, Box 50024, Musgrave Rd., 4062 Durban, South Africa.

Transportation 1986 Part III: What we need to do

It is really much more fun to praise honorable men and women in the public service than it is to criticize them. But a journalist's first obligation is to his readers who count on him to call issues as he sees them. One honorable, brilliant public servant I can't praise much these days is Sec. of Transportation Frederick Salvucci.

The principal flaw in Salvucci's thinking as Secretary, it seems to me, is properly called "inductive reasoning." He goes from the specific to the general instead of starting with a masterplan and proceeding by deduction to the solution of specific problems.

A lifelong Bostonian, Salvucci dreams of removing Boston's ugly Central Artery with the same fervor with which Churchill dreamt of bringing back the cavalry charge. But whereas Churchill forced himself to grip the hideous methods of modern warfare, Salvucci (as it seems to me) uses both his intellect and his statewide office to rationalize doing the things in and for Boston that he has had his heart set on since the 1950's. As Secretary of Transportation he functions as a brilliant Director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, which is why he gets a "C-minus" from a writer who likes and admires him.

The most recent example of his "inductive reasoning" was the announcement last week of a $175 million plan to remove the Charlestown section of the Central Artery. Announced as a traffic and safety improvement (which I will grant), it is really a Trojan Horse for what I have irreverently called "Salvucci's Subway:" the depression of the entire Central Artery.

The Charlestown plan, like the Artery depression, would be grand if funds were unlimited. But in the real world $175 million spent in Charlestown (as opposed to a mere $65 million spent rebuilding nine miles of the Southeast Expressway in 1984-85) probably assures that nothing will be done in this millenium on the Rte. 3 interchanges south of Braintree or on the east-west roads in Plymouth County . . .to mention just two components of the South Shore's transportation morass.

In transportation as in so many matters, the tail Boston waggles the dog Massachusetts — a waggling sadly in my view abetted and rubber stamped by the statewide Dukakis coalition. So what would one impudent knight of the keyboard do differently? Herewith a few highlights.

MASTERPLAN

First and foremost, we need a masterplan that thinks both big and small; that looks at the state as a whole yet takes into account the needs of every community; that plans for the future yet provides for the interim; that is grand in concept, yet allows for the limited availability of funds. With a plan, even an imperfect one, we have an idea where we are going; we have a statement to our people and to our successors of our intentions; we have a parameter to measure our progress by; and we have a blueprint to correct should we err or should conditions change. But without a masterplan we fritter away megabucks on isolated projects while, in general, the traffic on our streets gets worse and worse.

LOGAN AIRPORT

As I suggested in the first installment in this series, our masterplan needs to give special attention to Logan Airport because in the boardrooms where decisions affecting our economic future are made, the proximity of Logan to Boston is seen as a great asset. By comparison with O'Hare's distance from Chicago, LaGuardia/Kennedy/Newark's distance from New York, etc., Logan is in Boston's backyard. We simply throw that advantage away by retaining outdated access roads to Logan.

What we need to do, therefore, is to provide direct airport access to the southern and western suburbs with a third harbor tunnel that connects to Rte. 3 and the Massachusetts Turnpike near Fort Point Channel. We probably also need to construct direct airport access to Rte. 95 and the northern suburbs via a new crossing (over or under) the Mystic River. That would leave the present tunnels to serve "the Hub" and Rte. 93-north, a burden I believe they could handle.

These projects deserve to be first when transportation money is allocated because they represent more than convenience, they represent the economic future. Train buffs such as I are awfully sorry about the invention of aircraft, but we must eat our sorrow, as Fred Salvucci must eat some of his wishful thinking. If we want good jobs for our children we have to keep traffic moving to that airport. By comparison, razing the Central Artery is a secondary matter: probably worth doing some day, but not as the central project of an era as Salvucci proposes to make it.

REGIONAL AIRPORTS

Logan is the economic touchstone. But its proximity to Boston, which is its advantage, is also its disadvantage: unlike Dallas/Fort Worth and other modern airports it is not sited where it can grow indefinitely. Therefore our masterplan should include the development of small, limited-use regional airports like Hanscom Field.

In Plymouth County we need a better airport for the same reasons we need Logan: growth companies want to be able to get their people, especially their top people, in and out of the region expeditiously. Military and environmental considerations permitting, the South Weymouth Naval Air Station would be an ideal site for such a facility.

INTERSTATE TRAINS

In a real way, better train service is a key to better plane service, for interstate trains can help prevent airport congestion. Ronald Reagan aside, business people as well as ordinary Americans have rediscovered train travel in recent years, and the rebuilding of Back Bay and South Stations (credit those projects to Gov. Dukakis) will draw more passengers away from the airlines.

But to compete effectively with the Shuttle to LaGuardia, Boston-New York trains need to get down to three hours from the present four-plus. It is perhaps odd, perhaps revealing of our interdependency, that most of the construction that three-hour trains would require would be in Connecticut. In any case, the construction that is needed should be in our Massachusetts masterplan even though its implementation is not likely in the Gramm-Rudman era.

Rail transportation is central to the disappointment that many of us feel about the Dukakis administration, for rail transportation was central to the high hopes many of us had for it. This was the aspiring governor who, after the revolutions he almost single-handedly instigated in automobile insurance, made a name for himself articulating the need for high speed rail transportation in Massachusetts.

As governor he ought to be a national leader in the fight to retain Amtrak. But having gratuitously criticized the President of the United States nearly every time he has opened his mouth the last six years, he will have little effective say in the matter.

A perhaps more indicting indication of what little grip the Dukakis administration has on the obscure, important details of both transportation and rail transportation is this: In addition to its New York trains via Connecticut, Amtrak runs trains (including a nightly sleeper to Chicago) on the inland route to New York via Worcester and Springfield.

Conrail, which owns the tracks (the former Boston & Albany line), is about to pull up the second extant (there used to be four) set of rails between Framingham and Albany, N.Y. These rails are no longer needed for computer-dispatched freight, but they retain a great potential for across-the-state passenger service. How we could permit such destruction of our transportation "infrastructure" is beyond me. My guess is that the administration, obsessed with its $175 million plans for Charlestown, doesn't even know of Conrail's plan.

The poorly laid plans of writers and transportation planners go awry. Having insufficiently thought out the masterplan of this series, I am becoming a metaphor of the very lack of foresight I am trying to purge our transportation thinkers of. It will be necessary to conclude this series with what in family planning is politely referred to as an "afterthought."

Student financial aid hotline

The Massachusetts Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (MASFAA) will offer its 1986 Financial Aid Awareness Month toll-free telephone counseling service for a five week period.

The ninth annual hotline service will operate weeknights, from 5 to 9 p.m. until Feb. 14. The Massachusetts toll-free student financial aid hotline number is 1-800-358-5225.

"Because we are concerned that students and parents receive accurate information about applying for financial aid," say MASFAA President Joe Paul Case, Amherst College's director of financial aid, "MASFAA annually recruits financial aid experts to volunteer their time to staff this toll-free hotline."

"Our effort is to ensure that all needy Massachusetts residents have the know-how, the opportunity and the choice to obtain a post-secondary education, regardless of the cost," adds Eva Adams, director of financial aid at Mount Ida College and Coordinator of Awareness Month.

Polateen doesn't always work for political activists

"Hi" the attractive young woman began. "I'm Breida M. and today I'll be chairing this meeting of Polateen, a support group for teenagers whose parents are compulsive political activists and who make them do terrible things like leaflet drops."

She paused briefly, and the assembled young people responded by saying, "Hi, Breida, welcome."

"Polateen is based on the belief that you are powerless over your parents' political involvement. Hiding voting lists and disconnecting the telephone doesn't work. They just get another list from the town clerk and use a pay phone. Tragically, many parents squander much of their family's income on voting lists and pay phones. To say nothing of political brunches, testimonial dinners and outright contributions.

"Although the Polateen cannot prevent his or her parents from acting out their compulsive political activism, because they are powerless over it, it is possible for you to lead a normal, productive life.

"You must learn to detach yourself from your parents' political insanity. You must carry on an academic and social life independent of the campaigns that are going on around you.

"This means that before you leave the house you must check the back of your coat to make certain that your mother hasn't pinned any political buttons there. Before you open your school lunch, you must quickly peek inside the bag. It is extremely embarassing to pull out a sandwich with a bumper sticker attached, or a banana that has a candidate's sticker instead of Chicquita Banana's.

"It may be necessary to install your own telephone, since during a campaign it is virtually impossible to use the family phone. We can give you suggestions as to how to earn money for this purpose, and many of us have found it advisable to spend a little extra for a phone that locks. A parent involved in a campaign has no moral scruples about donating your telephone to a phone bank. It is not unknown for someone to call a Polateen looking for a date and getting a recording of a candidate's voice talking about the seat belt law or budget deficits.

The assembled Polateens nodded in sad agreement, and Breida M. took a deep breath.

"Today," she continued, "I must report that one of our brothers appears to be in serious trouble."

She paused, then continued bravely. "This is particularly difficult for me, because Patrick M. is not only my brother in Polateen, he is my fraternal sibling as well.

"It grieves me to tell you that Patrick has 'gone over' and to ask your help in bring him to his senses."

There was a shocked silence, then the young people quickly rallied to Breida M.'s assistance.

"Remind him about the envelope stuffing," one neatly dressed young man with a crew cut urged.

"Help him recall the paper cuts on his lips that didn't go away for months and the taste of glue that made it impossible to enjoy pizza or ice cream."

A blonde young woman nodded. "Patrick M. loves to eat," she said earnestly. "Make him remember how few real meals he'll have during a campaign because every table in the house is always covered with leaflets and signs and telephone lists, and anyway your mother is always on the phone and your father is always holding a sign somewhere."

The young chairperson shook her head mournfully.

"It's worse than that," she confided. "Patrick isn't just helping out with a campaign. He's actually coordinating his home town for a certain candidate, who shall remain nameless, for reelection as state senator. In the Norfolk-Plymouth District. If and when said individual declares his candidacy.

"Now let's have a moment of silence. Use it as you will."

For over sixty seconds there wasn't a sound in the room. Then Bill H., an earnest looking young man wearing jeans and a designer shirt, raised his hand.

"We'll help you, Breida," he vowed solemnly. "We'll save Pat M. from a trap of compulsive political activism. He hasn't gone too far yet—not if he hasn't started hiding voting lists behind the bathroom tank and calling people in the middle of the night to talk about transportation on the South Shore. We'll help him see the light, won't we, group?"

There was a chorus of assents, then a pretty young redhead raised her hand.

"We'll all go to your house tomorrow at three. We'll bring pictures of past campaigns. We'll remind him of how it was before we found Polateen. We'll show him how we used to stand out in rain, and sleet, and snow holding signs. We'll show him the scars from our paper cuts and the splinters from the signs. It won't be easy, but drastic situations require drastic measures."

Breida M. looked uneasy. "Gee," she said, "I really appreciate this. You guys are really wonderful, and I don't know how I can ever repay you.

"But tomorrow at three isn't too good. You see, I promised Pat I'd help him make some phone calls tomorrow."

Her friends looked at each other sorrowfully then Bill H. spoke.

"That," he sighed, "is the insidiousness of the disease."

FROM THE KITCHEN

Try these tasty treats to spice up a cold winter's day

To meet someone in the supermarket these days is to hear detailed accounts of their plans to escape this most miserable of months by flying south or heading north to ski country.

"How simple life was when I used to take to the slopes," I thought after my last encounter. "Boots, poles and harnesses for equipment, we snowplowed up the hill in back of the farmhouse where we stayed; dodged toboggans and dogs on the way back down — low cost and sheer fun."

Starved, with never a thought of counting calories, we would sit down at the farmhouse table set with great platters of food, hot bread and freshly churned butter, followed by dessert that was fattening, sinfully sweet and delicious — something as tempting as Millie Carr's

BREAD PUDDING

1 c. raisins (preferably golden)
1/2 c. sherry
5-6 slices white bread and butter
4 eggs
1/2 c. sugar
1 qt. half and half cream, or milk
1½ tsp. vanilla

Soak raisins in sherry for 2 hours, stirring occasionally. Trim crusts from bread and butter. Place buttered side down in 2½ qt. casserole. Drain raisins and sprinkle over bread. Let stand 30 min. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Combine and beat last four ingredients and pour over bread. Bake covered at 350 degrees for 30 min. in a pan of hot water. Remove cover and bake another 30 min.

Reading an article explaining how the glamour has gone out of flying since the airlines have been deregulated, I found that the author referred to the planes as "overcrowded buses in the sky."

Stewardesses no longer have time to pamper the passengers, seats have been crammed in to accommodate more bodies, and food is even less palatable. So, there seems to be much to be said for those who choose to enjoy the comforts of home right here on the South Shore.

The Marshfield Newcomer's Gourmet Group savored Hungarian cuisine at dinner parties hosted by Brenda and Pete Covini, Mary and Jim Doyle and Rosemary and Mike McCarthy. Stuffed cabbage, beet salad, potted pork tenderloins, torte and such delights were served, together with this

ICED TART CHERRY SOUP

1 can sour water-packed pitted red cherries
1 cinnamon stick
3/4 c. sugar
1/2 c. water
1 c. each sauterne and red burgundy
1 T cornstarch
1 c. water
1/2 c. light cream

Drain juice from cherries. Put cherries aside. Add cinnamon, sugar and 1/2 c. water to juice and boil 5 min. Add wines. Boil 5 min. more. Mix cornstarch and 1 c. water. Add to above, cooking and stirring until slightly thickened. Add cherries and cream. Remove cinnamon stick. Chill. Serves 6 to 8 cups.

And then there are those winter-weary souls who feel powdery white sands and tropical blooms far surpass the icy snows and bleak skies of ski country. Far from the constant hum of the oil burner, bulky clothing and slippery roads, we dream of nothing more strenuous than carrying our towel out to the pool. Just 90 minutes from Logan the hibiscus are in bloom, kisskadees and bluebirds are singing and rum swizzles are sipped on some of the most beautiful beaches in the world.

The last time we were in Bermuda I was given a copy of their cookbook "Bermuda's Best Recipes," now in its 11th edition. It is a collection of more than 700 recipes, with many submitted by English residents, such as Lady Ashley Cubitt, Mrs. Chudleigh Hicks, Lady Gray, Lady Wadson and Mrs. Edmund Gray and her

BANANAS BAKED WITH RUM & COCONUT

8 ripe bananas
1/2 glass of rum
1 T lemon juice
1/2 c. water
1 c. coconut
1/2 c. brown sugar
Pinch of salt

Peel bananas, cut in half. Lay side up that has been cut, sprinkle with sugar, heaping T. of butter, lemon juice, coconut and water. When half-cooked, baste bananas with mixture of rum and salt.

The last full month of winter has a few surprises

The Snow Moon sails calmly overhead, while here on earth capricious February, the last full month of winter, keeps us guessing.

The thermometer outside our window often befuddles us, acting like a roller coaster. One day the rhododendron leaves are curled up tight, while fat buds on the bush look ready to burst into bloom. A walk around the yard during the delightful January thaw revealed that the rhododendron leaves had unfurled, forsythia bushes were beginning to bud and along the front patio, the tips of jonquils and tulips were poking through the border garden — always early because it's a sheltered spot — but never before in January.

Then, when the temperature dropped and snow blanketed them, the bulbs were insulated from the cold. Hopefully, they will bloom come spring.

There was a full moon last week, and with the snow on the ground and stars especially clear in the frigid cold, the world became magical. By the second half of February the days will become increasingly long, with early sunrises and later sunsets.

Joan Noble, whom you've no doubt met in her unique little shop, The Quarterdeck, overlooking Scituate Harbor, is finding her first winter on Trouant's Island far from lonely.

A couple of seals, a flock of eiders and an immature bald eagle come and go outside her cozy home overlooking the mouth of the North and South Rivers.

By Feb. 7 the sun is really quite high in the sky —as high as it is in late October.

Even so, the days are never long enough for those who garden. Our first catalogue has arrived from Iowa and certainly offers some unusual veggies this year: golden beets, beans three feet long, cabbage weighing 20 lb., burpless cukes, yellow raspberries, tomatoes weighing a pound.

Earl May's catalogue lists free pamphlets you can send for. Give me a call if you'd like to have their address.

Bob McKay got out his trusty fishing rod and took up his stance at Damon's Point bridge one sunny day last month, but all he saw was a seal lolling on the float. It's a favorite fishing spot, and last season Bob got a 6 lb. tautog and a 13¼ lb. bluefish. He had a salmon but lost it. The high point of his summer was catching a tuna weighing 705 lbs. when he was out with Bill Drury off Stellwagen Bank.

Warren Harrington is calling it "the winter of the predators," having seen rough-legged hawks and a turkey vulture at a suet feeder on North River Drive. Helen Keeler tells of a sharp-shinned hawk at her feeder, but more to my liking are the cedar waxwings that Warren saw in a flock of 50. It seems they are one of few birds that get drunk by feeding on fermented fruits such as chokeberries, and they often stagger about, falling to the ground with their feathers ruffled, earthbound and comical for a time.

When Rita Arapoff isn't tending her greenhouse where jasmine, 10-ft. bouganvilleas and sky-blue plumbagos thrive, she is absorbed in "plant sitting."

Creative Interiors is her business, caring for plants in both homes and sterile-looking offices she keeps busy looking for what she calls "creepy crawlies," denuding plants of dead leaves, feeding them and making sure to find the proper plant for the proper place. They play a big role in interior decorating these days.

Oak trees off Summer Street in Marshfield Hills have been home to a lonely red-headed woodpecker for the past few months. While most of his species vacation in a sunny, warmer clime, on the coldest of days he is foraging for his favorite food of acorns. People have arrived from out of state, some with tripods, to tramp the hill for a glimpse of the striking bird, thought to be the only one in the state.

Caladiums add bright, exciting colors to summer landscapes. The many varieties thrive in full sun or partial shade.

Things to do to brighten your day: groom your favorite plant for entry in the amateur horticulture competition of the 115th annual New England Spring Flower Show scheduled for March 8 through 16. Visit a nearby nursery to pick up seeds to start on a sunny windowsill or under a fluorescent lamp. Hear Tish Grinnell of Cohasset speak on "Table Settings with a Flair," on March 4 at 9:30 a.m. at the G.A.R. Hall in Marshfield Hills. It is open to the public, and there's a guest fee for this very special meeting. Stop by at Mass. Audubon Society headquarters on Rte. 3A, Marshfield Hills, to find out more about the survey being held Feb. 8 and 9, of three relatively new species to the area — the cardinal, tufted titmouse and mockingbird. Ask for their winter program calendar. It's fascinating!

It's a first for the Seaside Gardeners, so we hope you will all think of us come May when the first annual geranium sale will be held. It is scheduled for Mother's Day weekend when we all scoop up these colorful blooms for gifts, window boxes, patios and planters. Plans call for four-inch pots of red, white and pink geraniums to be sold at Angelo's. More details later.

As a member of Garden Writers of America, I find there are lots of goodies coming my way, such as a gift of a dozen caladium bulbs last summer. From late spring into autumn their leaves were wildly colorful, like huge tropical blossoms. I have included a picture of a garden where they have been used as bedding plants, but they also make exceptionally lovely houseplants. I think you'll enjoy picking up some at your nursery.

More than 60 million Americans spend more than $500 million a year on birdseed.

Scientists who study the habits of these welcome feathered friends to our yards have found that the black striped sunflower seed is the closest to an ideal, all-purpose songbird food.

A feeder stocked with these seeds will attract mourning doves, nuthatches, cardinals, grosbeaks and finches — not to mention jays, grackles, squirrels and other mischievous critters.

ground. This great catastrophe must have been caused by his unusual round torso. Some eye witnesses said that Humpty Dumpty had fallen asleep and eventually had fallen off. Other witnesses said that he was pushed by another fairy tale star like Cinderella or the notorious Gingerbread Man. The real answer remains a mystery.

One of the bystanders saw the calamity and went and told the King. The King took immediate action and sent all the Kings horses and all the Kings men (and a little glue) to the park limits to see if he could be put back together again. When they got there all that was left were little fragments of shell. They tried and tried to repair him but it was no use. Finally after hours of hard labor they swept up the remains of Humpty Dumpty.

A funeral was held in town for this once famous egg. Humpty Dumpty is now one with the universe forever.

Dumpty's Dismal Decline

Today's tragic news is that Humpty Dumpty is, in fact, dead.

It strikes this reporter as a deep personal tragedy.

Humpty's death should be an inspiration for us all. He dared to do what no other man would do. Humpty Dumpty bravely sat atop an enormous wall and sadly met his doom three stories below. Humpty lost his balance, teetered and tottered and finally tumbled. He hit the paved ground at a high rate of speed seriously damaging assorted parts of his fragile body. He became a splintered shell of his former self.

The rescue team consisting of all the king's horses and all the king's men, failed after frantic countless attempts, to save this poor soul's life. Alas, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put Humpty back together again.

So regretfully it is true that this man is truly dead. His deathshould always berememberedas atriumph and not a tragedy because this man did what no other would do. He sat upon the wall. Unfortunately, he also took a great fall.

They Aren't Blind Any More

The three blind mice aren't blind anymore. They had eye transplants at the famous hospital, "Mouse Eye and Ear." It took ten grueling hours until they could see.

The first mouse said, "It's unbelievable what mouse research has done for mousekind."

The second mouse was heard to say, "I can see! I can see! Holey Swiss Cheese, I can see!"

It will take two weeks until they have fully regained their sight. The mice are so happy that they are going to donate one hundred dollars to the Sight Rehabilitation Center in Micetown, Miceofornia.

The mice can now live a normal life even after the farmer'swife leftthem tailless with a butcher'sknife with which she was trying to exterminate the mice.

If you, too, want to donate money to the Sight Rehabiliation Center, then just call M-ice-Are-Nice. Thank you.

A Horse

A horse was born behind our house today.
A dark brown colt, I hope he'll stay.
He runs with the other colts as he frolics and plays,
Some people came to look at him
His big black eyes, they look so grim.
Now the air is cold, quite cold for May,
The sky is filled with shades of grey,
For now he's gone, gone far away.
The lights at our house are very dim.
I don't know why, it may be for him.

My Valentine

As phone is to ring,
As bird is to sing,

As day is to light,
As dark is to night,

As blue is to sky,
As bird is to fly,

As leaf is to tree,
So you are to me.

Writer's Block

Here I sit at my desk, thinking
Thinking intensely what to write about
About how awful it is to have my mind go blank
Blank as a rock's face after a glacier's passed
Passed is the time on the clock as the seconds tick by
By the time my mother calls me for dinner I'm in a quandry
A quandry because I don't know what to write about
About twelve hours from now I'll be in class
In class where you are supposed to pass in your poem
Poems are so hard to write
Write what? Now I know!
I know what I'll write about
I'll write about how hard it is to write a poem.

Cohasset Heights contemplates lawsuit

Landfill to file for expansion of special permit

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

While the governor reviews the water commission's latest request to close down the commercial landfill on Crocker Lane, another town agency has become involved in the battle.

Building Inspector and Zoning Enforcement Officer Edward Poskus forwarded a letter to the owners of Cohasset Heights Ltd., stating the operation was exceeding its special permit issued in 1976 by the zoning board. Unless the operators, John and Paul Barry, file an application with the zoning board, Poskus stated he would have no alternative but to order the closure of the business. He gave the operators 10 days in which to file the application with the town clerk's office. The letter was dated Feb. 5.

The water commission last month requested that Poskus view the operation and make comments and recommendations to the commission. Poskus said he viewed the site a week ago with Health Agent Joseph Godzik and officials from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE). It was his determination that the landfill was exceeding its special permit approval by dumping building refuse such as tires, papers and other materials into the landfill. The special permit, he said, allows only building debris into the site. Building debris includes only materials used in construction, such as wood and glass.

The attorney for Cohasset Heights Ltd. said he intends to file an application with the zoning board of appeals within the next couple of days. Atty. Anthony Moehrke, representing Cohasset Heights Ltd., agreed that the request made by Inspector Poskus was "a legitimate argument" posed by the town, as opposed to the statements and accusations made by the water commission in the past months.

Cohasset Heights Ltd. is contemplating legal action against the town, Atty. Moehrke said. He noted that the commission's calls to close down the landfill have never been part of a legal process by the town to shutdown the site.

"I can write to the Governor too," he said this week, referring to the commission's letter to Gov. Michael Dukakis requesting his intervention in closing down the landfill. "If they (the commission) have a legitimate beef, why not go to court?"

The attorney noted that the commission's call to shutdown the landfill in September, was never more than a request made to selectmen. It was not a legal action taken in a court of law, he explained.

"When we sat down in October and talked with officials from Cohasset, that was the first time I had ever heard about the water commission calling for the closure of Cohasset Heights. We never saw such an order, because there was none. This was simply a request made by the commission to the selectmen.

"My point is," he continued, "is that there are

Sewer plan may be finalized for Town Meeting vote

The sewer commission expects that a modification of the Ward sewer plan may be finalized by April Town Meeting. If an agreement is reached between the town and the state, voters must approve that change.

According to Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis, it is anticipated there will be no change in the town's share of the facility plan costs. But the scope of the plan will be limited because of reduced federal funding. That is the portion of the plan yet to be decided, he said, and that will be the proposal placed before the town meeting.

DeSantis explained that because of the limitations placed on the scope of the work and the reduced federal funding assistance, the business district along Rte. 3A will definitely not be included in the revised plan.

Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing the Rte. 3A business owners, requested a meeting with the sewer commission which has been scheduled Feb. 25. However, DeSantis stated, "at this time, I'd say it's highly unlikely that the Rte. 3A business district will be sewered in the modified plan."

At the June special town meeting, voters approved

Proposed school budget exceeds cap

In continued budget discussions Monday night school superintendent, Eugene Crowell, added as top priorities a youth adjustment counselor, increase in gifted and talented program, reinstatement of a half-time home economics teacher and an instrumental music teacher.

These added items will boost the budget to 7.3 percent over last year's, exceeding the 30 percent cap set by the advisory committee.

Crowell also recommended a reduction of a third grade teacher and a reduction in the fuel request, upon the recommendation of the advisory committee.

Supt. Crowell prepared an extensive report to the committee, outlining his conditions for recommending the reinstallment of an instrumental instructor in the junior and senior high schools. This represents an $18,000 increase.

Because scheduling conflicts prevented students from taking band, Crowell recommended implementing a modified seven-period day.

The extended seventh period would last until 2:50 p.m. On a rotating weekly basis, the band instructor will meet with the senior high three times a week and the junior high, twice a week and vice versa.

"The beauty of this," Crowell pointed out, "is that students can have help from teachers twice a week in the High School and three times a week in the Junior High."

"A disadvantage," he added, "is that it is designed to help only the music system. It will not offer opportunities for other smaller subjects to draw from."

Crowell's recommendation also hinged on the condition that "the department continues to meet together to update curriculum and includes a teacher exchange with the Deer Hill School."

Committee member Jack Langmaid pointed out that because Cohasset is so heavily involved in sports, this might create a conflict for students involved in both athletics and band.

Member Barbara Bliss echoed these concerns, "I

Resident proposes curriculum consultant

In response to the increasing difficulty of the school department to obtain adequate budget funding, a group of citizens suggested that an outside group be hired to provide objective information to backup budget requests.

Jo-ann Rossi appeared before the school committee Monday night to explain the objective of the group, and to dispell the rumor that, "we want the school board audited."

"We want to provide the backup information to show the town that we cannot continue to function within our financial limits," she said.

While the school board was appreciative of the effort, they did not agree with the need for a consultant review.

Chairman Joseph Nedrow told Rossi, "We have no problem identifying where we have to cut and question priority.

Rossi explained, "That is not the purpose. It is to provide the backup to show the town you cannot cut. . .An outsider can be more objective."

Jack Langmaid replied, "Accreditation is a needs assessment, not in terms of dollars and cents, but by the fact that a lot of things are not in there because we don't have enough money."

Assistant Superintendent Stephen Hart suggested, "We shouldn't have as hard time convincing the people of Cohasset. If people cannot support this, then Cohasset and a lot of other communities are in a bad situation.

Member Diana Kornet said, "It rubs me the wrong way to spend $20 to $30 thousand on an outside assessment. I recognize the objective argument, but money is so tight."

After the meeting, Rossi expressed her frustrations regarding the committee's reaction.

"We don't mean to indicate they're not doing their job," she said. "We want to get more information to present to the town people in conjunction with theirs.

"We'd like to see part of the school budget exempt from Prop. 2½," she said, adding, "but we don't want to do anything that will fractionate."

Rossi added, "We talked to people in the state and on the faculty at Boston University, and they feel it is positive."

Presidents' Day Feb. 17

Banks, post offices, schools and all government offices will be closed all day, Presidents' Day, Feb. 17.

Retail stores, supermarkets, liquor stores and bars will be open.

Landfill committee

Two members are needed to fill vacancies on the Landfill Study Committee. Anyone interested in appointment to the committee, should contact the selectmen's office at Town Hall.

According to Chairman Sherry Becker, the committee is about to discuss the South Shore Coalition regarding a regional approach to the solid waste disposal.

Becker said that in order to begin the discussions, there should be at least one more person named to the committee.

Old Colony comments

The Board of Health and the Sewer Commission have submitted comments to selectmen regarding the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation project.

In a letter to selectmen, the Board of Health endorsed the project to revitalize the railroad system. However, they cautioned that the Old Colony right of way passed within 50 feet of the Sohier Street wells and within 400 feet of the Elms Meadow wells. An environmental report issued by the state does not include this information, the board warned selectmen. "This omission should certainly be pointed out in your comments," Health Agent Joseph Godzik stated in the letter.

The health agent noted that the Board of Health will do everything necessary "to bring this project to completion."

In a second letter to selectmen, Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis noted that the town anticipates using the former railroad bed from the intersection of the former line and Depot Court to the Hingham/Cohasset line for a sewer force main. This main, DeSantis said, will ultimately connect to Hull's wastewater treatment plant.

According to the commission chairman, the force main could be compatible with the operation of the railroad system. "However, we understand that the specifications for this force main pipe require a stronger gauge casing," he stated.

DeSantis suggested that if the new railroad is utilized, the town should require compensation by the state or the railroad company for the extra cost of constructing the force main with the stronger casing. The town would also require an easement for access for repair and maintenance of the main pipe.

Special inspector denied

Selectmen quickly denied a request to appoint a special town building inspector to deal with the construction at 100 Pond Street.

An on-going disagreement between developer Frederick Thayer and Inspector Edward Poskus led to Thayer's request for a special inspector. Saying it would set a poor precedent, selectmen denied the request at their Monday night meeting.

In continued communications between Poskus and the developer, they have outlined a mutual loss of confidence.

Election candidates

The field of candidates for public office grows larger each week as more residents obtain nomination papers for the available positions.

The one three-year vacancy on the board of health will have some competition. Sharon Becker of 186 South Main Street has taken out nomination papers for the seat. Matthew E. Sullivan of 32 Nichols Road also obtained papers for that position. Incumbent Barbara Kern has not indicated whether she will seek re-election to the board.

Michael J. Spirito of 20 Highland Court will challenge incumbent Charles DeSantis for a three-year position on the sewer commission.

Lucia R. Woods, a current member of the Paul Pratt Library Board of Trustees has obtained nomination papers for re-election. Max S. Maire of 85 Elm Street also obtained papers for a seat on the board. There are three, three-year positions available in the April 12 election.

Other candidates who took out nomination papers for elected office include: two, three-year positions for selectmen: Clifford Mitman, James Gallagher, Martin Dooley, Vito Conte, Jerome "Andy" Whitney III, Martha Gjesteby, John K. McNabb Jr., and David Spencer Duncombe; two, three-year positions for the school committee: C. Christopher Ford, James Leonard, and Dane Hahn; one five-year seat on the planning board: Robert Davenport, Daniel Cotton, Mark Trask; one three-year seat on the water commission: Ronald Goodwin, Robert Jackson; a four-year term and a five-year term on the housing authority: John Muncey; three, three-year seats on the library board of trustees: Michelle Buckley, Cynthia Johnson Whealler and Lucia Wood.

Housing authority vacancy

Housing Authority member Marguerite Libby submitted her resignation this week from that board.

Because of the resignation, there is now a four-year unexpired term available on housing authority.

Selectmen noted that Libby submitted her resignation in time for candidates to file for the office.

Nomination papers to fill the four-year unexpired term will be available at the town clerk's office until 5 p.m. Feb. 27.

Tree and park appointment

Selectmen appointed Robert Pipenbrink to the tree and park department, effective Feb. 3.

In a separate issue, selectmen will hold a grievance hearing requested by Pipenbrink as a result of his firing from the water department. According to Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, Pipenbrink was fired from the department when he told his supervisors he had applied for the tree and park position. His current position is a schedule step higher than the water department position.

Selectmen scheduled the grievance hearing with water department officials for Feb. 25.

Whatever happened to?

Former school administrator 'keeps his distance'

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was less than 20 years ago, but education in Cohasset has drastically changed its appearance and substance.

Former Superintendent William Ripley was there through much of the change, and still observes the never-ending evolution of education. "I keep up on what's happening in the school system," he said this week at his Old Pasture Road home, "but I'm not involved with it. I try to keep my distance and not interfere.I am very interested, however, to see who the school committee picks as the new high school principal."

It is natural that the former superintendent, who retired from the post in 1969, should be closely observing that selection. For several years he served as the principal of the high school, and later as both superintendent and high school principal. That combined post was eliminated in 1952.

"The schools were getting large then," Ripley noted, "and the job was becoming quite busy." The student population was on the rise, a situation which is now reversing itself, he added.

"The system was still growing when I left," Ripley stated. "But with the cost of homes in Cohasset now, there are not so many families moving in with young children."

Ripley was named acting superintendent in 1942, while Supt. James W. Doyle saw active duty during the war. He returned for a few months, and Ripley was named superintendent in January, 1943. He served until 1969.

He served the Cohasset schools first as a science and math teacher at the old Joseph Osgood School on Elm Street beginning in 1926. He retired as superintendent in 1969, two years shy of the mandatory 70-year requirement because of his wife's illness.

While Ripley was superintendent, he oversaw the construction of the Deer Hill School and the high school, the expansion of the Osgood elementary school, and the beginning of the South Shore Vocational High School.

The Osgood School was formerly called the Ripley Road School. When the new high school was built, the name Osgood was transferred to the elementary school. "I wanted the Ripley Road School name changed. That really wasn't a very good name for a school. And Rev. Joseph Osgood deserved to have his name on a school here. He had been the minister at the Unitarian Church, a representative to the General Court and the superintendent of schools." Ripley recalled.

Born in Hingham, his ancestors originated from Hingham, England. Ripley said he and the Cohasset Ripleys (Sheldon and Noel) have tried in vain to discover some connection between their families.

William Ripley

Appointed to the Cohasset school system in 1926, Ripley is a graduate of Brown University and the Harvard School of Education. At that time, the Hingham and Cohasset school systems were combined. While riding the train one day, his friend told the school superintendent about Ripley who had just graduated and was seeking a teaching position. The superintendent called him immediately. Despite another job offer, the superintendent told Ripley "forget about it, you're going to work in Cohasset." He stayed in the Cohasset school system for 43 years.

A member of the Old Goats and the Rotary Club, Ripley said his only association with the schools now is through the club's annual scholarship. He reviews the students' records and assists the club in selecting the scholarship recipients.

While he was teaching, Ripley said, his classes could be as small as six in physics, 15 in advanced algebra, or 40 in general science. The class sizes, he estimated, were about the same size as the current proportions.

Ripley also served as the high school's football coach for five years, and as the baseball coach for more than 10 years. The baseball team managed to win the South Shore League championship two years under his leadership. Although the student population was sparse, Coach Ripley never had trouble fielding a team.

His interests the past few years have turned to the school's championship basketball squad.

"Last year I went to every boys' basketball game and even to the finals in Worcester," he said. "My grandchildren had been talking about how good the team was, and then I got someone to go with me. Malcolm Stevens (the former town accountant who recently passed away) and I got along very well. I don't drive now, and he used to drive me to all the games."

The former superintendent remembered Cohasset's first basketball coach, Don McNeil, who, after losing 10 straight, uttered after his team's 11th defeat, "you can't win them all."

The Cohasset schools have changed in many ways, he noted, particularly regarding costs. The year he took over the financial reins of the system, the budget totaled $80,000.

"I also had one advantage the present school superintendent does not. When I was superintendent, the system was growing and I was always involved in hiring teachers. I never had the disagreeable job of laying off a teacher," Ripley stated.

He had to contend with a six-member school committee, which was at one time chaired by his former student, Ozzie Ingram. ("He was an outstanding student, even in the sciences although that was not his interest," Ripley added).

When asked why he remained superintendent so long when his successors departed on a regular basis, Ripley answered, "I was happy, and the school committee didn't know enough to fire me."

Selectmen include water sprinkler system article

Selectmen reviewed and accepted a list of about 60 articles for the annual Town Meeting and the Special Town Meeting to be held April 5.

Most requests will be included in the warrant, except for the water commission's proposal to develop a Land Bank trust, an article to increase the dog officer's salary, and an article to remove the building inspector's position from the employee's compensation plan.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen discussed several articles and voted not to recommend them on the floor of Town Meeting. Several, including a proposal to require a residential water sprinkler system in all new homes, will be included in the warrant without selectmen's recommendaton.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock and Capt. Mark Trask discussed four articles proposed by the Fire Department for the annual Town Meeting warrant. Among the articles which will be included is a requirement that all homes be clearly designated by street number, all new subdivisions and cluster developments be connected into the department's fire alarm system, all new businesses less than 7,500 square feet be equipped with fire alarm systems, and all new residences be equipped with a residential water sprinkler system.

Although selectmen agreed to submit all the fire department articles for the warrant, they did not recommend the requirement for sprinkler systems in new residences.

"I'm not anti-fire prevention," Selectman Diane Sullivan said regarding the proposed regulation," but I think this is asking too much. It's wonderful if people do this on their own, but it's too much to require."

Chief Brock had explained the sprinkler systems, which would cost anywhere between $200 and $3,000 per new home construction, have been documented to save lives in home fires. Whereas a smoke detector is only sensitive to smoke, a sprinkler system is activitated when a room heats to beyond 140 degrees.

"And who pays the bill when it malfunctions?" Selectman Mary Jane McArthur questioned.

The small business fire alarm system is proposed, Capt. Trask noted, to fill the gap in fire prevention between the large businesses which are required to include advanced fire alarm and sprinkler systems, to homes which require smoke detectors.

Chief Brock explained the fire alarm systems would only affect new businesses or new additions to existing businesses. This proposal will be discussed with the planning board, Trask added.

Selectmen decided to include three of the four articles requested by the water department. The only proposal rejected was the proposed formation of a land bank trust to acquire and manage open and conservation land for the town.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew noted that although the concept is innovative, the proposal would be more appropriate under the jurisdiction of the conservation commission.

A second article by the water department was included in the warrant, although selectmen did not vote to support the proposal. The article requests the formation of a stabilization fund for the water department. Andrew explained that while the water department remains $253,000 in debt to the town's general fund, the proposal for a stabilization fund is "mute."

He also noted the proposal would take an act of the state legislature to approve "and I think they'll get an adverse reaction from the Department of Revenue," Andrew added.

Although selectmen discussed whether there is a need for an additional town vehicle, they voted to include a request to purchase a four-wheel drive vehicle for the Tree and Park Department. Selectmen noted that the wording of the article should be changed so a four-wheel drive is not specified. After discussing whether the appropriation should be included in this year's budget, selectmen said they would discuss the proposal with Superintendent Peter Laugelle before they vote to recommend it.

Selectmen voted to accept two articles from the recreation commission including a proposal to designate handicapped parking spaces at Government Island and Sandy Beach, and administratuve changes in the facility permits process.

Three sewer commission articles were accepted by the board, including a proposal to accept a modified wastewater treatment facility plan; $20,000 to repair the existing treatment plant, and appropriations for a portable electric generator to be used by various town departments.

Other articles accepted by the board include a request to complete the funding for the library's association with the Old Colony Network at $26,000; establishment of a water protection district, a hazardous waste materials day;eight zoning articles sponsored by the planning board, and extension of the water main into the Newtonville section of town. Selectmen noted the town has the authority to impose assessments on those homes connected to the main.

A request for an appropriation to repair the leaking roof at the water department office will also be included in the annual town meeting warrant.

The special Town Meeting warrant will include a proposal to make the town accountant's post a contractual position; additional appropriations for selectmen's collective bargaining budget for labor counsel; money to air condition the remaining portion of town hall which may cost between $2,000 to $14,000; and $12,000 as the town's share in a feasibility study of Little Harbor. The state is providing $28,000 toward that study.

Parent researches school scheduling options

In order to free class scheduling time at the high school, parent Tanna Kasperowicz has suggested reducing the amount of hours a junior and senior year student is required to take physical education.

In her research to open up time within the student's schedule, Kasperowicz said she uncovered a little-known state law which allows a school system to reduce the required number of hours for physical education. If a student in the 11th and 12th grade is allowed to reduce the number of physical education classes per week, he would be able to fill his schedule with needed study halls or more music curriculum, she suggested this week to school administrators.

The law was enacted by the state Department of Education in 1981, but is rarely utilized in school systems. Individual school committees must approve the reduction of hours for the two grades before scheduling may be altered, she stated.

In a letter sent this week to Asst. Supt. Stephen Hart, Kasperowicz explained that if the school committee reduced the required number of hours for physical education to 30 clock hours per year, "this might open up two periods a week for band and chorus."

The school administrators recently unveiled a proposed budget that would eliminate the band and instrumental music program at the high school in June.

Although Kasperowicz said the reduction of gym hours might allow students time to participate in an instrumental music program, there are other options they could follow. Many parents have complained that because their child participates in dual varsity sports, the student is in need of more study time to complete homework assignments. By decreasing physical education time, many of these athletes would be entitled to more study periods per week, she suggested.

Other school systems in the western suburbs have initiated the scheduling options. High schools in Braintree, Newton and Lexington have implemented the reduction of required gym hours and are pleased with the results. All three systems have exercised the option in different ways, mandating certain requirements for those students who opt to reduce their physical education classes.

All three systems are pleased with the results of the scheduling methods and have utilized the alternate option for several years.

The amendment to the physical education regulation was approved by the state Board of Education in 1981. The state law requires that physical education classes are available to the two high school grades, but the total number of required hours is up to the discretion of the individual school committees.

In her communications to the Asst. Supt Hart, Kasperowicz suggested that a decision to reduce the required hours of physical education would allow administrators to implement a more creative and diverse schedule. Students would be allowed time to participate in instrumental music, study periods or other optional classes such as typing.

"The bottom line is that there are options for class scheduling for our junior and seniors," she said this week.

High school principal Richard Streeter had previously suggested to the school committee that reducing the physical education requirement for students is not legal.

Kasperowicz noted that reducing the gym hour requirement may not save the school system money. It may in fact cost more as diverse classes are added to the student schedule. But in her communication to the administrators, she wanted to alert them that local schools have an available option.

"It would open up more time in a student's schedule, and he would be free to take other classes. That may not save the schools any money. It could be more expensive because they could opt for more classes," she explained.

At its meeting Monday night, the school committee did not discuss the communication sent by Kasperowicz.

Cohasset couple to fight court eviction ruling

A Forest Avenue couple has until March 20 to submit a written statement to a Quincy District Court judge, explaining why a tenant was ordered from their home.

Roy Manns and his wife, Beryl Joy Manns, testified in a day-long hearing last Friday that Mrs. Manns was justified in evicting Renee Jones and her family from the Forest Avenue home where they had resided for several months.

A motion to continue the case until mid-March was denied by Judge Lewis Whitman. The Mannses had filed the motion for continuance, saying Mrs. Manns was attempting to obtain legal counsel for her defense.

The Boston legal firm of Hale and Dorr have agreed to represent Mrs. Manns in the proceedings, but Atty. Robert Johnston needed more time to review the documents and prepare a case, Roy Manns stated.

Atty. Johnston will be representing Mrs. Manns in all future court appearances, according to Manns. At last week's hearing, Manns represented himself and his wife in court.

At the close of the hearing, Judge Whitman stated he felt Mrs. Manns and her husband acted in contempt of the court by illegally ordering the tenantcy of Jones and her family. Before he made a formal decision and granted a financial award, the judge requested that all parties submit formal statements.

The attorney representing Jones requested $90,000 in damages from the Mannses, including $50 per day reimbursement for the costs of interim shelter, although a portion of the rent is paid by a social service agency.

According to Manns, the new attorney representing his wife may file for a retrial.

Since the legal proceedings began last summer, Manns has been accused of attempting to illegally evict her tenant. Manns has been found in contempt of the court's orders to allow Jones to remain in her Forest Avenue home. Manns said she was trying to evict Jones after she had destroyed portions of her home. In August, Manns began the eviction proceedings in court, but Judge Whitman ordered the landlord to leave the home. When Manns refused the order, she was temporarily jailed for contempt.

The case has been continued twice, one time by request of Jones' attorney, and a second time because a tape recording to the previous court proceedings were not available.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SHOULDERING NECK PAIN

Shoulder pain is often confusing. It frequently prompts questions as to where it actually comes from. The cause of the pain may be as simple as over-fatigue, chilling, or having held the head in an awkward position. The pain also can be due to something that actually occurs in the shoulder, such as an injury, bursitis or over-use of the muscles. In addition, it can be from referred pain, that is, pain that is felt in the shoulder but actually originates from a problem somewhere else. Examples of referred pain include the radiating pain of a heart attack or pain from the back of the neck. In fact, disorders of the neck present themselves much more frequently as shoulder pain than as neck pain.

The science of chiropractic serves to go directly to the source rather than merely deal with the symptom. In this way chiropractic is a knifeless, drugless and natural approach to the problem and discomfort you may be experiencing. We invite you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today and arrange for the chiropractic exam that will allow Mother Nature to provide her natural healing processes to better your happiness and enjoyment of every day. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

HINT:

Referred pain is usually vague, nagging and felt in a broad, diffuse area.

Building inspector orders dump to file for permit. . .

laws in this country. If Cohasset Heights Ltd. is actually polluting the water of Cohasset, the water commission would go straight to court to shut them down. But they haven't. They never made any orders. They just requested that selectmen think about."

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt confirmed a legal order was never pursued in court to shutdown the landfill.

"We made a request to town counsel, which was given to Special Counsel Michael Leon to investigate the legal powers to order the landfill to cease and desist," Pratt said. "Leon's answer includes the elements of litigation" between the town and the landfill operators and therefore can not be discussed.

Pratt said the commission never notified the attorney for the landfill operators about the request to shut down the site. The attorney later filed a Freedom of Information Act, Pratt noted, and was given a copy in December of the commission's meeting minutes and the request made to town counsel.

Inspector Poskus explained that the landfill operators must apply to the zoning board of appeals for a change in site assignment. "What they need is permission to extend the permit given by the zoning board in 1976, to include building refuse. In 1980 the Board of Health allowed that change, but I don't believe they have the power to grant a change in the condition of approval given by the zoning board," he said.

If the landfill owners apply to the zoning board of appeals within 10 days, the zoning board will schedule a hearing on the matter.

The town's zoning officer said he was informed by town counsel to allow the 10-day grace period in which to file the application.

"If they don't apply, I'll have no choice but to order the operation to cease and desist," Poskus added.

In the meantime, the water commission has yet to receive a reply to their request made last week to the governor. Commission Chairman Pratt said the board has received no formal reply to the request, although information channeled through to the commission suggests there will be a "high-level policy review of the entire Cohasset Heights matter by the DEQE and the Office of Environmental Affairs," Pratt added.

At a meeting of the water commission last week Pratt noted, "meanwhile, our letter is in perpetuity as the balance of clean water versus the balance of garbage."

have some reservations and we may end up with some serious problems."

Crowell stressed that cooperation between coaches and band was necessary for this to work.

The coaches cannot require athletes at a practice before 3 p.m. and the band leader must release them for road trips.

Copies of Crowell's report are available upon request.

In other budget items, Crowell recommended an addition of a youth adjustment counselor with a salary range of $23,000 to $31,086.

In response to reservations about extending the gifted and talented program, Crowell decided to schedule a presentation at next week's meeting. The increase equals $8,270.

"It is not the main prupose of this program to create an elite group," Crowell told the committee.

Discussion also followed the recommendation to reinstate a half-time home economics teacher, bringing the budget up $5,593.

"I have a hard time with two full-time people in industrial arts when none of the classes are full," Mrs. Bliss said. Dr. Nedrow explained that those figures were misleading because the teachers would also be teaching two math courses.

Crowell added, "It is the price you have to pay to maintain a comprehensive curriculum." Budget discussions will resume after next week.

Boy scout camp

Selectmen granted approval to hold a weeklong Cub Scout day camp this summer.

According to Scout Master Merle Brown, the day camp will include Cub Scouts from ten area towns and will be held in Wheelwright Park.

After a successful Klondike event was held last month at the park, the scout leaders requested the site for the summer day camp.

Brown explained that the scouts would be dropped off and picked up by their parents at the North Main Street entrance. The boys will be 7 to 9 years old, he noted.

A "national guard-type" tent will be erected in the northern section of the park, away from the riding facility. Older Boy Scouts and adult leaders, including Arthur Lehr of Cohasset, will supervise all activities, he said. No food will be served on the site.

Selectmen unanimously granted the request and waived a fee for use of the town park.

BUYER'S REMORSE

Your Realtor calls with great news. Your offer has just been accepted. Congratulations! You're about to become a homeowner!

Your initial euphoria may be short lived, however. You begin to have second thoughts. First, it's the mortgage. It's so much money and takes 30 years to pay off. You look over the estimated closing costs, adding up the cash you'll need for settlement, and feeling like you'll never be able to afford to eat meat again. Finally, you stare at the structural inspector's report and convince yourself that the roof will blow off and every major system will fail the day after you move in. You're in a frenzy. "What have I gotten into, and how can I get out of it?"

Relax. This is normal, so normal that it even has a name — Buyer's Remorse. It's virtually always temporary, and if you have an extreme attack, don't hesitate to call your realtor. We're experienced at helping our customers through homebuying jitters with almost every property we sell.

☐ TONIGHT! Thurs., Feb. 13th., lovers and others are invited to attend the Valentine Cabaret at Kimball's By-the-Sea, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The Valentine Cabaret is being produced by the Stars of the CHS Music Department. Yes, the Pirates will return to sing their love songs from Penzance. You will be delighted by Mr. Shirosky's flutequartet, jazz ensemble. For a special treat, Choral Director Bryan Marks will delight us all with a special love song.

Your $3.00 donation ($6 per couple) will provide you with entertainment, special eating treats from the hands of the man who feeds the stars...and you'll be in very good company. Students and adults (singles and couples) are urged to attend.

☐ Marine 2nd Lt. Stephen A. Racine, son of Conrad D. and Mary M. Racine of 120 Forest Ave., was graduated from The Basic School.

While attending The Basic School, located at the Marine Corps Development and Education Command Quantico, Va., Racine was prepared, as a newly-commissioned officer, for assignment to the Fleet Marine Force and given the responsibility of a rifle platoon commander.

Racine was taught leadership by example and the importance of teamwork. He was also required to participate in a demanding physical conditioning program.

A 1985 graduate of United States Navel Academy, Annapolis, MD, with a Bachelor of Science degree, he joined the Marine Corps in 1985.

☐ Dick Guilfoyle is back in the news! He has accepted a call to serve on President Reagan's Eight-man "Inner Circle Council on Small Busines"to represent the direct marketing industry. Guilfoyle, of Nichols Road, is President and Chief Executive Officer of the Sturges Corp., a Boston-based holding compnay which owns and operates two small direct marketing firms in Hanover, Ma., a national, full-service direct marketing ad agency in Hingham, plus the controlling interest in a pewter casting enterprise in-Wilmington, Ma., and a jewelry assembly facility in Attleboro, Ma.

Dick was named "Outstanding-Businessman of the Year" by the small business administration back in 1977, when he also received a governor's citation for his "distinguished contribution toward furthering thespirit of patriotism in America" as a result of his work during America's Bicentennial in 1976. He has alsoreceived-several awards from the direct mailing association.

A highly decorated World War II Disabled Veteran himself, Guilfoyle has won considerable recognition-among small businessmen throughout New England for his dedicated work aimed at achieving more employment of Disabled Vets. He will be joining the President's council in May 1986, when it convenes.

☐ Julie Hoogeveen has been selected as one of ten Dana scholars in the Class of '88 at Wheaton College,Norton, Ma. Scholars are selected annually on the basis of academic accomplishment, leadership, and community service involvement and financial aid. Julie was named to the Deans list for the first semester, and is also a sports writer for the "Wheaton Wire", an intermural Dorm Rep., a member of the Recreational Program Committee, a member of the cross country team, and works as a student Athletic Trainer (wonder when the girl sleeps!). In her freshman year, Julie was selected to the Wheaton Scholar Program.

☐ Jackie Plante was spotted in the Celtics crowd a few weeks ago, and her smile was a dazzling one! Jackie, a 1984 CHS grad, had won the four tickets to the game from the Cohasset Basketball Boosters raffle, and brought some of her family members with her to the game. They had a wonderful time (next year remember to buy a raffle ticket yourself). Another thing that contributed heavily to their joy was the fact that Jackie had just learned that she made Dean's list at Tufts, where she is enrolled in the College of Engineering, and is a sophomore.-Jackie is the daughter of Pat and Maria Plante of Jerusalem Road.

☐ Three of the CHS Soccer Team Varsity received an award recently, and it was a real honor! Chris-Kirdendall, John Reddy, and Bob-Shultz received tha All Star awards at the Eastern Mass Soccer Coach's-Banquet, and certainly derserved them!

☐ Dana K. Simeone, son of June and Louis Simeone of Bancroft Road and a 1969 CHS grad, is a member of the business world in Colorado. Dana received his masters in business administration from the University of-Colorado at Denver and is now employed at Credit and Systems Analyst by United Bank of Aurora, Colorado. Dana lives in Denver with his wife Arlene and their two sons, Joshua and Scott.

☐ Everyone joins in "seconding" the the editorial that was in the Mariner last week regarding Jack Langmaid. It is doubtful that he can be replaced, his sound judgment and fairness will never be forgotten.

☐ Rumor has it that the sixth graders at Deer Hill should definitely start a paper of their own, their writing is outstanding and a joy to read.

☐ It seems as though at least half the town has plans to go skiing over the vacation next week! If you go, be sure to let us know about your "adventures". If you are not going, remember the "Drop In at the Art Center for the young ones. According to all of the "Women's " magazines, framing your youngsters art work is definitely "IN", and surely is a keepsake...plus, the kiddos love it!

☐ The Bloodmobile was sure success, with the total amount of blood donated reaching over 90 pints. Mr. Odermatt was very pleased with the results and has promised further details.

☐ Congratulations to the hockey-team, with their two BLG wins against Scituate and Hull last week, and to Brian Edwards who scored 61 points in a single game last weekend. That had to have broken every imaginable record...

☐ That is the news from here, please keep it coming!

Modifications to Ward plan set for town vote

allowing the business district into the proposed sewered area. But DeSantis said because of the anticipated reduction in federal assistance, the sewer area will be reduced and will likely not include those businesses.

"There is very little need there," he said, "and because the funding will be reduced, the cost justification is not in the ballpark. And the legality of the addition made to Article 48 (of the June, 1984 special town meeting) is probably flawed. The businessmen were going to pay their costs and you can't mix federal and state money with residential funds."

The article scheduled for the April town meeting warrant will seek approval of an amendment to the Ward plan voted at the June, 1984 special town meeting. Although an amendment to the plan has yet to be worked out between the state and the town, DeSantis expects a decision will be finalized during upcoming discussions.

If a proposal is not reached in time to hold a public hearing before the April meeting, the commissioners will schedule the article for a special town meeting which may be held in June.

The commission chairman said he is optimistic there will be enough time to conclude discussions with the Department of Water Pollution Control, and to schedule a public hearing on results of those negotiations. The state has been meeting with attorneys for the commission since January in a renewed attempt to devise a wastewater treatment plan for Cohasset.

"In fact there are two discussion sessions scheduled for this week," DeSantis said. "We're getting into the real nitty gritty and we should end up defining a sewer service area within the cost restraints of Article 48."

If the talks do not conclude in time to schedule a public hearing before the April town meeting, the commission could include a proposal in a subsequent special town meeting which may possibly be held in June.

"We'd like to have an article drafted by mid-February or the beginning of March," he noted. "If we can't, there won't be enough time to schedule a public hearing before the meeting and we'll have to wait for the special town meeting."

The commission chairman explained that in the previously-approved Ward plan, the town anticipated 94 percent funding from the state and federal government. With the reduction of that assistance to 40 percent, the town would have to pay more of the total project cost. Therefore, in order not to increase the town's share of the project, the scope of the plan must be reduced, DeSantis explained.

"We haven't talked with the Rte. 3A businessmen yet," he noted, "but it's highly unlikely that the area will be sewered in the modified plan."

The commission will have two additional articles within the April town meeting warrant. The second article will request $20,000 to repair and rehabilitate the wastewater treatment facility. The treatment plant must be updated and repaired to meet Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements.

The final article sponsored by the commission is a request for a maximum of $15,000 to purchase a portable emergency generator pump. The pump will be used primarily at the high school pumping station, but can be transferred to other locations in an emergency.

DeSantis said the portable pump may cost the town substantially less than $15,000 if purchased secondhand. The larger amount was included in the warrant to provide adequate funds if a used pump can not be acquired.

The need for an emergency generator was brought to light during Hurricane Gloria when the emergency backup system did not function properly. Town officials noted that if more people utilized the high school civil defense center, the need for a functioning septic pumping system would have been essential.

Rep. Murray discusses sunset legislation

It has been an eight-year struggle for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to finally have a "sunset law," according to State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray who refiled a bill to mandate doing away with Government obsolescense.

"The law gives the Division of Local Mandates the authority to review state laws, rules and regulations that may have outlived their usefulness but continue to cost taxpayers money" Mary Jeanette stated.

The Division of Mandates will first examine mandates in force since the 1966 enactment of the Home Rule Amendment of the Massachusetts Constitution. The Home Rule Amendment redefined separation of powers between local and state government, preserving a measure of local autonomy that is important to Massachusetts communities.

"The Division of Local Mandates will review mandates on a five-year cycle and will make recommendations to the Massachusetts General Court to continue, modify or eliminate laws and programs," Murray said.

Support center

This week marked open house week for senior citizens. Despite an unexpected snow storm, we hope it proved to be a success.

Some may have their doubts about the need or desire among our senior citizens for a center. You may ask how many elderly residents want to gather for needle-point and lectures on high blood pressure?

But that really isn't the essence of a senior center. What makes a center successful, is not the guest speaker or the class offerings. The people who grace that center, who gather for friendship and conversation are the basis of a senior center.

They are surely attracted to the center by interesting classes, lively and topical lectures and medical information. But not many senior citizens would flock to a center if they didn't know their friends would join them there.

Director Kathy Bryanton is attempting to create a senior center that will attract everyone, from the elderly widow who would like a morning of exercise and good conversation, to the gentleman who simply wants to sip a cup of coffee in the company of his neighbors and friends.

The open house is sampling of the courses, conversations and activities the center will eventually offer on a regular basis. Yes, there'll be arts and crafts courses, exercise and lectures. There'll be a bit of everything, a taste of what to expect from your community's senior center.

It might take a push to get your mother, father, brother or sister down to the Community Center this week, but it's worth the effort. Introduce them to the people there - the real 'center' of the senior center. Without the people to support the center, its foundation will topple.

This week offers you a unique experience to taste what life as a Cohasset senior can be - fulfilling, fun, and active. We urge all seniors to become involve in the programs offered at the center.

A priviledge

There are 15 town board vacancies in the April 12 election. It looks like most of the available seats will be contested.

True competition for elected office is what democracy is all about. In a time when other nations are enduring election frauds and charades, we must hold tight to this tradition.

It may be a local election, but the results will have far-reaching consequences. What will happen to our sewer plan? Will the school committee soon contemplate a Prop 2 1/2 override? Will the Cohasset Heights landfill controversy mean more litigation for the town?

People in other pseudo-democratic nations would not dream of participating in such deliberations. But our vote on April 12 will likely decide which course the town will follow on many issues which will affect residents far into the future.

In Cohasset, the vote is truly significant and we should cherish that privilege.

The burden of the winter's first snowstorm is placed upon these No. Main Street trees, which rest upon a fence for support. (Carol McCann photo)

Letters

To the Editor:

In response to Mr. DeSantis' letter of Feb. 6, I suppose his comments about how it is done in other countries, and not benefiting "major engineering firms or other special interests", titillates some people, like those who objected to me speaking at town meeting. But hopefully some residents are interested in substantive information.

The Hull connection, if it ever is consumated, certainly will cost the State and federal government less than to have funded Cohasset's own treatment plant. But the Hull connection will cost the town more, both in first cost and in annual cost, essentially because we are buying the unfunded part of the Hull plant. Furthermore, it will place onerous water use restrictions on the sewered area as voted at town meeting a year ago, and preclude any extension of the sewered area.

I congratulate Mr. DeSantis for finding and quoting the one favorble comment in the EPA ruling of June 18, 1985—the rest of the 22 page document was a stern and detailed indictment of Cohasset's funding, legal and technical delusions. After all, it's good diplomacy to leave a sop to the one that's defeated—but that's all it is.

The five reasons given by Mr. DeSantis for refusing the $1,000,000 grant are incorrect. The NEPA and MEPA reviews had been done and the EPA FONSI (Funding of No Significant Impact) was completed.

Extensive outfall studies had been done, but confirmatory dye studies are not commonly done (and were not done for the Hull plant). At Cohasset's request, DEQE had agreed to fund dye studies. Of course the dye studies hadn't been done yet—they were a minor component of the $1,000,000 Cohasset so foolishly rejected.

Also incorrect is the statement that there was no complete analysis of alternatives. The M&E work did include such a study. As for the additional "innovations" that were studied by Ward and which have fallen flat, common sense should have dismissed them without spending either Cohasset's money or government money. The only surviving alternatives are 2 inch sewer lines and the Hull connection. The former should die; the latter may be less costly than building our own plant now at escalated costs and reduced funding, but is certainly more costly and less satisfactory than the plant we could have had.

Maybe Attorney General Belotti doesn't believe in Agreements for Judgment, but his office has remained quite interested in our fumbling failure to honor it, and his representatives were pointedly present at a recent meeting between Cohasset and DEQE. Cohasset is tempting a test of Mr. Belotti's belief or disbelief in court.

Mr. DeSantis seems to imply that I come from a less democratic country with his comment that in America the community determines its own future. Well, America is also a nation of law, so as to preserve the safety, health and comfort of all. No community is above the law, especially when it vociferously claims the law is on its side in its demand for funding. Cohasset may have determined its future, but in my view it has bungled the determination. Democracy, in any country, is the process of counting heads without any regard for what is in them. Often there isn't much but bits of misinformation, and a childlike trust that some leader or other must know what he's doing because he is so articulate.

Where we are now on the Priority List may not matter—the delays seem likely to push us beyond the time when funding will be available. Then it will be loans. Towns, and juveniles, that get their own way aren't necessarily the better for it.

Water Dept. letter to Governor Dukakis

(This is the letter sent by Cohasset's water commissioner to Gov. Michael Dukakis. Ed.)

Dear Governor Dukakis:

The Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners was recently informed that a decision of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering is expected this week relative to the continued operations of a sanitary landfill located in the Watershed Protection District of our declared public water supply.

As custodians of the town's drinking water resources, we respectfully request your direct intervention and assistance on behalf of the public health and safety of the residents of Cohasset.

The D.E.Q.E. is about to issue a ruling relative to the merits of proposed continued and expanded operations of Cohasset Heights, Ltd., a large commercial landfill which drains leachate into the water sources of Lily Pond, Cohasset's primary public water supply.

To date, the town has not received enough attention from D.E.Q.E. in focusing regulatory action on Cohasset Heights as a serious water supply protection issue. It would be unconscionable for such an oversight to continue now that the D.E.Q.E. and the Town of Cohasset have been appraised of the serious nature of the problem.

We can appreciate the complicated nature of the work conducted by D.E.Q.E., and the time expended in such efforts. However, we feel that the drinking water supplies of the Town are too precious to risk any further delays of action.

The Board of Water Commissioners of the Town of Cohasset hereby petitions you, as Chief Executive of the Commonwealth, to render assistance to this Board and to the Town such that:

1. The operations of Cohasset Heights, Ltd. be ordered to cease and desist immediately.

2. The landfill operators be directed to contain, close and otherwise halt environmentally damaging discharges of foreign materials into the surface and ground waters of the Commonwealth proximate to such site.

3. The Town of Cohasset be held indemnified and harmless by Cohasset Heights, Ltd. from any and all deleterious impacts upon the quality of its water, from discharges which may emerge from the operations of its water, from discharges which may emerge from the operations of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

We are fully aware of the extraordinary nature of our request to you. Please be assured we would not be making such petition if we believed this matter was not of the highest urgency, or if we doubted your personal dedication to the preservation of vital public resources.

We will be glad to discuss this undertaking in detail with any personnel you may choose to assign to this matter.

Thank you for your kind attention to the needs of the Town of Cohasset.

Peter J. Pratt, Chairman
For the Board of Water Commissioners

Cohasset Churches

Rev. Benbow set to leave Congregational Church

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

Reverend John Benbow, pastor of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, describes his church as "a family of families. Even people without a family are part of the church's family."

"We try to make all kinds of people feel welcome and I think we've succeeded in doing that. We as a church are characterized by a diversity of ages, backgrounds and beliefs and it makes an interesting gathering of people," he said.

This gathering of people is very much interested in what they can do for others.

According to Reverend Benbow, the church embraces a Christian theology in which the spiritual life of the church affects the spiritual life of the community.

"We've tried over the years to be concerned about the homeless and the hungry," he explained.

The church regularly contributes food and clothing to local aid centers such as Quincy Crisis Center. They are also active in denominational and non-denominational relief projects.

This spring the church, as a special project, is involved in the Heifer Project International. Under this project they will send a breed animal to a developing country with the understanding that the first born will be donated to someone else.

The church also is involved with churches of other denominations. As a member of the United Church of Christ, Reverend Benbow says, "We look forward to the day when all Christian Churches will be united again."

The United Church of Christ was founded 25 years ago when four denominations — Congregational, Christian, Evangelical and Reformed — decided to join together.

The Congregational Church traces its roots back to the Pilgrims on Plymouth Plantation. The premise of congregationalism is that the governing of the church is the responsibility of the people in it.

Each year the members elect committees to supervise the functions of the church. These include: trustees, to look after the physical needs of the church; deacons, to look after the spiritual needs of the church, the Christian Education Committee and the Music Committee.

Central to the Congregational tradition is the importance of preaching.

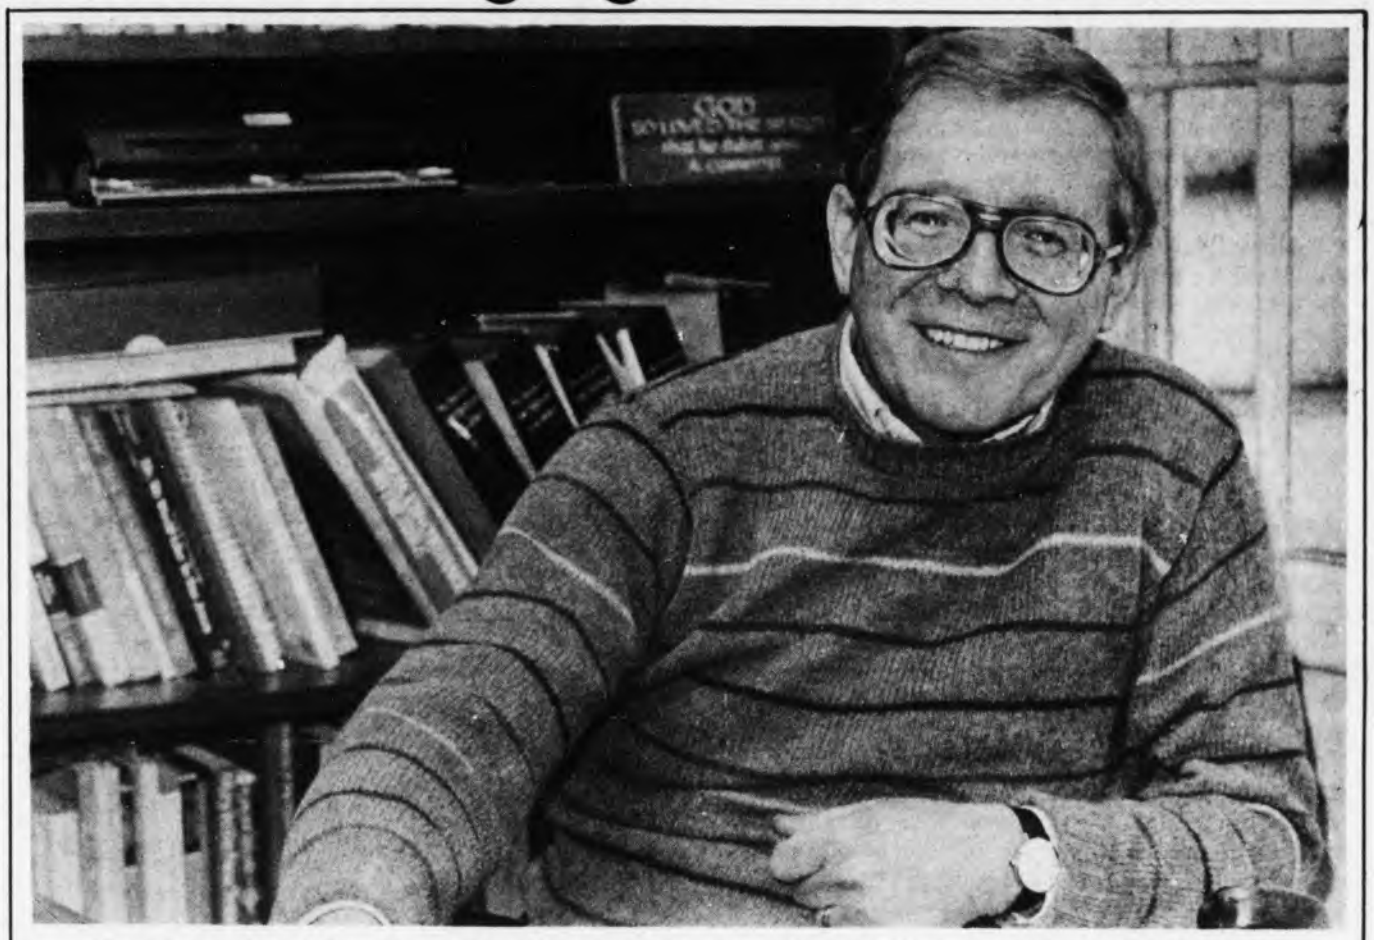
"In the old-time Congregational Church," Benbow said, "sermons would last two or three hours. Now they are 17 minutes and 25 seconds.

In his sermons, Benbow uses Biblical passages and relates them to contemporary issues. He also likes to use his own stories to teach lessons, often an entire sermon will be one of his stories.

Reverend Benbow does not preach as the divine son of God.

Instead he says, "Jesus is a man extraordinarily blessed and called by God to lead people."

Another tradition of the church is the ministry of music, expressed through both congregational and choir singing.



Reverend John Benbow of the Second Congregational Church, relaxes in his study.

Ellen Fryling, who acts as both choir director and organist, works to provide a varied musical program.

Twice a year the choir makes a special presentation. Last year they performed a contemporary musical based on the Christmas Story. After Easter, a cantata is planned based on the Story of Daniel.

The church has also had success in putting on Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, performing them on the community and school stages.

Organized services of the church include Sunday morning worship at 10 a.m. Sunday School is at the same hour for ages three through high school. A nursery is also provided.

The Congregational Church practices the two sacraments of communion and baptism. Communion is served once a month and on special occasions throughout the year.

Baptism is performed for both babies and adults during the regular church service.

According to Reverend Benbow, the church does not impose any rules or restrictions on its members, political or moral.

"In our heritage it is to be the teaching and the preaching of the word to provide a basis for understanding Christian faith and practice.

"Our denomination as a group has been with political questions of peace and justice, but we leave it to individuals to make their own political decisions," he said.

Reverend Benbow added that within the congregation "you will find people to the extreme right and to the left."

Reverend Benbow has been serving the Second Congregational Church 13 years. He has recently decided it is time for him to move on, and in April he will take over the pastorate of the Congregational Church in Milton.

He says Cohasset has been a very interesting place to work in and comes with its own unique challenges.

"It is very, very rich and sometimes very, very poor. Affluence in material things sometimes hides poverty of spirit.

"It is very tempting for people to be concerned only with their own lives, needs and ambitions and not to see needs of the community and of the world.

"The role of the churches in this kind of community is to keep people awake to their own needs and the needs of the world, both spiritual and physical," he said.

"Our church has always been concerned with ministering to both physical and spiritual needs," Rev. Benbow concluded.

Senior Center activities for February & March

The senior center will be closed Feb. 17 in observation of George Washington's birthday.

From the Director:

The Cohasset Senior Center has many new classes and programs planned for the month of February and March. Many classes offered are being taught by members of Cohasset's own community. We have a wealth and diversity of talent right here in our town.

If you wish to know more about a class, or upcoming guest speakers, call the Senior Center, at 383-9112, ask for Kathy.

Activities Schedule

Line Dancing:

Line Dance meets every Monday at 11 a.m. to noon with Edna Sullivan. The dances are not strenuous. Come and join in the fun. $3 per person.

Senior Lunch Program:

A hot lunch program is held every Tuesday at the First Parish House (across from the common) at noon. Many new friends meet at the lunch. Reservations for lunch must be made by Monday at noon. Call the Parish House at 383-1100 or the Senior Center 383-9112.

Wednesday Bowling:

Bowling meets every Wednesday morning 9:30 to 11 a.m. This is a great sport and great to catch up on the news. Anyone interested in joining should stop by the Senior Center office.

Gentle Exercise Class:

Exercise class every Tuesday and Thursday mornings 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. The classes meet with instructor Joanne Sheppard, it's a fun class with 3/4 hour of chair exercise, and standing, stretching. Good overall exercises. Cost $5.

Knitting Class:

Edna Finegan will continue with knitting classes on Fridays, 1 to 3 p.m. Anyone who is interested in learning to knit, or knitters at any level are welcome to join the group.

Tax Assistance:

Have you been putting off that difficult job? A.A.R.P. sponsored free tax assistance will be offered at the Senior Center. Please call for an appointment (383-9112); or consultant Betty Van Slych (383-1561) or Mildred Harrington at (383-0261).

Special Events:

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is producing the marvelous Agatha Christie murder mystery called "The Hollow". It opens on Friday February 28 and all seniors are invited to attend the Sunday, March 2 performance at 2 p.m for free. We will provide a bus (Senior Shuttle) to the Sunday showing so call the Senior Center for reservations.

Health Insurance:

Brenda O'Leary, from Medical East in Braintree will be our guest speaker on H.M.O. Health Maintenance Program. Mark your calendars: Feb. 25 11.30 a.m. at the First Parish House. Brenda will answer all your questions on the advantages of the H.M.O.'s and how to join.

You Can Fight City Hall:

Have you ever been upset about a proposed law or wished that a special one could be passed? Perhaps you threw up your hands and groaned, "What's the use; you can't fight City Hall." But we can fight City Hall and now, more than ever before, it is important that older Americans unite so that we can protect those benefits which we have won and also so that new programs can be initiated to ensure a life of dignity for our older citizens. Remember: March 11, at 11:30 Eva Rachin from (M.A.O.A.) will let us know how to go about seeing that good legislation is passed or a bad proposal defeated. She will also discuss what is new in the area of elderly health care.

Keep Well Clinic:

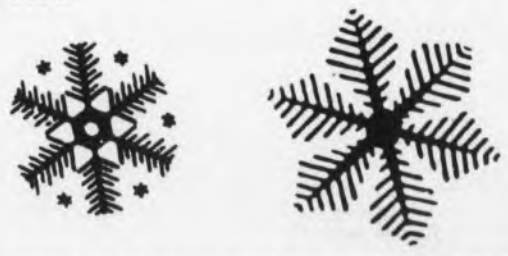
There will be a Keep-Well Clinic on the second Thursday of every month at the Senior Center from 11 a.m. to noon. Mary Ann Hansen, Board of Health Nurse will do the Blood Pressure Screening and answer any health related questions. For more information call Kathy at the Senior Center.

Wellness:

Ms. Kathleen Zagridny, Nutritionist from Quincy City Hospital, will be speaking on Wellness and good Health on March 18, at 11:30 a.m. at the First Parish House just before the Tuesday lunch. Please call early to make reservations: 383-1100 or 383-9112.

Donations Needed:

The Senior Center will be needing a few supplies— a small bookcase, a typing table, magazines, or books. If you have any such items which you can part with, please call Kathy at the Senior Center at 383-9112.



It's happening . . .

The cost for admission is $1.50 and children should be picked up at 2:30 p.m.

The Fields have performed on various T.V. shows including Rex Trailer, Sonja Hamlin, and Jabberwocky. The public is cordially invited.

KING RIDGE SKI TRIP

If you are interested in the February 20, ski trip to King Ridge during vacation week, call the Recreation office at 383-6791, immediately. The cost is $27 per person and open to youth 17 years of age and under.

Jordan, new play director

Julia W. Jordan is directing the Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production "The Hollow," by Agatha Christie, to be performed on the Cohasset Town Hall stage Friday, Feb. 28 and Saturday, March 1 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 2 at 2 p.m.

Jordan directed the Cohasset Dramatic Club's outstanding production, "A Christmas Carol."

She is also remembered for her performances "Strange Bedfellows," "Man for All Seasons," "The Mousetrap," "Mornings at Seven," among others.

Jordan studied at Stephens College, worked in summer stock around the country, and has had experience at Universal Studios-Warner Brothers, CA. While on the west coast, Julia led director's and playwright's workshops.

Jordan is at her best as director of Agatha Christie's mystery thriller, "The Hollow." She helps the cast build the suspense since the murderer's identity is carefully concealed throughout much of the "whodunit" production.

Enjoy the genius of playwright Agatha Christie and the talents of the cast with director Jordan in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter performance, "The Hollow."

Tickets for the Cohasset Town Hall play are $4, available at the door and in advance at Flemings in Cohasset Center. Seniors are invited to attend the March 2 matinee at no charge.

'Osgood Scoop' will roll off the press this week

It is intended as a gift to the parting graduates of the Osgood School. Parents and teachers have combined efforts and talents with the third graders for the past months.

Their toil will culminate with the first publication of a school newspaper. The "Osgood Scoop" will roll off the press this week.

According to one parent, Barbara Hislop, the idea formulated at the end of last year. Several mothers promoted the idea of a newspaper to include the writing efforts of the graduating students.

Tanna Kasperowicz, who has extensive knowledge in graphic design and layout, helped the parents throughout the project.

According to Hislop, she and Carol Bishop were room mothers last year. "We had so much fun with the students, and we were trying to think of a project that would involve the entire class in their last year at Osgood," she explained.

A newspaper, they decided, would incorporate the student's writing talents. It was also determined that each student would try to compose an investigative reporting piece.

Kasperowicz held workshops for the interested parents, where newspaper design and layout were discussed and reviewed. Page galleys and make-up design were borrowed from the sixth grade's newspaper, Hislop stated, since Kasperowicz had also extended her expertise to that project.

"It was then a matter of getting the kids involved," Bishop said, "and the teachers were instrumental in orchestrating that."

Mothers came into the classroom to review and help edit the writings alongside the students. Mothers quickly evolved into editing experts as they met more than four times with the reporter-students.

Bishop noted, "the children saw we were offering constructive criticism of their work, and they really responded to it. They saw how their stories grew with more work."

Kasperowicz's help was again offered as she typeset the children's work and began the physical layout of the paper.

The paper's masthead, graphics and headlines were left to the imagination of the students.

Two workshops in graphic design and the art of mastering perfect headlines were held afterschool for the students. "They worked in groups," Hislop explained. "They really got into working on attention-grabbing headlines."

Several students thought of names for the new publication, but since only one could be selected, Principal Jack Creamer picked one from a hat. The name of the 1986 Osgood newspaper will be "The Osgood Scoop."

The masthead, which is the paper's identification symbol at the top of the front page, was designed by student Jeremiah Stevenson.

Publication costs were reduced by a grant received by Kasperowicz from the Cohasset Arts Lottery, the parents explained.

Though adults assisted in the technical portion of the newspaper, several workshops for the students helped them learn the non-writing aspects of the newspaper business. "During the workshops, we also talked about the different sections of a newspaper," Hislop said. "The children learned there are several sections, such as the sports, restaurants and features about interesting people. And they decided to have all that in their paper."

Included in the Osgood Scoop will be interviews by students about their classmates, quick recipes, critiques of local restaurants, a swap column, and tales of true-life experiences.

Bishop explained, "they were not given a limit, but they all attempted to do a bit of investigative journalism. They learned that journalism is not dreaming and make believe. It is writing about fact. And that is a hard concept for children to grasp. It was difficult for them to write about something that had actually happened."

Every third grade student will have an article in the Osgood Scoop, which will only be published once this year. "It was a lot of work," the parents quickly added.

It's been a fun project, as students became excited about learning this new skill and it evolved into a completed project "They all feel good about themselves. Once they see the finished project, I think they'll be very proud of what they have accomplished," they noted.

"The bottom line," Bishop said, "is that the children have done what they set out to achieve. The parents are thrilled with this project, too."

The parents said a lot of the newspaper's success must be given to Kasperowicz and the amount of time she spent with the students and their parents.

In honor of the students and their families, a "publication" party was scheduled for this week at the school. With ice cream provided by Stop and Shop, the party will help students celebrate the completion of their long months of work.

Everyone in the school will receive a copy of the Scoop, and an additional copy will be available at the Paul Pratt Library.

Drama Club prepares for 'The Hollow,' Feb. 28

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter season production of Agatha Christie's "whodunit" "The Hollow" will be presented on the Cohasset Town Hall stage Friday, February 28, Saturday March 1 and Sunday, March 2.

Curtain times for the Friday and Saturday performances will be 8 p.m. and the Sunday show will be a 2 p.m. matinee.

Directing the production is Cohasset's Julia W. Jordan. Betty Miessner is the Producer, Sheldon Ripley is the Set Designer, and stage lighting will be designed by Clark Young.

Agatha Christie, popular author of numerous English "whodunit" novels, wrote "The Hollow" in 1946 and adapted it for stage presentation. In America the book was first known as "Murder After Hours".

"The Hollow" opened at London's Fortune Theater in June of 1951 where it ran for 360 performances. The play is a classic Agatha Christie, with the murderer's indentity carefully concealed thoughout much of the play.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "The Hollow" draws upon the presence of a talented cast of local community theater enthusiasts. Cohasset's Ginny Barcomb has been with the Dramatic Club for 20 years. Her first appearance at the Town Hall was in the play "Skin of Our Teeth", and she was seen recently in last fall's "Death of A Salesman".

Tickets for the Town Hall performances of "The Hollow" will be $4 each, available at the door at times of the performances and in advance at Fleming's, Cohasset Center.

Senior Citizens are invited to attend the Sunday, March 2 matinee at no charge. Plan to see the Dramatic Club's winter performance of this classic Christie "whodunit".

Children of alcoholics can be scarred for years

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Young children and teenagers of alcoholic parents are prone to feelings of guilt, depression, loss of self-esteem and even unwarranted anger, even years after they become adults and leave home or the parent stops drinking.

Only one in five children of alcoholics gets the counseling help he needs;the rest may struggle with feelings of self-doubt for the rest of their lives, according to a Pembroke Hospital substance-abuse specialist.

"It's a mistake to believe that, since kids are known for their resiliency, they will 'bounce back' after the parent becomes sober," said Ingrid Strand, LICSW. "That 'resiliency' frequently hides a lot of emotional damage."

Strand, a counselor with six years' experience, spoke about children of alcoholics in a workshop at Scituate Public Library last Wednesday which was attended by more than 30 residents.

It was the second in a series of three workshops sponsored by Scituate Health Services, Inc. Last month, Nathaniel Murray spoke about drug-abuse trends in the first workshop of the series.

Strand counsels the children of recovering alcoholics, frequently using art therapy to help younger children express their feelings. She demonstrated some of this art in a 15-minute slide show at the end of the two-hour workshop.

The need for children's services in this field is pervasive. Strand cited studies which show that, in any classroom of 25 to 30 children, four to six come from a family with a problem drinker. Only one of these children is getting proper counseling, she added.

"This occurs regardless of location - whether it's the inner city, the suburbs or rural areas," she said.

All children need two elements in their lives that are fundamental to healthy emotional development: a solid structure of discipline and a loving, encouraging household.

Without these, the resulting guilt and depression may drive these children to seek therapy or escape through chemical abuse as they become adults, Strand said.

"Denial of this disease affects even preschoolers," she said. "They have some idea why mom gets so angry when dad drinks out of that bottle."

Children need to know they're worthy of love no matter what they've done wrong, Strand said. But this element — and that of a stable environment —are missing in the homes of alcoholics, and kids tend to blame themselves for situations that aren't under their control.

The alcoholic may ignore the child, or may blame the child for something that wasn't his fault.

"I had one young boy whose father tripped and fell," Strand said. "When he came for counseling, he asked me how he could have tripped his father across the room," instead of rejecting the accusation as unjust or ridiculous.

Television also reinforces such guilt feelings, because kids see role models who seem to be able to handle any situation.

Children of alcoholics suffer loss of self-esteem in many ways: they become embarrassed because police are frequently called to their house; the alcoholic adult causes a scene at school or other public places; the alcoholic loses a job, causing loss of status for the family.

"Their identity is caught up in the status of their parents, and loss of that status causes the child to question his or her identity," Strand said. "All the other kids know about the parent, and kids tend to feel this reflects badly on them."

The child is then set up for a vicious cycle of guilt, feeling that he did something to cause the parent's drinking, she added.

The child begins to doubt his or her own feelings, instincts and even powers. These feelings cause perfectionism, isolation and anger resulting from depression that can plague that person well into adulthood.

As adults, "normal obstacles, new situations and risks bring up all the old feelings of inadequacy the child had," Strand said. "These people cannot handle violence and frequently isolate themselves due to a fear of intimacy."

Feelings of inadequacy feed on themselves when the person reaches for the impossible. The inevitable failure brings on more guilt.

Children of alcoholics are resentful of their circumstances, but frequently don't tell anyone about their feelings. Their temper goes out of control and they hurt others and get hurt back. This causes more hurt and guilt, she explained.

Another vicious cycle — loneliness — results from feelings of rejection. Isolation is the defense people use against rejection.

"These people give off a silent message to stay away, and others usually do," Strand said.

The objective of counseling is to replace these cycles with ones that build healthy emotions. Once the child's feelings are faced, once the child knows it'sallrightto feel hurt and resentful, feelings can be expressed in a controlled manner.

This cycle reinforces the child's sense of control over his or her life and builds self-importance and self-esteem.

"These kids need to know what the disease of alcoholism is about — blackouts, relapses and the rest — and that mom or dad won't fall apart if they express a little anger," she said.

Strand said referrals for help often come from teachers and other school personnel or from other clinics whose staffs lack the expertise needed to treat children.

It's a rewarding field because progress frequently occurs quickly, she said.

"All the child has to realize is that his parent's problem is simply not his fault."

Artist exhibit work at So. Shore Conservatory

The first exhibit for the new year in the staircase gallery at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham will be the work of Louise Swindells of Wollaston and Virginia Rose of Scituate. The watercolors of these well known South Shore artists will be shown from Jan. 17 to Feb. 28. The Gallery is located off 19 Fort Hill Street, and is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m.to 5 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. The Gallery is also open during scheduled concerts at the school. There is no admission charge.

Virginia Rose worked in the graphic arts field for many years and after retiring she began to paint and study seriously. She studied with Maryann Patrick and Virginia Avery at the South Shore Art Center and with Charles Mahoney, Mary Callahan and Miriam Roche at the Scituate Art Association.

In addition, there were numerous summer workshops with other well-known teachers.

Her watercolors include paintings of flowers and landscapes, and she is particularly fond of painting water and boats. Her work has appeared in shows in Hingham, Cohasset, Marshfield, Pem broke and Scituate. She is a member of the Scituate Arts Association Gallery.

Louise Swindells took art and design classes at the Newark School of Art and at Cornell University when she was there. A school teacher for many years, she later traveled throughout the country as an executive for Singer Sewing Machines.

Cohasset School news

CHS musicians

Congratulations to the following students who have been accepted to participate in this year's CHS Sr. High Southeastern Mass. School Bandmasters Assoc. Musical Festival. They auditioned with students from 25 South Shore communities. They are:

Chorus—Michelle Meagher, Celia Mullen, Melissa Nothnagle, Carine Montiaux, Amanda Sweeney, John Kornet and John Pereira.

Band—John Scott-oboe.

Olympic winners

February 5-7 eight special needs students from the Osgood and Deer Hill schools competed in the Winter Special Olympics at Eastover in Lenox. The seven boys and one girl from various area towns competed in a number of ice skating events.

In the 10-meter assisted glide, Joe Hegner from Hull won a gold medal. Peter Plante from Cohasset won a silver medal, and Paul Mullare from Hanover won a fourth place ribbon. In the 75-meter speed skate, Brooke Miele from Quincy won a bronze medal. In the 100-meter speed skate, Michael Goodhue from Norwell and Ryan Wiggs from Cohasset both won bronze medals. Matthew Grassey and Jay Nothnagle, both from Cohasset, won fourth place ribbons. In the 300-meter speed skate, Jay Nothnagle took a gold medal, Michael Goodhue won a silver medal, and Ryan Wiggs took a fourth place ribbon.

Our eight Special Olympians were accompanied to Eastover by Toni Jillson, classroom teacher, Rose Marie Mercurio, classroom aid, Chip Muncy a CHS student, and Maureen Mullare, parent of one of our Olympians.

The children have been training weekly since November, at the Cohasset Winter Gardens. Ice time and skate rentals were donated by the management of the Winter Gardens.

The Cohasset Special Olympics Team is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, the Cohasset Sports Boosters Club, and private donations. In the spring, the Cohasset team will compete in the track and field meet in Brockton, and the state Summer Games.

Congratulations to a job well done!

Helped wanted: involved parents

The PSO is seeking interested people to form a nominating committee to suggest possible executive board members for the PSO for 1986-87. The following positions will be available: president, vice president, corresponding secretary, recording secretary, treasurer, Osgood School representatives, Deer Hill School representatives, junior high school representatives, senior high school representatives, arts enrichment, fundraising, METCO host families, PSO activities, publicity, special needs and volunteers.

If you are interested in being on the PSO nominating committee, please call Nancy Sandell, 383-0486.

Guest artist at CHS

This week Tanna Kasperowicz was a guest artist for a graphic arts workshop after school Wednesday, Feb. 5 in the CHS art room.

She explained layout, paste-up and press-type lettering. These skills will be very helpful in setting up the literary and arts magazine. Many, many thanks!

Ski trip success

Sunday, Feb. 2, 42 CHS sophomores went on a ski trip to Mt. Sunapee, N.H. Parent chaperones were: Lucy and Tim Marsac and Laurie and Jim Hamilton.

Everyone had such a great time that another ski trip is being planned at Mt. Wachusett, March 8 for night skiing.

Standardized test results climb

By Edward Sheehan
Chairman Social Studies Department
Cohasset High School

The standardized test scores of Cohasset High School Chemistry students have increased greatly over the past five years. Where test scores in the Chemistry Achievement Tests at Cohasset had averaged in the low five hundreds (500) during the period 1980 - 1983, they have shot up to the low six hundreds (600) in the last three years. Students in the Honors courses take this test during their Sophomore year.

At the end of the 1984/85 school year, Chemistry teacher, Joseph E. Neundorf, gave the American Chemical Society National Test to his honor students in Chemistry. When the test results were received, eighty percent (80%) of the Chemistry Honor students who took the test scored in the top third of those who participated nationwide. This test had never before been administered to Cohasset High School students.

"We have strengthened the math requirements for all students taking Chemistry at Cohasset High School," Neundorf remarked when asked why there has been a dramatic rise in the Chemistry scores. He also added that "in late spring I conducted after-school sessions in Chemistry review."

Neundorf, who lives in Milton with his wife Margaret and two children, Christina, 2, and Matthew, 6, came to Cohasset High School in 1980.

Prior to that, he taught Chemistry at Hanover High School for four years. Before entering the teaching profession, he worked in industry; first as a Chemist and later as a Research Manager. He holds undergraduate and graduate degrees from Suffolk Universit y and has taken several graduate courses at Suffolk University and Boston State College.

A special request: Re: Buses

Please do not ask that your child take a different bus unless it is an extreme emergency. The current frequency of casual requests is overwhelming and the often resultant confusion, unhappiness, and tears are unfortunate. Also, the buses are often filled to capacity and the addition of unassigned riders creates unwieldy and hazardous conditions. Remember that the children are very young and dependent upon you and the school to provide the structure and routine that makes them comfortable and confident. As it stands, the teachers need to monitor these many requests with the greatest care and when there is a breakdown the result is a very distressed child. Please help us avoid this occasion by arranging for all after school activities after the children arrive home.

Please note—

All schools close for February vacation Friday, February 14 and classes resume on Monday, February 24.

Host-A-Student

Deafness awareness program

Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 12 and 13, the first part of a deafness awareness program will be presented to Osgood School third graders by Taffy Nothnagle and Diane Santini.

Points of discussion will be: the difference between langauge and speech, the varying degrees of hearing impairment, the ways deaf people communicate, the biology of the ear and use of a hearing aid.

The third graders will be taught finger speaking and some simple signs.

Lenten preaching series - Esther Sanger, executive director of the Quincy Crisis Center which feeds the hungry and shelters the homeless, will be with us to preach on Sunday, March 2.

The preaching series during Lent will include the following:

1st Sunday in Lent (Feb. 16): "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy Name."

2nd Sunday in Lent (Feb. 23): "They Kingdom come, they will be done, on earth as it is in heaven."

3rd Sunday in Lent (March 2): "Give us this day our daily bread."

4th Sunday in LKent (March 9): "And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive us who trespass against us."

5th Sunday in Lent (March 16): "And lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil."

Lenten class Wednesday evenings - Beginning Wed., Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. and continuing for five consecutive Wednesdays through March 19, a special Lenten adult class will examine Paul's letter to the Romans with an eye to understanding and identifying our own Christian story. The first half of the class will be devoted to the Bible study, the second half to our personal Christian story. The sessions will proceed as follows:

Wed., Feb. 19 - Introduction, God's love and its implications, Chapters 1 and 15 plus a film

Wed., Feb. 26 - Choose between serving God or "other masters". Admit that our lives when given over to these "others" become unmanageable. Chapters 1 and 2.

Wed., March 5 - Turn to God in an ongoing Baptismal relationship. Charpters 3 to 6.

Wed., March 12 - Rediscover God's love. Chapters 5 and 8.

Wed., March 19 - Serve the God who first loved us. Chapters 10 and 12.

Swans are beautiful if left to themselves

Mother and her offspring during their winter visit to Cohasset Harbor.

There are two majestic swans in the harbor which have captured the attention of Cohasset residents and visitors throughout the winter.

Although pleasant to admire, the swans are defiant creatures, and people are warned to leave them alone.

According to information provided by the Marshfield Audubon Society, the two swans in Cohasset Harbor are mute swans. They are vegetarians, and thus it is important that they not be fed by admiring bystanders. The swans may become dependent upon people feeding them, which will then disrupt their natural migration.

The two swans seen in the harbor throughout this winter are most likely an adult mother and her juvenile. Since swans mate for life, it is assumed the adult male has died.

The mute swan is a wild bird and is protective of its young.

People, especially children, should be cautious with these animals. The swan is very strong and can be dangerous if it senses danger or is threatened. According to the Audubon Society, if a swan is provoked to eat food from a person's hand, they will bite. The adult will vigorously defend its nest and young from intruders. They may attack dogs and even people. The swan is especially dangerous to children if provoked.

The swans in Cohasset Harbor have been friendly, but the Audubon Society stressed that these swans are wild and deserve respect. Observing them from a distance is the wisest course of action. The birds need to live in their natural habitat without the interest and interference of people.

The male and female adult swans are almost identical. The adult male is only four to five pounds heavier than a female.

The mute swan is a wild bird and it is unwise to allow them to become dependent on food from humans. While visiting Cohasset Harbor and neighboring ponds, the swans should be allowed to go about without assistance from interested observers.

According to the Audubon Society, the mute swan pair usually maintain a large territory in an entire small lake or pond. The nest is comprised of aquatic plants, sticks, reeds, and roots gathered on the banks of the inlet.

Mute swans have been known to live for more than 15 years in their natural environment.

Selectmen deny land bank proposal

A warrant article calling for the creation of a land bank for the aquisition of watershed land and open space, has been knocked out of the warrant for the April 5 town meeting.

Selectmen voted 4-0 Monday night to exclude the article from the warrant. The article had been proposed by the water commission in an attempt to take by eminent domain the watershed property surrounding Lily Pond.

"If we were first appraised that they would be reviewing our proposal, the water commission would have had representation there," Commission Chairman Peter Pratt said Tuesday. The commission chairman said a full draft article had not been written because of the technical nature of the proposal.

"We were trying to be prudent and reasonable about this proposal," he said, noting that Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Sen. William Golden have been helpful in providing assistance to the commission in their efforts to establish a municipal land bank project.

With the delay, Pratt said the proposal would now be formulated as a coalition effort between several town boards. He admitted it would take a lot of effort "and digging" to make the proposal passable. A more unified, consolidated proposal can now be developed for presentation to a special town meeting, Pratt added.

The land bank process would fund land aquisitions deemed necessary by the town for open space preservation or water supply protection. An assessment of all real estate transactions completed throughout the year would be added to this land bank in which the town's aquisitions would be funded.

Pratt noted that the assessment amount of the real estate transactions has not been determined, although Sen. Golden had recommended a minimum percentage for Cohasset's needs.

At their meeting Monday night, selectmen wondered why the water commission was proposing the land bank concept rather than the conservation commission.

"No other town board has attempted to do this," Pratt explained, adding, "We have never convened an across-the-board meeting with the planning and zoning boards and the conservation commission. We have been trying to come up with some draft language.

"Right now," he stated, "we are the only town board attempting to take land by eminent domain because of the pressures to Lily Pond. This is a drop-dead issue, although we have to be fair to the taxpayers and their money. Either we fund this through the water rates or the tax rate or through an alternative such as the land bank."

An additional water department article was accepted by selectmen for inclusion into the April 5 town meeting warrant. That article will request $15,000 to purchase additional computer equipment for the water department.

At a meeting last week between the water commission and representatives of Data National, the firm supplying the town's central computer system, the additional equipment needs were outlined.

The water department has been disastisfied with the range of services provided by Data National and the town's computer system. With additional software programs and computer hardware, the department will be able to operate their billing and mailing system more efficiently, they determined.

The department would like to immediately identify those residents who traditionally do not pay their water bills. An aging selection process within the computer would mark those "deadbeat" residents and mail payment notification to the tardy customers.

The water commission estimated that $15,000 would be necessary to purchase the additional terminal and software programs that would be linked into the Data National system.

The commission noted in its discussion last week with Data National that if collections of back water payments were completed, the department would evolve into a profit-making business.

During the discussions with Data National representatives, the commission inquired whether the company provided such a program. The Hingham-based firm replied negatively.

The commission estimated that an additional terminal for the department will cost about $11,000 plus $4,000 for the "deadbeat" computer program.

In the meantime, the department will hire a computer consultant from its engineering budget to analyze the computer system and the department's needs. The consultant may be available to develop a proposal for the department's computer service needs.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

To belt or not to belt, a difficult question

Flora and Fauna glared at each other across tall glasses of Tab.

"You're the red hot flaming liberal," Flora hissed. "You marched for everything from voter registration to 'Save the Gypsy Moth!' So how come you don't recognize my right to decide for myself whether or not I want to wear a seat belt?"

Fauna narrowed her eyes and hissed back at her. "You're being puerile. Can you seriously expect me to defend your right to splatter yourself all over a public highway? Any anyway, you always wear your seat belt."

"That's not the point," Flora shouted. " I know the statistics. I know seat belts work.I just don't like to be told I have to wear them."

Fauna'a voice rose several octaves, dangerously close to a register where only dogs would be able to hear her.

"Statistics also indicate that wearing a seat belt tends to keep you in control of your vehicle during an accident, so you're less likely to drive into another car or a bunch of kids waiting for a school bus. Do you like to be told you can't drive into other people?"

"May I say something?" I asked mildly.

"No you can't," Flora retorted. "Your daughter Eileen is alive because she was wearing a seat belt when she had her accident. You can't possibly be objective. You'd probably get all emotional instead of engaging in a reasoned, rational discussion like Fauna and me."

"I sniffed. "I was just going to say that my Dragon has trouble fastening his belt."

Fauna took a deep breath. "Of course he does," she told me.

"Anyone would have trouble fastening his belt if he forgot to do it in the driveway and tried to do it while he was driving down the street at 40 miles an hour. Which I have seen your Dragon do."

She turned back to Flora."And I thought you were the hidebound conservative. What's wrong with conserving life? And anyway, your idol in the White House thinks mandatory seat belts should be the law. It will be a federal requirement pretty soon anyway. And maybe air bags, too."

Flora clenched her jaw.

"Not," she muttered through clenched teeth, "if Jerry Williams has anything to say about it."

Then she smiled. "But it's all so silly. I don't know why we're even discussing it. We're all good drivers. None of us are going to get.in an accident anyway. What do we need seat belts for?"

Fauna smiled back. "Even good drivers can't always control road conditions. Or what the other driver does. M.A.D.D. calls seat belts 'your best defense against the drunk driver.' "

Flora's smile grew strained. "I still should be able to decide for myself if I want to be protected."

"Someone," Fauna pointed out, "pays for your freedom of choice if you have an accident on a public road. Maybe I'm just too cynical for words, but I have a sneaking suspicion it'll be the public."

"Maybe I'd rather have public money spent on better transportation, or health care, or education."

"Well," Flora insisted, "I don't think anyone in my family is going to have an accident. But I don't have time to discuss this any longer. I want to buy my Megabucks ticket before the line gets too long."

Fauna looked startled. "Do you know what the odds against winning Megabucks are? As opposed to the odds against being in an accident ?"

Flora shurgged. "I'm not sure. But someone's going to be lucky."

College & hospital form new nursing program

Wayne M.Henry, President of Brockton Hospital and Reverend Bartley MacPhaidin, C.S.C., President of Stonehill College are joining forces to create a joint nursing program to begin in September.

"This program will combine the resourses of two outstanding institutions, and assures that nursing students will have the benefits of an extensive clinical experience at Brockton Hospital, while simultaneously obtaining a college education at Stonehill College," explained Joan Baum, Director of Admissions at the Brockton Hospital School of Nursing.

"During the first two years, students will take all of their nursing science courses and clinicals at Brockton Hospital and its School of Nursing. Concurrently, students will be taking liberal arts and science courses at Stonehill.

At the successful completion of this program, graduates are eligible to take the qualifying Examination for Licensure as Registered Nurses," said Carol Bortman, Director of the School of Nursing.

"They will have another exciting option," said Leo O'Hara, Ph.D., Dean of Continuing Education at Stonehill. "Graduates are also eligible for formal admission into the continuing education division of Stonehill College to pursue their baccalaureate degree in nursing," he concluded.

According to Baum, enrollment in this program will be limited, and all potential students are encouraged to apply immediately for admission into the September, 1986 class. For more information on the Brockton Hospital School of Nursing program, call 586-2600,x. 2044.

Planners approve Ocean Meadows restrictions

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

The Ocean Meadow's subdivision was approved, 3-2, by the planning board last Wednesday night, with a list of conditions prepared by member Dan Cotton.

After months of deliberation, testimonies, letters and testings, Chairman Christine Bassett limited comments and discussions and insisted on a vote.

"I will not go through what we did last time," Miss Bassett insisted. "We will vote yea or nay."

Concerns about the geohydrological studies and pre-blasting plans have been major factors in keeping the board from making a decision.

After ending the last meeting in a stalemate, Cotton put together a restrictive covenant and a list of conditions taken from the letters of the attorneys representing both sides.

The conditions include a 30-year restriction on building a dwelling on lots one and two in front of the main house. Thirty years is the legal limit for this type of covenant.

The applicant is also required to meet the standards for septic systems at the date of application for each system.

A geohydrological study is required to test the ability of the soil to accept effluents before and after the installation of a septic system.

A pre-blasting plan must be completed before any blasting. All abutters within 500 feet must be notified at least 10 days before the blasting.

Town Engineer Modzelewski requested the 10 days so that, "People have 10 days to take pictures of their vases and foundations," he said.

Other conditions include: a drainage easement into the Atlantic Ocean, seepage collars, drainage into the subdivision drainage system.

Before the vote, resident Richard Walsh addressed the board.

"I believe there has been no public hearing, as required by statute," he told Chairman Bassett.

Bassett responded that the public hearing was an extension from the first one.

The board approved the application, 3-2, with Bob Sturdy and John O'Toole voting against it.

Deer Hill students solve some of the descriptive capers

The recipe caper

One evening at the Crocker Estate in Bakerstown, Maryland, Betty held a class reunion. She invited her whole graduating class. The class of 1952. Only four classmates attended. They were Henrietta Heindrick, Lucy Laylor, Albert Endicott V, and Bernie "The Brain" Bunston.

Everyone was gathered on the lawn for cocktails and dinner. The band was playing all their old high school favorites. Everyone was ready to sit down for dinner, but no one knew where Betty Crocker was. Suddenly trumpets were heard, large French doors opened on the mansion and out came Betty. They were all secretly envious and jealous of her for her wealth, success and beauty.

Following the dinner festivities all were tired, so they followed Betty into the mansion where they were to spend the night. She assigned them all separate rooms. Betty went to her room to get ready for bed.

As the last light in the house was turned off, all settled down to sleep. Around midnight terror struck the mansion. There was a scream followed by silence. Everyone awoke to see what was the matter and rushed out into the hallway. They all went to Betty's room and switched on the lights. There Betty was laying in spattered blood. She was dead, but who killed her and why?

The next morning everyone gathered in the main hall with the police. Betty's recipes were no longer in the safe in the library. But who could have done this awful deed, they were all asleep.

Clue number one, the murder weapon was an ax. Clue number two, the motive possibly was revenge. Clue number three, all the guests were asleep when this happened. Clue number four, whoever did it is still on the estate. Clue number five, the person who did it had to have had access to the safe and combination. Clue number six, whoever did it knew how to bypass all the security systems.

Everyone agreed to a lie detector test. The test proved that none of them could have done this to Betty. The case was baffling. They must find out who did it before the killer strikes again and before the recipes are copied by another company.

It was getting late so everyone went to bed. A guard was posted at the door of each room. The next morning Henrietta was found hanging above her dresser, The note attched to the bed said, "IF YOU DO NOT ALL LEAVE THIS MANSION YOU WILL DIE ONE BY ONE." Signed EVO!

No one could think of anyone named EVO. But, then suddenly it struck Lucy. She knew who it was.

Before the words were out of her mouth an arrow came hurling through the air and hit her in the back. She was dead.

They saw a figure on the first floor in the shadows. Running they all chased the figure into the basement. The lights were not working. Grabbing a flashlight they all split up and searched the basement. Bernie was knocked out with a hard blow to the back of his head. Then suddenly there was a big spark of light from the fuse box, and a few little noises before the lights turned on. And there standing over Bernie was Lisa.

She was the girl who Betty had beaten in the high school bake off contest many years before. They handcuffed her and took her upstairs. The detective filled Bernie and Albert in on what was happening because he had figured it out in the basement. Suddenly it all made sense to the classmates.

Lisa killed Betty for revenge. Bernie and Albert looked at each other in amazement, both remembering that in high school Lisa was knicknamed EVO! When all this was done Lisa was sent to an institution. And the recipes were all recovered. Betty Crocker will go on forever through her baked goodies.

The Great Computer Robbery

It was a dark, gloomy night in the town of Hawkins. The town was silent. Everyone was in deep slumber. Then suddenly an alarm rang out. The sound was coming from the bank.

The next day police cars were gathered around the bank. The inspectors were boggled. No one understood how someone could get into a high security system like the bank. The police could not find any finger prints.

In the next two days police had a search party for the stolen money. After weeks of searching and gathering evidence, the chief inspector Joe Smith found a clue. It was a computer chip. So whoever broke into the vault had to be a thief.

The next day the chief checked a list of employees. One of the employees was missing and sure enough he was from the computer department. That day the inspector assembled a search that would follow Frank Jones' trial, the missing employee. People started asking questions and wanted answers fast. Soon the police had all the evidence they needed.

On Feb. 15, 1986 Frank Jones was taken to court and pleaded guilty. His penalty was twenty years in prison. But even though Frank Jones was in the slammer the police did not know how he broke in. Computer experts started scanning the vault's computer.

That night they broke into the computer. They found that he used to get the computer to open the vault. Then he used a robot to get the money. So the case was closed.

The Case of the Kidnapping Crusade

One day, as I was sitting at my cluttered desk in a dark and dismal room at 29 Main Street reading my paper, I saw a lady in her thirties was kidnapped and being held for ransom; her name was Ms. Pinter. Ms. Pinter had been missing for more than twenty-four hours, so I, Detective Jones, gathered my men and went on a search for Ms. Pinter.

The first clue we found was a note saying she was released and not to worry. The second was found in the bowling ball section of a department store; it was her engagement ring. So far we knew she was all right; we also knew she was going to get married, and it had something to do with bowling balls. For the next two months we had secret spy agents in the town and neighboring town department stores watching the bowling ball sections to see if Ms. Pinter would return. But over those two months, she did not return.

The third clue was a mysterious telegram delivered to Ms. Pinter's future husband's home. It said something like this:

David,

If you ever want to see Nancy again, meet me at the bowling alley next to Star Market and across from Carpet Land.

Guess Who?

Transportation, 1986, IV What we need to do

Continuing our transportation masterplan.

COMMUTATION

Next in importance to the transportation projects that will assure jobs for our children are those that will relieve the burden of daily commutation for our children's parents. For, it is the daily commute to work that annoys us the most, ties up our roads, and pollutes the air.

In 1970, Gov. Francis Sargent made a profound decision affecting commutation. Under pressure from his then gubernatorial opponent Mayor Kevin White of Boston, who objected to highways proposed to be built in Boston for the convenience of suburbia, Sargent ordered a temporary halt to all highway building within Rte. 128.

After demolishing White at the polls, he made the halt permanent, and in so doing steered the Commonwealth toward a policy of using public transportation to attempt to reduce the commuter away from his automobile. It is a policy Gov. Dukakis agrees with, and one that Gov. King, who didn't, didn't have time to do anything about.

In my view, the simple territorial greediness of the automobile makes the policy a sound one. A car requires space on the road, and a car requires a parking space while it sits in regal inefficiency all day long. The closer to the "Hub" one gets, the more cars there are and the less space there is to accommodate them. Therefore, before we build or expand highways within Rte. 128, we ought to fully develop the alternative. Only if the alternative fails to remedy the problem ought we to consider the highly expensive and environmentally destructive option of building huge new highways through our inner suburbs.

THE ALTERNATIVE TO THE AUTOMOBILE

There are approximately ten present or former rail corridors radiating from Boston to Rte. 128 and beyond. Of those only two, the former Highland Branch which hosts the Riverside Line, and the former Old Colony which hosts our own Red Line to Braintree, are used for rapid transit as far as Rte. 128. Our goal should be to put most of the rest of those lines to work with state-of-the-art rapid transit.

The Red Line extensions to Alewife and Braintree and the Orange Line relocation were the first fruits of Francis Sargent's epochal transportation decision. But of those projects, only the Braintree extension reaches 128. Both other projects were turned into massive local boondoggles rather than mere transportation improvements, and we ended up frittering away transportation dollars while leaving the terminals (Forest Hills and Alewife) in poor locations well shy of Rte. 128.

Our rapid transit of the future should be "state-of-the-art" but it needn't be a work of art. We are talking about getting people to work, not granting them a taxpayer-financed introduction to nirvana. On the other hand, fares need to be high enough to purchase reliable service. The problem with low fares cum abominable service (as now generally obtained on the M.B.T.A.)is that the only ones who use the service are those who have no choice.

COMMUTER RAIL

The shortcoming of the Braintree extension is that except for two big, ugly parking garages it makes no provision for commuters from the growing communities to the south. The break in transportation (i.e. having to park and transfer) keeps busy people in their cars despite the rigors of Rte. 3.

What is needed here, as well as in the other rail corridors between Rtes. 128 and 495, is commuter rail. By far the best solution, I believe, to the South Shore's transportation conundrum is a commuter rail network that picks folks up in the downtowns of their local communities, offers them the chance of walking across a platform and switching to the Red Line in Braintree, then (if they do not transfer) expresses them the nine miles to Boston . . . in nine minutes or less!

Commuter rail service should be extended down the South Shore just as far as possible. For example, terminating future commuter rail service in downtown Hingham would only make that lovely town the dumping ground for cars from other lovely towns to the south. The service on that line ought to run through Cohasset to Greenbush in Scituate. Then perhaps, in our children's time it can be extended through Marshfield, Duxbury, and Kingston to Plymouth, thus at last matching the service that existed in 1938!

ROAD PROJECTS

If we show restraint in building new highways and use our major transportation moneys on the expensive, but relatively more modest search for the rail alternative, we should have some money left over to help make our present roads work better than they do.

In Plymouth County east-west roads and Rte. 3 interchanges are a prime concern. Rte. 44 needs to be upgraded in a major way, and some effort needs to be made to figure out what to do about Rtes. 14, 139, 53, 18, 228 and others. The Hanover interchange needs to be redesigned to allow direct access to Hanover Mall from Rte. 3 so that traffic on Rte. 53 is not constantly tied up with Mall traffic. Marshfield needs a second access to Rte. 3 that bypasses tie-ups on Rte. 139 in Pembroke. Our crying need for the implementation of such projects is why we should be apoplectic when we read that the state wants to spend $175 million on a single interchange in Charlestown. We may be assured that with the final approval of that project, there will go the dollars to finance most of our region's highway projects in our time.

IN THE INTERIM

Between Gov. Dukakis, who wants to spend billions on two-odd miles of roadwork in Boston, and President Reagan, who wants to terminate federal funding of urban mass transportation construction, we will probably have to wait a while for the transportation projects we need and deserve.

A people who waited three hundred years to dig the Cape Cod Canal ought not to lose sight of their ultimate transportation goals. But in the interim there are some steps we can take, and the most important of these is better bus service. As former State Rep. Andrew Card has suggested, if commuter rail cannot be financed in this decade, abandoned rail rights of way can be acquired, paved, and used as exclusive bus lanes.

This is precisely what Pittsburgh did at relatively little cost beginning about a decade ago. In Pittsburgh rail and bus frequently share a transportation corridor, separated by a chain link fence—where a formerly multiple rail network had been narrowed, thus leaving a cinder-filled but eminently usable bus right-of-way.

What Pittsburgh's ingenious implementation of Card's idea does is to make bus service greatly superior to what it would be on crowded highways. As I have said elsewhere in this series, central to the problem our planners have is that they talk about giving us transportation that is "second to none," but they have little idea of what is going on in cities all around North America. In point of fact, Logan Airport and Amtrak service aside, Greater Boston has one of the worst transportation networks among major North American cities.

THOSE PRECIOUS CORRIDORS

If I had the influence to exhort the Salvucci flock to do one thing and nothing else during their transportation watch, it would be thus: Go and fetch the 1923 rail map of New England. See where abandoned rail corridors wander over Massachusetts like so many glacial eskers. Then take legal action to keep those corridors, even those that have been sold off, from being further developed.

The point is that these corridors are the priceless bequest of the hard labor of our ancestors, and they are turning into houselots as I write. If preserved by statute, many of them would never be redeveloped for transportation in its usual sense. But such corridors have a wonderful potential as trails or bike paths. Other corridors such as the Greenbush Line (which is already legally protected) have the potential of restoring sanity to transportation. But in letting these rights-of-way continue to dissolve into suburbia, our leaders are committing an historic oversight.

LEADERSHIP

What we really need is a transportation Winston Churchill — a fierce, dedicated, brilliant public sector entrepreneur with the vision and determination to start knocking down some of these problems. Gov. Dukakis is a brilliant generalist, but he doesn't truly understand transportation. Secretary Salvucci is brilliant as well, but as I have argued in this series, he is biased by a Boston-centered prior agenda.

What we need is a person who will be what Robert Moses was to the St. Lawrence Seaway or what Ed King was to Logan Airport. The ten towns where this column runs are not only ten of the best towns in America, they contain some of the finest talent in America.

Perhaps one of you will step forward.

(End of series)

Six area residents named top communicators

The First Annual "Communicator of the Year" awards were recently presented by John R. Graham, Inc., the Quincy based public relations and advertising firm, in honor of its tenth anniversary.

Six persons who exemplify the highest standards of communication on the South Shore received this special recognition.

Jack Conway of Cohasset was one of the recipients of the award. He has built a business with over $300,000 in sales by literally naming the entire South Shore "Conway Country." What he has accomplished with this concept extends far beyond the building of his own business.

He has made an indelible contribution to the identity of the South Shore as a great place to live and work by giving this entire region an upbeat image.

Other recipients included: Nat Shulman of Best Chevrolet for his leadership in gaining passage of the Massachusetts seat belt law; John Spence, President of the Rockland Trust Company, for dealing honestly and forthrightly with the media and the public when his bank was faced with a crisis; State Sen. Wiliam Golden of Weymouth for accessing the community to key public issues; Judge Albert Kramer of the Quincy District Court for his outstanding contributions in calling public attention to the problem of drunk driving and Esther Sanger for making people aware of the plight of the hungry and homeless.

WBZ-TV 4's news anchorman, Jack Williams was the guest speaker. He was honored on behalf of his efforts to find permanent families for older and special needs children. Williams was presented an award for hosting and producing the "Wednesday's Child" series.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

Our most dangerous national addiction

Many states, including Massachusetts, have enacted tougher drunk driving laws. Melvin Belli and a horde of lawyers have gone after the tobacco industry. Almost everybody is aware of problems with drugs. But few realize our most dangerous national addiction, and how it contributes to all of the above.

Our most dangerous addiction is debt, and it is dangerous not merely for what it does to us economically, but for what it does to us psychologically and ethically.

My parents were childern of the Depression,and avoided debt as though it were a social disease. They never bought on credit, except for their house. I have carried on their values in many areas, but, like most of us today, I find it impossible to live without going into debt, often by spending money on luxury items.

Remember "luxury items?" Those were things you could do with out, either because of their limited use or their high price. Now it seems there's no such thing as a luxury item. Everybodyhas tohaveeverything, and they have to have it now.

Take video cassette recorders. Hardly anybody I knew had one even three years ago. Then cable television came to the South Shore. Somehow most of us found the extra seven to $48 a month to get hooked up.

Get hooked is right. After a year or so of endless variety we realized how deprived we had been in the old days of over-the-air television.

But this soon paled when we saw that the various movie channels didn't completely cater to our taste. By now video cassette rental stores had moved into the neighborhood. So we bought a VCR.

How many took the time to save and pay cash for it? Didn't most of us charge it, even though we had already accumulated more consumer debt than we could handle?

And in doing so, did anyone consider they were doing anything imprudent, let alone immoral? No.

Yet at the same time, this attitude, taken to a national level has made us the greatest debtor nation in the history of the world. The stock market, like our suburban lifestyles, is built on an addiction to debt.

By the way, 24 million VCR's were sold in the United States in 1984. Every single one of them was made in Japan.

Radio talk-show host Jerry Williams often states that the average American household would be in chaos if two paychecks were missed. Since 40 percent of Americans save nothing, he may be correct. Canadian and German families save more than twice as much as Americans. Japanese and Italians save more than three times.

It's not that other nations have people genetically or culturally more frugal. They have national policies encouraging saving.

In Canada mortgage interest is not deductible. In Germany, consumer interest is not. In Austria there is a 30 percent value-added tax on luxuries and 15 percent on necessities and cars are considered luxuries.

Japan requires a 40 percent cash down payment to buy a house. Norway requires 80 percent cash down to buy a car and the balance must be paid in a year.

Japan also holds back a third of everybody's salary for six months, then returns it in a lump sum. People are therefore forced to save for six months, and are also likey to save more from a lump sum than from a weeky pay-check.

These figures come from an address given by MIT economist Lester Thurow last year. Why is it important to save more and consume less? He says, "If we can't save more we can't be competitive in the world economy."

In other words, if we can't keep from buying all the stuff we want when we want it, and going further into debt to do it, then our national future is hardly rosy. Yet the President's new budget has a $144 billion dollar deficit.

From 1914 to 1982 our economy accumulated net assets internationally of $152 billion. We have spent all of those assets in the last three years and are now a debtor nation. No wonder the suburbs feel comfortable now. We just spent the accumulated efforts of our fathers and grandfathers to get that way.

How can we expect our children to turn down the momentary thrill, or to plan for a healthy future, when their parents are so obviously incapable of doing so?

The early stage of addiction is denial. The next stage is anger, as the addict and especially the addict's family begins to realize the cost of addiction.

Then comes facing reality. We may almost be ready for this stage. Whether we'll be able to survive the withdrawal is anybody's guess.

Flowers & tasty treats are the fare for Valentine's Day

Time was when Valentine's Day meant little red cinnamon candies, slightly larger heart-shaped wafers with cute sayings,or perhaps a hollow chocolate heart or a box of chocolates for Mom. Today's ads suggest, "Prove your love with natural ranch mink," or a red ruby, selling for up to $5,000 a carat. You don't have to get a dozen red roses (at $50 or $60 a dozen) to express your sentiments.

Connie Coutts of Kennedy's Gardens, ever helpful, suggests less expensive offerings, such as sending a single long-stemmed rose. Anything that's red will do the trick: carnations, a pot of tulips, a primrose plant in a little basket decked out with a ribbon, dried or slik flowers. Forget red anemones, for a single blossom is more than $2.

Connie advises against the sentimental nosegay of violets, for she has found violets wilt so quickly they aren't worth bringing back from Boston's Flower Market. We all know the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, so why not try that approach with Sue Castellano's

CREME-FILLED CUPCAKES

1 box Devil's Food Cake Mix
Creme Filling: 1 C. milk
1/4 C. flour
1/2 C. each margarine, shortening
1 C. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
Mix cake according to pkg. directions. Bake in paper-lined cupcake pans. Cool before filling with:

Combine milk with flour, cook until thick, stirring constantly. Cool. Have margarine and shortening at room temperature and add, together with sugar and vanilla to cooled milk-flour mixture. Beat until light and fluffy.

With paring or grapefruit sectioning knife, cut a cone-shaped wedge from each cupcake. Put a generous spoonful of filling into each cupcake. Replace top. Sprinkle with confectionary sugar. Makes 30 cupcakes.

Would you believe the first person you encounter when you go out on St. Valentine's Day is to become your valentine? Back in the 17th century in England they did. In France, the first young man to be seen by a girl on Feb. 14 became her beau for the year, but only with the full consent of the parents of both families. Once you had him hooked, you could settle down and bake these muffins, a recipe Judy Conway's family enjoys:

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

1/2 C. butter or margarine
2 C. flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 1/4 C. sugar
2 1/2 C. blueberries (frozen)
2 eggs
1/2 C. milk
1/2 tsp. salt

At low speed, cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add eggs one at a time and mix. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with milk. Mash 1/2 C. blueberries and stir in by hand. Add remainder of the whole berries and stir by hand. Grease muffin tins well. Pile mix high in cups and bake 25 to 35 min. at 375 degrees. When nearly done, sprinkle sugar over tops.

HAPPY VALENTINE!

The best valentine you could send me would be your family's favorite recipe, or if you are cruising or flying to get away from this cold winter scene, we'd love to hear of how you liked the native food. Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051.

Nickerson Theater's 'So Long on Lonely Street' opens

Norwell's Nickerson Theatre will present the pre-New York production of a new play, "So Long On Lonely Street," by Sandra Deer, opening Friday, Feb. 14, for five weeks, through March 22, replacing the originally scheduled production of Bernard Slade's "Tribute."

The first full-length work by the Southern playwright is being presented at the Nickerson Theatre by special arrangement with noted Broadway producer Cheryl Crawford, Paul Berkowsky, Robert Franz and the Alliance Theatre of Atlanta, where it was first produced.

Director Kent Stephens is the Associate Director of the Alliance Theatre, where he directed the original production of the new play. Sandra Deer is in her third season as literary manager of the Alliance Theatre and is a member of that theatre's Playwright's Project. This spring they will present Sandra Deer's adaptation of "Great Expectations."

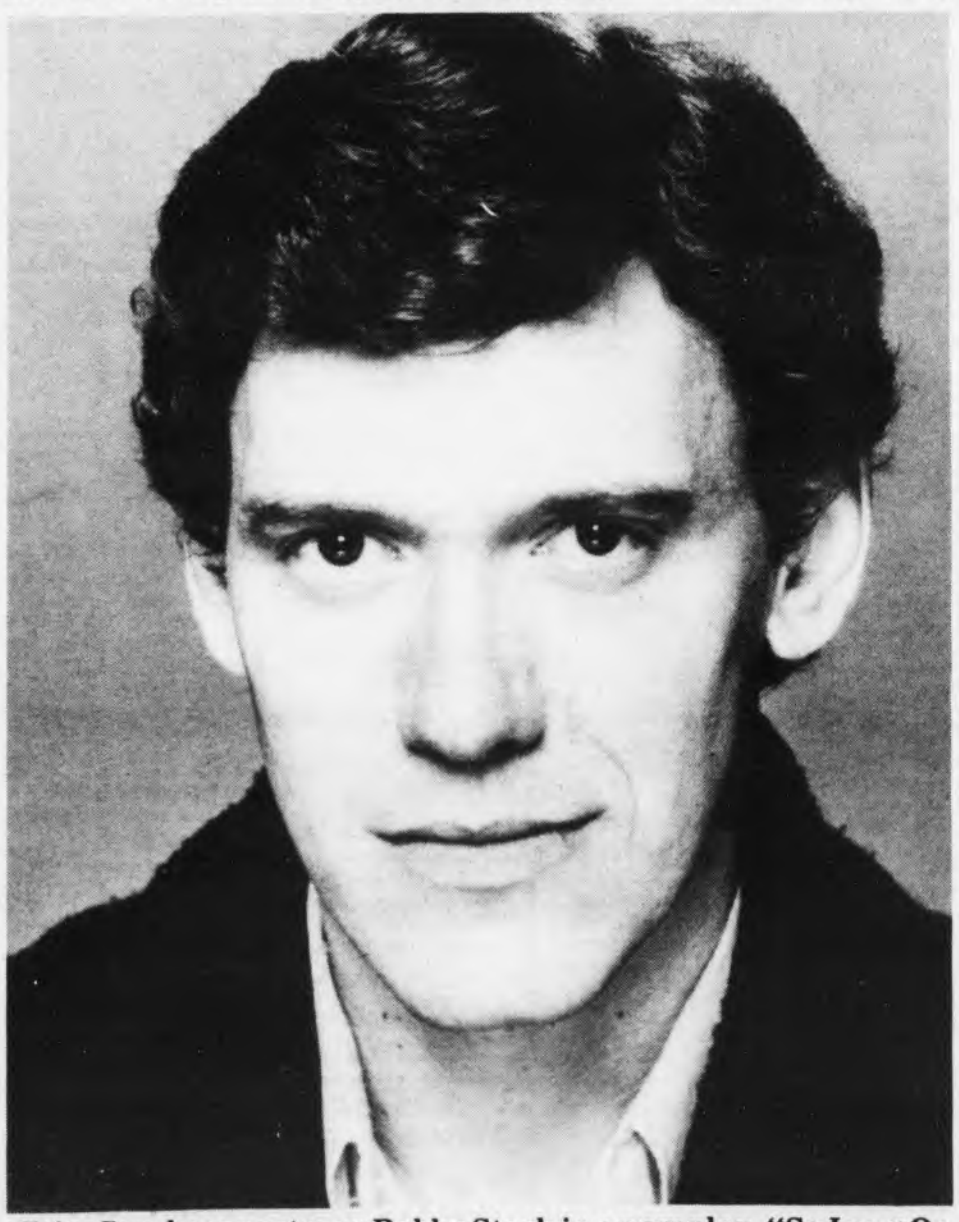
Set in a small southern town, the new play concerns a family's gathering and struggle for their share of an inheritance left by an unloved woman.

The cast of six includes three members of the original production: Pat Nesbit as Ruth Brown, Stephen Root as King Vaghnum III and Lizan Mitchell as Annabel Lee. Others in the cast are: Ray Dooley as Raymond Brown, Jane Murray as Clarice Vaughnum and Fritz Sperberg as Bobby Stack.

Scenery for "So Long On Lonely Street" designed by Mark Morton, with costumes designed by Jane Greenwood and lighting designed by Allen Hughes. The original music is by Hal Lanier.

The cast brings with them diverse experience from the New York stage as well as leading regional theaters in the country. Ray Dooley (Raymond Brown) has performed in resident productions from St. Louis to Edmonton, Alberta. In New York he was Malcolm in Nicol Williamson's "Macbeth"; Alcest in "The Misanthrope" for the Production Company and performed for three seasons with the CSC Repertory, where he won a 1982 Obie award for distinguished peformance in "Peer Gynt."

Performance times: Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday at 8:30 p.m.; Saturday at 4 and 8:30 p.m.; Sunday at 2 and 7:30 p.m



Fritz Sperberg portrays Bobby Stack in a new play, "So Long On Lonely Street" by Atlanta playwright Sandra Deer opening Friday, Feb. 14 and continuing through Saturday, March 22.

Post offices closed on federal holiday

Area residents are reminded all post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery on Monday, Feb. 17 in observance of Washington's Brithday.

In keeping with postal policy, Express Mail and Special Delivery will be delivered on the holiday. Collection Boxes will be picked up on the regular holiday schedule starting at 3 p.m.

Postal customers are also reminded that 24 hour service, seven days a week, is available at the Self-Service Postal Center located in the lobby of the General Mail Facility, 25 Dorchester Avenue, Boston.

So David and I crept along behind one of the bowling alleys. All of a sudden we heard a thump-thump-thump-thump-thump; it was our own hearts beating in fright. My hands began to sweat, then my head, back, shoulder blades, and my neck started to feel like a million fleas were eating me alive. Then we heard a floorboard creak, and a whisper, turning into a stifled giggle. Slowly and quietly David and I crept along until we came out into the open. All of a sudden we heard screams, all yelling "Surprise!"

It was Nancy and some of her friends. They had traveled around the world and now they had this surprise party for David and Nancy. The present that Nancy gave David was a different colored, gorgeous bowling ball. Inscribed along the side was a little verse Nancy had made up.

When I woke up, I didn't tell anyone about my dream, mostly because I didn't want them to know that in the end I did not solve the mystery; it was solved before I even got a chance to look at the clues and facts.

Later on in the day I read in the paper that a woman in her thirties by the name of Ms. Pinter was being held for ransom.

Dead or Alive

The fire was crackling. The Bodas family was sitting by the fire in the living room. Everyone except John. John was upstairs doing his Language Arts homework which was to write a mystery. The day before, John had made a bet on the Super Bowl against the Bears.

When it was time for bed, John was nowhere. They called and called until his mother screamed out. The whole family rushed to her aid. There upon John's Language Arts assignment was a puddle of blood. Mr. Bodas' face turned pale as a sheet of white paper.

They had a feeling it was Mr. Cognail, John's sinister teacher. Why? Because the day before, John blew up Mr. Cognail's XL. Or . . . could it be one of John's friends who bet with John? All of a sudden they heard banging on the ceiling.

Mr. Bodas grabbed a bat and opened the door to the attic. John yelled out. His mother asked in a frightened tone who it was. John ran down the attic stairs and jumped into the waiting Mr. Bodas' arms.

John explained that his pen exploded leaving red ink everywhere. John was so scared that he ran up the attic stairs because he didn't want to be yelled at. After a while, when he was ready to come down, to his shock the attic door had locked shut. He felt tired, so he went back up the stairs and fell asleep. That's why he didn't come when he was called.

John then went on to tell how the scream had woken him up. John then had the notion to bang on the attic floor so his parents would know he was upstairs. When they finished hugging and kissing John promised never to go anywhere without telling anyone. His parents then agreed not to be so harsh anymore. Now the Bodas family can go back living their own lives peacefully.

Dogs

In all the world there is nothing more I would like than a dog.
A lively one not one that would sit like a bump on a log.
I met a Cocker Spaniel the other day.
All it wanted to do was run about and play.
People say when they're young they're playful and calmer when they're old.
I would hate to see one with a tic, a flea, or even a cold.
Dogs come in all different shapes and sizes - yes.
However in my opinion Cocker Spaniels are the best.

Roads

Roads carry you near and far,
By walking, biking, or in a car.
Cobblestone, brick, sand or tar.
They connect us with lands of far.
Side to side or up and down,
they take from city to city and town to town.
Back roads, main roads, highways, and lanes, they take us from the west coast all the way to Maine.
Roads are important roads are a must,
But if you take a plane you'll leave them in the dust.

John Geary

"The Monster

There is something in my closet, I can see it stare at me;
I really wish that thing would just let me be;
It is in my closet and sometimes under my bed, but only in the night;
It makes me lay quite motionless and gives me quite a fright;
I named that thing the monster with a great big mouth and tail;
It has the biggest claw that is sharper than a nail;
His eyes are red with fury, his fangs are strong as steel; He looks at me quite hungrily as if I'm his next meal;
So now I keep a baseball bat hoping there will be,
No more big bad monster trying to frighten me.

A closer review of the mandatory seat-belt law

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The state's mandatory seat-belt use law is already six weeks old, yet many law-enforcement officials say few motorists have actually been fined for failure to wear belts.

Police in area towns say they concentrated on public awareness of the new law over the last several weeks. However, they indicated that the education period is drawing to a close; in the future, police will be writing up more citations resulting in fines, rather than issuing written or verbal warnings to violators.

The law requires all passengers in motor vehicles to be wearing belts or face $15 fines, with exceptions for police, delivery personnel and hardship cases.

Fines issued under the law are not taken into account under the Safe Driver Insurance Plan, which levies surcharges for other violations and at-fault accidents.

Motorists who are stopped by state police on the South Shore while not wearing belts apparently have the greatest chance of being fined for the violation.

Trooper Joseph Howley of the agency's public-relations office in Boston said of the 27,766 violations written by state police from Jan. 1 to Feb. 4, 4,400 included violations of the seat-belt law.

The number of tickets that have resulted in fines won't be known until the Traffic Enforcement Division issues a first-quarter report in April, he said.

While specific figures for the South Shore are also unavailable, state police issued about 1,200 seat-belt tickets among 5,800 total citations in the area covered by Troop D, which includes the Norwell, Middleboro, Bourne and Yarmouth state-police barracks, Howley said.

He estimated that 25 percent of the seat-belt citations will result in fines, yeilding about 300 fined motorists on the South Shore and Cape Cod.

Enforcement of the law will become more stringent this month, he said, but that won't prevent individual troopers from using their discretion in each situation.

"Just like speeding violations, the officer has to assess whether issuing a ticket is the best thing to do," Howley said.

Discretion may be used, for example, if police stop a car for doing 62 mph on Rte. 3 — seven mph over the speed limit. "Most people would get pretty mad if they got a $50 ticket in that situation," he said.

Hanover police have issued only one seat-belt citation in the last six weeks, said Hanover Lt. Paul Hayes. Only a few written warnings have been issued in the town, and police have given dozens of verbal warnings to motorists. The actual number of warnings was unavailable last week, he said.

The lone citation was issued to a motorist who was at fault in a collision.

"People know it's the law, and they understand that they'll have to comply with it sooner or later," Hayes said.

Police will issue warnings in most cases "until early spring," Hayes said, then they will begin to cite larger numbers of violators.

Enforcement in Marshfield will also be stricter this month, according to Police Chief William Sullivan. The department planned to use the first several weeks of this year for "public education" about the new seat-belt law, but that period is over for the most part, he said.

But like state police, Sullivan said ticketing offenders is left up to the officer's discretion.

Marshfield police average 100 to 150 traffic citations per month, but Sullivan wasn't sure how many involved seat-belt infractions during January.

Pembroke has also concentrated on public awareness of the law and, like Hanover police, officers there have issued citations only where motorists in an accident were not wearing seat belts, Acting Police Chief Richard T. Wills said.

"You can't enforce a low like this fully right from the start — you have to give motorists time to get used to it," he said.

Getting belts repaired

The new seat-belt use law has left some motorists with older cars or those with broken seat belts wondering how to go about getting them repaired.

In addition to the $15 fine for not wearing a seat belt, the new law adds seat belts to the list of equipment inspected annualy under the annual state safety and emissions inspections of all vehicles.

Owners of cars and trucks built before the 1967 model year are exempted from compliance. Federal officials mandated seat belts as standard equipment in all cars built after July 1, 1966.

Thus, if seat belts were included with the car when it was new, passengers must wear the belts. Such vehicles with faulty belts, like other equipment problems, must be fixed before a valid inspection sticker can be issued to the owner.

In addition to broken or missing belts, some motorists find them cumbersome, or even hazardous, to use. This is especially true of very short drivers, said a parts manager at an area dealership.

For such people, the "Big Three" domestic automakers — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler — are offering seat-belt extenders free of charge. These extenders clip into the end of the belt to add 12 to 14 inches to the belt's total length.

"Many thought overweight people would be the ones looking for extenders," said Robert Burns, parts manager at Gillespie Ford in Marshfield. "But every request we've had so far is from short people."

Shorter people move their seats far forward, adding to the needed length of the belt, he explained. Otherwise, the seat belt can cut across the person's shoulders or neck, making them ineffective.

Managers at Gillespie, Best Chevrolet in Hingham and Prestige Dodge in Hanover all said the manufacturers are furnishing the extenders free of charge.

"All three automakers want people to be able to wear the belt with no hassles. That's the thinking at Ford, and I'm sure they're thinking the same thing at GM and Chrysler," Burns said.

The extenders are available by request at the dealerships. Ford and Chrysler are offering standard extenders, while Best Chevy service advisor Mike McGinn said GM will actually measure people who need seat-belt modifications for a correct fit.

"The extenders will work only with those people

Ford Motor Co. to build driver-side air bags

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The first American-built cars, the Ford Motor Company's Topaz and Mercury Tempo, will now include the option of driver-side air bags. Combined with the mandatory use of seat belts, Ford Company officials believe that fatalities and serious injury can be reduced by as much as 55 percent with use of the driver-side air bag.

Beginning in March, the air bag will be available as an option for $815 on the two popular-priced cars, according to Louis Camp, executive engineer for safety and planning for the Ford Motor Company. Rsearch for the air bags began in 1982 at the request of the GSA, he explained at a news conference three weeks ago in Boston. The new line of Topaz and Tempos were the perfect cars to initiate the supplemental air bag program, he said.

Tests conducted through that program revealed that of the 28 crashes involving the air-bagged equipped Tempos, there were no serious deaths or injuries. The air bags were all deployed, in all cases, when they should have, Camp emphasized.. The fleet of air bag-equipped Tempos was tested during the past year.

According to the Ford engineer, the drivers of those 7500 tested cars were pleased with the performance of the air bags.In no instance, he repeated, did the supplemental bag deploy when it shouldn't have. Lab tests conducted by Ford indicate that air bags combined with the use of seat belts, "have the potential of providing extra protection by reducing and, in some cases, eliminating chest and face injuries that might otherwise occur in severe front end impacts," he noted.

The air bag, he continued, will deploy in a serious frontal accident equivalent to a 25 m.p.h. crash into a parked car. Sensors detect the impact and energize the circuit in 15 milliseconds. According to the engineer, the time between the car's contact and full deployment of the air bag is about 100 milliseconds or the time it takes to blink an eye.

The air bag system provides additional protection to the driver in the event of severe frontal crash by preventing the driver from possible contact with the steering wheel, Camp explained. He added the air bag should be utilized in conjunction with the seat belt, standard equipment on all Ford cars since the 1960's.

The executive engineer explained the air bag restraint system functions by a series of sensors, an air bag module and electrical wiring, supported by an electronic diagnostic device.

In response to a severe front accident, a spherical sensing mass (ball) inside each sensor moves along a guide tube away from a bias magnet and toward a set of electrical contact points. The clearance gap between the guide tube and the ball provides a dampening effect as it travels toward the contacts. The electrical contacts must be bridged by the ball to complete the electrical circuit for activation of the air bag module.

In effect, he added, the sensors are able to discriminate between frontal impacts that require deployment of the air bag, and those that do not. When the sensors detect a force equivalent to a 25 mile-per-hour crash into a parked car, the system signals deployment.

(See page 5)

William L. Kath, executive engineer, Car Product Development, Ford Motor Company, demonstrates a driver-side supplemental air bag as part of Ford Motor Company's national campaign to educate the public to the benefits of air bags as a supplement to safety belts. The 26-inch air cushion is inflated by gas (almost 100 percent nitrogen, a harmless gas that we breathe) in just 40 milliseconds, or four one-hundredths of a second. The dust surrounding the air bag is primarily talcum powder, which lubricates the bag while it is tightly packed in a module in the center of the steering wheel.

Mercury Sable offers spaciousness & comfort

The new Mercury Sable is a sophisticated shape that blends contemporary style and efficient performance in the manner of a great European road car.

Sable is a totally new car that, from inception, was designed to fulfill the needs of today'sdiscriminating buyer — spaciousness, comfort and superior driving characteristics.

Sable arrives as a result of an investment of more than five years and nearly $3 billion in development. The goal in that development was to design a contemporary four-door family sedan that could provide seating for up to six persons in an efficient, comfortable and responsive package.

The unique shape of theMercurySable immediately sets it ahead of its competition. Yet the Sable's sleek, slippery aerodynamic shape was fashioned with more than just its attractive appearance in mind. The efficient aerodynamic form of the new Mercury Sable actually contributes to its quiet ride and precise handling.

The Mercury Sable is equipped with front-wheel drive to provide excellent traction in all weather and road conditions.

And Sable has a fully independent suspension to deliver a consistently smooth, comfortable ride, even over rough and inconsistent road surfaces.

Power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering endows the new Mercury Sable with precise driver control and quick response to driver commands.

Power-assisted brakes provide the Sable with impressive stopping power.

The Sable GS sedan is equipped with a 2.5-liter inline four-cylinder engine with central fuel injection that delivers efficient performance and frugal fuel consumption.

On the top-of-the-line Sable LS and on Sable wagon models, an all-new 3.0-liter V-6 engine with multi-port electronic fuel injection supplies more responsive power.

The 3.0-liter V-6 engine uses an advanced four-speed automatic overdrive transaxle designed to make efficient use of that responsive power while providing good fuel economy.

And Sable was designed to provide a spacious and luxurious interior for both driver and passengers.

That the 1986 Sable, the new flagship of the Mercury car line, should provide all of these advanced features in such an attractive package should come as no surprise. Mercury cars — the Cougar, Topaz, Lynx, Capri, Marquis and Grand Marquis — are built on a cornerstone of quality and integrity.

Mercury cars, in fact, are among the highest quality American cars, based on a survey of owner-reported problems in the prior six months in a 1985 survey of 1981 through 1984 models designed and built in the U.S.

The new 1986 Mercury Sable. Its striking contemporary styling, responsive powerplants, spacious interior and confident ride make it the shape you'll want to be in.

Ford Motor driver air bags. . .

The actual igniter, Camp explained, is an electrical device which, upon receiving an electrical signal from the sensors, produces thermal energy to ignite the material within the inflator. This process initiates complete burning of the main inflator generant to produce the nitrogen gas to inflate the air bag. No harmful gases are released at the time of deployment, he stated.

The bag, constructed of nylon fabric coated with neoprene, is about 26 inches in diameter and fills to a volume of 2.3. cubic feet approximately 40 milliseconds after the crash. It is contained within a protective cover - seams molded into this cover separate during inflation of the air bag to allow deployment.

According to the Ford engineer, the air bag weight, size and electrical components necessitated changes to the steering wheel in the Topaz and Tempo. They will feature a non-tilt column and a plate on which an electrically conducive 'clock spring' is mounted. That spring transmits the signals to the steering wheel for air bag deployment.

Camp explained that the driver side is the only area within the car equipped with the air bag. Because the size and position of the adult driver is predictable, engineers were able to devise a system according to those standards. A passenger's air bag system has yet to be developed, Camp said, because of inaccuracy of predicting what size or position that passenger may be."It has also been proven," he said, "that deployment of an air bag if say, a child, was crawling around the front seat, may be more injurious than life-saving." Ford engineers are working on a system that would react correctly in such a situation.

"There are problems now perfecting such a system," he added.

The engineer noted that the people likely to purchase air bag systems in their autos, are the same ones who regularly utilize a seat belt restraint. "Initially we expect the air bag will appeal to an older, more conservative portion of the driving public," he stated. "They are the people who traditionally are willing to spend the money on such a system. There will always be people reluctant and resistant to such a system. But there is a market for the air bag supplemental system."

Meet a new member of the car-washing society

By Mary Mahoney
Mariner Staff

One of the experiences that come with owning a new car is the adventure at the local car wash.

If you think "adventure" is inappropriate here, you probably haven't noticed the condition of the cars I've been driving around town for the last decade or so. Then again, maybe you have and just didn't give them more than a passing wince.

That's okay. I don't feel insulted. I learned to deal with rusty junks a long time ago, mainly by never looking back after I parked them and promising myself that someday . . .

And now that day is here, shining down on a brand new-smelling automobile with white dust frosting its edges.

"Salt Eats Cars" the sign at the car wash reads and I think to myself, "Not on this baby it won't."

I pull in and wait in line. When my turn comes I gladly hand over my $4, giddy with anticipation. Obeying the warning sign, I put the car in neutral and take my foot off the brake, letting some unseen power carry me along.

Then, like an Alfred Hitchcock movie, the car, with me inside, is plunged into a dark cavern where a roar of soapy water turns into a deluge.

I peer out of the windshield but all I can see are long, black (or are they blue?) spongy wings, like prehistoric birds, flapping all around the car. While I hold my breath I worry about how close the car in front of me is and as I think about applying the brakes, more flapping things attack and I decide I'd better just give the car wash management the benefit of the doubt.

The rushing water stops, the flapping slows and rubber squeegees gently smooth out the watery wrinkles. I find I'm breathing again with my first glimpse of sunlight. My new car is still in one piece and shining again.

It took me the two-mile ride home to relax and another hour before I could figure it out.

I know it's silly (and downright embarrassing) to admit I was scared in that car wash. But then it dawned on me—I hadn't gone through one of those places for a dozen years or more. There was a good reason for that—I never had a car worth washing and what's more, any thorough scrubbing would have totally demolished my rust-riddled chariots.

In fact, the local car wash had even anticipated that.

I still had my 120,000-mile Subaru in December when I purchased a book of car wash coupons for my son's Christmas stocking. The special that day was a free car wash with every coupon book sold.

My car needed a lot more than a soapy bath but I thought, "why not, it's free."

I walked to where I had parked the car behind a fence (it's a habit developed over years of owning apologetic transportation) and then I saw the sign: "Cars with excessive body rot not allowed."

It didn't matter. It confirmed my worst fears anyway. It didn't take too much imagination to picture fenders and bumpers lying in the soapy water as I drove away with clean, bald tires and a sputtering motor.

But all that has changed. Now every car wash invites me in and I'm very much a member of the elite car-washing society.

I guess, though, I haven't been a member long enough because getting my car washed still felt a little bit like going to the dentist. And what bothers me about that is, I've never met anyone else who felt that way.

Well, it's been four days since my first experience and I'm ready to go back again. But before I put my car in neutral and take my foot off the brake, I'm going to find out just how that car-washing process works.

And the next time, there will be a friend riding in the passenger seat—preferably one who is a member in good standing of the car-washing society.

ALA winter driving tips

Cold weather reduces the efficiency of every car battery. Cut the drain on the battery by making sure that the lights, radio, heater fan and other electrical accessories are turned off before you turn on the ignition.

Changing an auto tire is tricky anytime, but even more so during the winter. Before lifting the car, make sure that the auto jack is level and free of ice and that the car will not slide when the wheel with the flat tire is off the ground.

Winter driving often means road splatter on your windshield. Use your windshield washer frequently for good visibility. Avoid using your wipers when your windshield is dry because you may scratch the glass with grit that may be on the wipers or the windshield.

Good visibility is vital for highway safety, particularly in winter when roads may be slippery and vision may be obscured by bad weather. If your windshield wipers streak or don't make complete contact, replace the wiper blades.

When driving during foggy or snowy nights, keep your headlights on low beam. High beams will reflect off the fog or snow and reduce your visibility.

Tailgating, driving too closely to the car ahead, can be dangerous anytime on the highway, but particularly in winter. It takes three to nine times as much distance to stop on snow and ice as it does on dry pavement. When roads become slippery, slow down and stay farther behind the vehicle in front of you.

When driving in winter, watch out for icy patches. Stay extra alert at bridges and overpasses where ice may melt first in the morning and re-freeze first at night.

Add a can of fuel line anti-freeze to your gas tank in frigid weather for smoother starting and driving. It helps reduce condensation in your fuel system.

Check tire pressures regularly when the tires are cold. Add air when necessary and don't forget the spare. Remember, underinflated tires can heat up excessively, even in winter.

Motorists who keep their cars clean during the winter are helping extend the life of their vehicles. Salt and sand used to make highways safer can rust auto bodies, particularly from underneath the vehicle. Remove road salts and sand from your auto with a good hosing or car wash every few weeks.

The car market shifts to the mobile 'Yuppie'

(Reprinted with permission from Car and Driver, July 1984, and Prestige Dodge of Hanover).

• Politicians aren't the only ones courting young, upwardly mobile professionals these days. Car manufacturers find them as attractive as presidential hopefuls do, and for many of the same reasons.

The yuppies, as they're called, are steadily increasing in number, their relative affluence enables them to consume more than other population groups, and they tend to be in the vanguard of opinions and trends that are eventually adopted by the greater masses. What's more, yuppies typically buy more upmarket (read, more profitable) cars than average customers. It's no wonder that every car manufacturer is targeting new products at this potentially lucrative market segment.

Of course yuppies are very selective and independent. They want more than mere transportation appliances. They expect contemporary technology, solid quality, and driving pleasure in addition to pure function.

Most of all, they want a car that befits their station in life, one that communicates their abhorrence of the prosaic. Yet they won't necessarily spend a fortune for such a car; they were once, after all, the flower children of the Sixties. Instead, they might just make do with a cheap beater, using the money saved to buy a home computer or a cruise around the world.

Until now, Chrysler Corporation hasn't done much yuppie business. Most of the cars that brought the company back from the brink are oriented toward basic-transportation and traditional buyers. For 1985, though, Chrysler is shifting its sights toward the yuppies, with two new sedans. These cars will replace the Dodge 600 and the Chrysler E Class in the showrooms, although they will retain the floorpan of those cars. The Dodge Division is calling its version Lancer; the Chrysler will be the LeBaron GTS. The two are identical except for minor trim, detail, and equipment differences.

Even on cursory inspection, the new H-body, as Chrysler calls it, is a breed apart from the K-car and its multifarious variants. Instead of boxy, upright lines, the H-body has a sleek, aerodynamic look. Although stopping short of the worn-bar-of-soap look, the H-body does have a steeply reclined windshield and backlight, a reclined nose, a rising wedge shape, and neatly integrated bumpers. The only body style is a five-door hatchback sedan, but the hatch's short horizontal deck surface and hidden seams make it look like a betrunked four-door from most angles.

Trim-and-detail execution is of course just as important to a car's image as its basic shape. Here, again, Chrysler designers departed from their tried-and-true use of copious chrome and baroque touches. Thin strips of chrome beading are used instead, offset by a heavier use of black-rubber rub strips running around the car. The flowing lines are complemented by streamlined mirrors, recessed door handles, flush taillights, and a clean grille. The Lancer ES, with which we spent most of our time, has even less brightwork and comes with a subtle black chin spoiler. All told, we think few customers will have difficulty distinguishing the new Lancer from its 600 forebear.

A similar transformation has been wrought inside. Each and every Lancer comes with full instrumentation—simple and proper white-on-black round dials in the base car, an electronic cluster with no redeeming qualities whatsoever in the ES. (Fortunately, the mechanical cluster can be substituted for the electronic one). There are also cable-operated fuel-filler and deck-lid releases next to the driver's seat, a map pocket in each front door, a graphic message center for minor warnings, and a flip-down-and-pull-out cup holder. It's an impressive package of standard features. Even the base seats have been blessed with firmer padding and a bit of lateral support, and the optional buckets have more serious bolsters with pneumatically adjustable lumbar support.

This importlike package of features resides in an interior that's rather domestic in flavor. There's no bogus wood or heavy brightwork, but the high and massive-appearing dash creates a somewhat submerged feeling. The door panels, the headliner, and the trim pieces lack the unitized, molded appearance of most higher-priced imports. A yuppie's ego will not find much sustenance here.

From a practical viewpoint, however, the interior is hard to fault. Since the Lancer inherits the 600/E Class's 103-1-inch wheelbase, there's plenty of leg room both front and rear. The 68.5-inch overall width provides sufficient shoulder room, even for three adults in the rear. Our only complaint is a shortage of rear headroom for near-six-footers.

Still, the EPA rates the Lancer a midsize, with a total interior volume of 116 cubic feet. Eighteen of those cubic feet are in the trunk, which expands to 42 cubic feet with the 60-40 split rear seat folded. One special feature is the ability to lock the folding seats and disable the remote trunk release, allowing the luggage compartment to be secured independently of the ignition key.

The prototype five-speed turbo bounded from 0 to 60 mph in 8.1 seconds and covered the quarter-mile in 16.3 seconds at 85 mph. It felt equally lively on the road, with minimal turbo lag above 2500 rpm. At lower engine speeds, the ES Turbo is a bit sluggish, especially in its very tall fifth gear, but even then the throttle response is impressively smooth. For those of the shiftless persuasion, the automatic transmission solves this problem in exchange for only a slight penalty in performance. However, the new turbo motor does fall a bit short in smoothness. Above 5000 rpm the engine sounds coarse, and with the manual transmission there's another rough period around 3000 rpm (because of an additional engine support). Although the cacophony isn't deafening, neither will it impress a potential yuppie customer with its refinement.

'Women on Wheels' course

Newbury College of Braintree is offering "Women on Wheels course" in February, designed to educate women on the inner workings of an automobile dealership and the so-called man's world of cars and trucks.

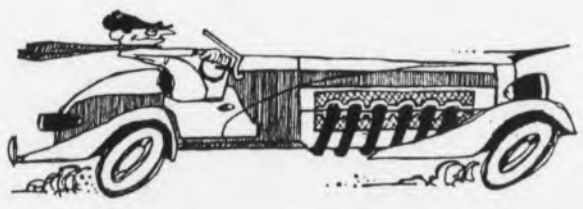
The course is set up to explain the primary functions of the automobile, starting with turning of the key to the exhaust fumes.

This is not a course to make mechanics but to help educate women in getting a working knowledge of the following parts of an automobile: Engine's care and operation, Electrical-what fires plugs, Suspension, Transmission, Axels, Care and maintenance of motor vehicle and warranties.

One night the group will take a tour of an automobile dealership.

Students wishing to register may do so by calling Lisa Beck, the Campus Director, at (617) 843-8888. Located at Archbishop Williams High School at 80 Independence Avenue, Newbury offers adult students the opportunity to earn an Associate in Applied Science Degree in just over two years by attending classes Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Students may register for individual classes also!

A deferred tuition plan is available for students eligible for company reimbursement and the program is approved by the Veterans' Administration. The College offers assistance with financial aid, counseling and placement testing, and a Career Planning and Placement office is available to students and alumni.



Octane fuel could fix 'rock'

Chances are, everyone who has driven for any length of time has experienced the frustration of an engine that refuses to shut down. It continues to cough, chatter and rock after you turn off the ignition switch and remove the key. Your first reaction is to sit there and stare at the dashboard instruments in disbelief. Your second reaction might be to kick the accelerator sharply. At this point, the engine usually stops.

If your car won't stop the solution may be a very simple one. Change to a higher octane fuel the next time you fill up the tank. This should stop "after-run" or "dieseling" as it is called. The cause is an improper air/fuel mixture setting on the carburetor or the spark timing. Therefore, changing to a higher grade of gasoline usually solves this problem.

Newer model cars are especially prone to after-run and dieseling. This is due to changes in design. Emission controls and provision for more output to run accessories make newer cars run hotter. As a result, your newer model may cause you great irritation by dieseling. If switching to a higher octane gasoline doesn't cure the problem, visit your dealer or service center for a checkup.

The 'Roadstar' is back with a fast style

In the beginning, all Corvettes were roadsters.

It wasn't until 1963 that the coupe entered the lineup of America's favorite—and only—sports car. Then, for awhile, they were all coupes.

Now, a decade after the last soft-top Corvette was built, the roadster (sports jargon for convertible) is back—in a style that benefits the fastest production car in the world. And every one will be identical to the 'Vette roadster pacing the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race May 25.

Production is set to begin in mid-February at the Bowling Green, Kentucky assembly plant (the sole producer of Corvette) and an estimated 6,000 Corvette roadsters will be built during the remainder of the '86 year. A bright-yellow model—identical to showroom models except for special track lights—will pace the "500."

What distinguishes a 1986 Corvette pace car from all other '86 Corvettes is not the engine, special paint or decals, but rather the fact that it is a roadster.

"What distinguishes the '86 Corvette pace car is its top," says Robert Burger, Chevrolet General Manager and General Motors Vice President.

"If it doesn't have one . . . it's a pace car. We made the pace car a distinct model within the Corvette family. If it's a roadster, it's a pace car . . . and vice versa."

The Corvette Convertible joins the lineup of America's sports cars in 1986. This is the first Corvette roadster in the Chevrolet lineup since 1975. Scheduled for an early-Spring 1986 public introduction, a bright-yellow version has been selected to pace the Indianapolis 500-Mile race next May 25.

Some of the car's features include: a 5.7 liter tuned port injection V8 (today's manifestation of the timeless small-block V8) provides 230 horsepower at 4,000 rpm. Peak torque is 330 lbs.-ft. at 3,200 rpm. Every roadster engine will sport lightweight aluminum cylinder heads which allow a bump in compression ratio (from 9.0:01 to 9.5:1) and shave 40 pounds from the engine's weight.

Standard transmission is the automatic with 4th gear overdrive; a no-cost option is the four-speed manual with overdrive in the top three gears—giving drivers the choice of seven gear ratios so engine speed can be kept where it suits the driver's purposes, whether powering through a curve at a lateral acceleration of 0.91g, slogging through congested city streets or cruising the interstate.

The Bosch ABS II anti-lock braking system, integrated with the 4-wheel discs (a development as significant today as the first hydraulic brakes were 50 years ago), superimposes its logic over a driver's foot. ABS utilizes sophisticated electronics to detect when any wheel is on the verge of locking up. It then precisely controls the wheel's braking action to make use of maximum available traction.

The manually operated top on the roadster is a model of simplicity; a three-step procedure to lower or raise the top takes only seconds to accomplish. Levers tucked ahead of each sun visor secure the top of the windshield. Turning them outboard releases the top.

The same yellow button inside the center console that controls the hatch release on Corvette coupes controls a fiberglass panel directly behind the seats on roadster models. Touch the button once and the top is released, touch it again and the panel pivots upward. The top, complete with its integrated rear window, folds neatly into the cavity beneath the panel.

The top has a velour innerliner specially designed to reduce wind and road noise.

While the soft top is the most visible structural change, there are a number of not-so-visible changes, including reinforced areas surrounding the soft-top storage area and substantial suspension tuning refinements.

When it goes into production in January, the roadster will be completely assembled in-house, on the same assembly line where coupes are built.

Cheaper 'imitation' exports are declining

The sale of cheaper 'imitation' imports is not a new phenomenon. Yet local auto dealers say it is on the decline and predict its rapid demise.

"Thank God for the intelligence of the people of the South Shore," says the president of South Shore Imports Dick Bokavich.

Intense monitoring by the state, and the possibility of stringent federal restrictions on the import of unauthorized foreign autos, may force the gray market sale of elite foreign models into extinction.

The sale of less expensive import models, known nationally as the gray market, "has not hurt us," acccording to Bokavich, president of the company with offices in Hanover and Norwell. "The public has become educated now, and they don't want these cars."

The Volvo and Saabs sold at his dealership are among the cars produced and sold for $10,000 to $15,000 less under the gray market which originates in Europe. These cars are not illegal in this country; they are, however, "more headaches than they're worth," according to the used car manager for Prestige Imports of Norwell.

Les Owens says the inexpensive Mercedes-Benz made in Europe and sold by unauthorized dealers and private brokers in the United States "never really save anyone any money. You're losing money

BMW pursues new antilock braking system

With its 1986 model line, BMW has once again pursued a long-standing policy of continuous product improvement.

Among the highlights of the ten-model lineup are a new six cylinder entry-level model, standard antilock braking in all models, an electronically controlled automatic transmission, an anti-theft radio/cassette player and new sports and luxury option packages.

The antilock braking system (ABS) is one of the automotive safety advances, shortening stopping distances on most road surfaces and always ensuring maximum vehicle control under emergency conditions.

With the 1986 U.S. models, BMW becomes the first and only manufacturer to offer ABS as standard equipment across the board.

But ABS is only one facet of BMW's engineering leadership. Every 1986 BMW also embodies four-wheel independent suspension, four-wheel disc brakes, precision alloy wheels and an overhead-cam inline six-cylinder engine. It is the first year, in fact, that every U.S. model is powered by one of BMW's brilliant, turbine-smooth sixes, marking another important commitment: to give American customers only the company's best powertrain engineering.

BMW has an equally strong commitment to automotive electronics — not as gadgetry, but applied to make driving more efficient, convenient and enjoyable.

Every gasoline model incorporates electronic fuel injection and ignition managed by the Digital Motor Electronics engine computer; even the 524td's diesel fuel injection is electronically controlled.

BMW's exclusive Service Interval Indicator computer tailors the maintenance schedules to the individual owner's driving habits and conditions; the computerized Energy Control fuel-economy readout helps the driver obtain maximum fuel efficiency wth the gasoline models. In every model but the 325, a nine-function Onboard Computer enables driver and passenger to call up and calculate useful travel information. And the new anti-theft stereo system puts sophisticated electronics to use to foil thieves.

SPORTS-LUXURY SEDAN

At the top of the line is the BMW 735i sports-luxury sedan, introduced a year ago. For 1986 the 735i is available in two forms: "standard" and the new L7.

"Standard" must be in quotes, for the standard 735i was already a richly appointed, lavishly equipped car. The new L7 version, which features a special silver-gray all-leather interior and a supplemental restraint system, adds even more luxury. A five-speed manual overdrive transmission is standard in the 735i — a unique feature in the top luxury-sedan class. The optional automatic transmission (standard in the L7) is now electronically controlled by a computer that communicates with the computer that manages the 3.5-liter engine's Digital Motor Electronics management system.

The eight-way power front seats now include a memory feature for the driver's seat, and a new anti-theft stereo radio/cassette player with high-performance sound system is standard equipment. Also standard is a new roll-up rear sunshade to protect the interior and occupants from sun heat and glare while allowing the driver to see out.

635CSi LUXURY SPORTS COUPE

The 635CSi, BMW's luxurious sports coupe, going into its second year, gets the same engineering improvements as the 735i: electronically controlled automatic transmission, memory driver's seat, anti-theft stereo radio/cassette player with high-performance sound system, and a roll-up rear sunshade.

The 635CSi is powered by the same 3.5-liter six-cylinder engine as the 735i, and likewise comes standard with a five-speed manual transmission.

FIVE-SERIES MODELS

For 1986, BMW's 5-Series again consists of three distinct models. At the top of the series is the 535i, whose 3.5-liter engine and standard five-speed transmission make it one of the highest-performance sedans available in America. Here too, the new electronically controlled transmission is available and the anti-theft stereo radio/cassette player with premium sound system is standard.

The BMW 528e shares its compact, yet roomy four-door sedan body with the 535i but is powered by a smaller, more economical-to-operate 2.7 liter six-cylinder engine. For 1986 this popular midsize luxury sedan gets standard antilock braking (ABS) as well as the new anti-theft stereo radio/cassette player and drivetrain improvements for smoother, quieter operation.

During 1985, BMW introduced its first diesel model, the 524td. Outwardly identical to the 528e, the 524td is powered by a 2.4-liter turbocharged six-cylinder turbodiesel engine that, according to Road & Track magazine, "sets the newest BMW 5-Series apart from any diesel we've ever tested." Remarkable turbodiesel performance is what the editors were talking about, and that is unchanged for 1986. But the 524td has new features too: standard ABS, the anti-theft stereo system and an optional limited-slip differential.

A new version of the 3-Series BMW is available in both two door and four door models. With standard anti-lock braking and a 2.7 liter fuel injected six-cylinder engine, the 325 combines high performance and a long list of standard features.

THE BMW 325

In 1985 there were two 3-Series models, the 318i and 325e, both available as two-door or four-door sedans. The 318i was powered by a 1.8-liter four-cylinder engine, the 325e by the same 2.7-liter engine as the 528e. For 1986, BMW offers three 3-Series models, all with six-cylinder power: the well equipped "standard" 325, the luxurious 325e and the sporty 325es.

Available as a two or four door sedan, the new 325 is powered by the 2.7-liter six-cylinder engine and has four-wheel disc brakes with standard ABS. The anti-theft stereo radio/cassette player is standard, as are BMW's Active Check Control vehicle monitoring system, a two-way sunroof and metallic paint.

All these items were either unavailable or optional at extra cost on the 318i, and add to a list that already included electric windows and outside mirrors, central locking, power steering, alloy wheels and halogen foglights.

In total, the 325 offers significantly improved performance, braking, standard equipment and value for its under $20,000 price.

The only 325 options are BMW's efficient four-speed automatic transmission and a limited-slip differential; a five-speed manual transmission in standard.

who request them," he said.

Those whose belts need repair or replacement face steeper costs, however. For domestic makes, replacement seat belts and retractor systems cost anywhere from $10 to $80, depending on car model.

"I haven't seen any belt systems for less than $50," Best Chevy's McGinn said.

Motorists who need this work will also be charged for labor, which costs $30 to $35 an hour depending on the dealership.

Chrysler has standard-replacement belt systems for use in older cars for about $35, said Prestige service manager David R. Lewis. At Gillespie, Ford sells a similar item for about $25.

For a less-expensive replacement, people can "always check out the salvage yards," McGinn said.

The managers each said they have only had a few inquiries about belt modifications or repairs.

"We've had one inquiry about an extender, three installations in older vehicles and one replacement belt that was chewed up by the family dog," Prestige's Lewis said.

Massachusetts Seat Belt Law

Who Must Use Seat Belts?
- All front and back seat occupants

What Vehicles Are Covered?
- All motor vehicles manufactured with seat belts including cars, vans, trucks and taxis

What Is The Fine?

- $15 for each person 5 and over
- Driver pays fine for himself and passengers under 16 years old. Sixteen year old passengers and over pay their own fines.

What Are Some Exemptions?
- Limited medical reasons (physician certified)
- Vehicles manufactured without seat belts
- When all seat belts are in use

Buick officials say you can tell a lot about a car by using the walk-around test.

Buick offers the Walk-Around test

Considering the incredible engineering advances that have been made in automobiles over the last ten years, you certainly know better than to choose a car simply on the basis of its looks.

But, wait.

If you look beyond its "styling touches," the outward appearance of an automobile can tell you a great deal about the kind of car it is, or at the very least, how it will make you feel.

The Century T Type shown here is an example of Buick's approach to automotive design.

To begin with, it is shaped in tune with the latest automotive technology. It has clean lines, a solid stance, poise. And it is shaped with the aid of computers and wind tunnels to give it efficient, aerodynamic lines.

Like all modern Buicks, the Century is designed not just for style's sake, but to offer you a practical, intelligent automobile. For EPA estimates on Century or any Buick model, contact your Buick dealer.

Yet, the Century offers another clue to Buick's design philosophy. For while it is undeniably advanced in its shape and stance, there is also something very classic about it.

Its very modern styling has been tempered with, and enhanced by, human design. An element of taste, of understated elegance. And that's what makes a Buick unmistakably a Buick.

Step a little closer and you'll begin to understand. This Buick has been conceived as an integrated unit. It does not look like part of one design cobbled together with part of another design. .

Everything is designed to fit together, precisely. And to work together, beautifully.

Is inflation eating up your car buying power?

First Honda dealership opens on the South Shore

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies to mark the formal opening of Freedom Honda in Plymouth, the first Honda automobile dealership on the South Shore, was held at its brand new home on Rte. 44 (164 Samoset Street) just west of the junction of Rte. 3.

The 10 a.m. dedication was attended by numerous government officials, business leaders and representatives of Honda of America, headquartered in Gardenia, California.

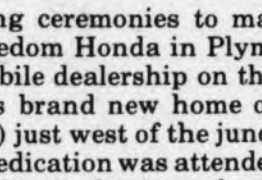
Honda, the fourth largest automaker in the United States, surpassing AMC and Volkswagen with the opening of its Marysville, Ohio, plant in 1982, sees the new franchise location as one of the most promising in all of New England.

Michael Neville, the new general manager of Freedom, cited the remarkable success story of Liberty Honda, Freedom's sister dealership in Providence, R.I., as one indicator of the high level of sales performance and customer satisfaction Honda speaks of.

Under Neville's direction, the Liberty franchise, acquired in 1983, showed a nearly 500 percent increase in sales in its first year of operation, the highest in the United States. Complimenting that feat, Liberty received Honda's highest award for service performance in 1985.

While Friday's ceremonies marked its formal introduction to the South Shore, Freedom actually opened its doors for business in early December. This "soft" opening enabled the staff to become more acquainted with the new building and operational procedures, and for the management team to become more familiar with the community and its people.

Groundbreaking for Freedom's 35,000-square-foot, steel and brick facility was held last September. The dealership boasts a spacious, state-of-the-art service department and beautiful new showrooms. Supporting both operations is the largest computerized Honda parts inventory system in New England, with regular parts shuttles between Plymouth and Providence.



New employees of the Freedom Honda auto dealership in Plymouth are: (Back row) L-R: Jason Scott MacWilliams (hat), reconditioner; James Westgate, service; Patrick Bonner (hat), service; Bob Bennett, reconditioner; Deborah Goddard, Service Manager (Plymouth); Lou Hanelt, reconditioner; Lynn Archer, sales; Michele G. See your way clear - check those wipers

Windshield wipers are among the most neglected safety items on your automobile. New England winters can be tough on a car's wipers, and AAA Massachusetts says replacing the rubber refill blades is easy, inexpensive, and essential for safe driving year 'round.

"Good visibility is critical, particularly at this time of year," said Stewart W. Hall, Director of Automotive Services for AAA Massachusetts. "A simple check of the windshield wiper blades' condition and their operation should be part of every regular maintenance routine."

If your wiper blades fail to clean the glass properly, leaving the glass streaked and your visibility blurred, they need replacing. If you don't remember how your wipers perform in bad weather, squirt the windshield with washer fluid and turn on the wipers.

Although streaking can be caused by a worn

Cheaper 'imitation' imports are declining. . .

in the long run, because you'll only be able to sell your headache to someone else. An authorized dealership will never accept the car."

As Owens explains, a gray market import does not contain the safety features required in the United States. "When one of the cars is imported over here, it has to be fitted for emission controls, bumpers, roll bars - everything built into the car in the United States-made Mercedes-Benz. These cars do not contain Mercedes' parts, they're using GM parts on a Mercedes body," he says, adding, "A second feature is that even though the cars look the same, they are built completely different. The authorized Mercedes we sell at Prestige have 120 safety features built into it. The gray market car has 30."

Owens admitted when the phenomenon flourished four years ago, his dealership suffered a tarnished image from the gray market imitators. "People thought they were buying a low-priced Merecedes - a real value. And they ended up with a lemon. The Mercedes-Benz has a reputation as the safest car in the world. The people who bought a gray market car would have been better off buying anything else for their $15,000," he said.

Consumers have since educated themselves, and are aware of shoddy copies of the original.

Owens explains, "They're learning, but many people learned the hard way. And they learned that it wasn't Mercedes of North America who was ripping them off."

The Norwell manager notes that the cars are actually built in Europe by Dainler Benz. They are sold throughout Europe and other countries, but do not meet safety regulations set by the United States.

The federal Department of Transportation is considering harsh action to prevent the import of these gray market cars into the country. Under consideration by the federal government are new proposed vehicle theft standards. This law, if passed by Congress, will bar the importation of most vehicles not intended by the original manufacturer for U.S. distribution.

Because most gray market cars are those autos classified as elite luxury models, they are also subject to theft. The proposed legislation would impose tight controls on the anti-theft components of all imports, and would thus necessitate the reconstruction of most gray market cars once they are brought into the United States.

A spokesman for Autohaus Imports of Cohasset says gray market sales in the South Shore area have not affected his business.

"Occasionally I'm asked by someone if they think it would be a good idea to purchase such a car," he says. "But we don't deal with it. I tell them to read all the trade publications. Most reasonable people can deduce that it would not be a good idea to purchase such a car."

A gray market imitation will still cost the consumer about $30,000 to $40,000, depending on the import model. But once purchased, there is no recourse for the consumer should the car require repairs or maintenance.

"When a car is that expensive, you don't want to have the sort of problem of not being able to get it repaired," he adds. "There is no factory warranty. Cars are so complicated now, that warranty is a necessity."

South Shore Import's Bokavick explains, "The gray market is not hurting us because we don't deal in it. Any authorized dealer in this area will not. But it does hurt the consumer.

"There is no warranty, no Moroni label (identification on import vehicles), and the certificate of origin is not the same as when you purchase the car through normal channels. Once you call the factory for authorization on the vehicle, you find out it is not authorized. No one will work on it."

Prestige Imports of Norwell handle several inquiries about gray market vehicles. "But the market is dwindling," Owens says. "Even though the up front costs are less, you're getting an entirely different motor and parts from Germany. If anything goes wrong, it takes about six to eight months to deliver a part. The only time we'll touch one of the cars is if it's under warranty. And many of those cars are under a one year warranty that begins the day the car is manufactured."

He adds, "I think the public has wised up. They lose more even though they're paying less. A lot of banks and insurance companies won't touch these cars. Insurers won't accept these cars because there's no market value. Who wants to buy back these cars? No one."

The Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles is stepping up efforts to monitor the sale of these vehicles. "Now when you go to the Registry with one of these, they're going to follow through on the title," Owens says.

The Mercedes-Benz gray market cars are not bootleg vehicle, he explains. "It's just that they're built for European standards for consumption outside the United States," Owens adds. "They do not meet our safety standards. A consumer is much better going to an authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer knowing the car they purchase meets all the standards of the manufacturer and the United States."

Check those wipers constantly. . .

blade, it can also occur as a result of a buildup of grease, dirt, and road salt on the blade. Mild soap and water will usually clean the residue and restore the blades to proper working condition.

When a wiper blade "chatters," there can be a number of possible causes. Most often, it's because the wiper-arm tension needs adjustment, something your mechanic should check.

During winter, preserve your wiper blades by using a scraper or the defroster to clear your windshield of accumulated ice. Remember to keep a full reservoir of windshield-washer fluid (the kind that carries a label indicating it won't harm your car's finish).

AAA says periodic inspection and testing of your car's windshield wiper system will provide you with inexpensive "safety insurance" now and throughout the year ahead.

Mercedes Benz celebrates 100th anniversary

Mercedes-Benz, which traces its origins directly to the first automobile in 1886, is marking its 100th anniversary year with the most advanced group of vehicles ever to carry the three-pointed star. All come with a driver-side air bag.

Seven of the eight models going on sale this week are new, and three more will appear in the spring. All of them combine traditional Mercedes quality with technical innovation and the hottest performance yet seen in such cultivated machines.

Much interest centers on the 300E, the first of the new middle-size sedans. Acclaimed by auto editors, the 300E has a 177-horsepower, six-cylinder gasoline engine in a body with 27 percent less wind resistance-yet essentially the same interior size - as the model line it replaces and rides on a suspension system providing precise control and improved comfort.

Available with choice of a five-speed manual transmission or four-speed automatic, it can accelerate to 55 mph in 7.5 seconds, quicker than a 1985 500SEL. With a test track top speed of more than 135 mph, it is also faster.

The other models available now range from the 190D 2.5 sedan, powered by a new five-cylinder 93-hp diesel, to the top-of-the-line 560SEL sedan and 560SEC coupe, both propelled by a new 238-hp fuel-injected V8. In between are the sporty, high-performance 190E 2.3-16 sedan; the long-wheelbase 420SEL sedan and the 560SL coupe/roadster. Sol "carry-over" from 1985 is the gasoline-engined 190E 2.3 sport sedan — the most popular Mercedes-Benz sold in North America.

All eight come with an extended list of standard equipment, led by the Mercedes-Benz Supplemental Restraint System. Known as SRS, it consists of an air bag for the driver and "intelligent" front seat belts that automatically tighten in a major frontal crash. In addition, all but the 190E 2.3 and 190D 2.5 have ABS, the electronic anti-lock brake system, standard.

"It's appropriate that we mark the centennial of the automobile with a line of cars that looks to the future as much as it builds on the achievements of the past," said Mercedes-Benz of North America President Walter Bodack.

The cars are direct descendants of Carl Benz's three-wheeler, patented in January, 1886, the world's first practical automobile, and the motorized carriage completed by Gottlieb Daimler a few months later.

Besides giving their names to the company that produces Mercedes-Benz products, Daimler and Benz blazed a trail that leads to an ongoing list of automotive firsts. But lately the Stuttgart firm has been broadening the scope of its offerings.

The 190E 2.3-16, a special 167-hp version of the 190 sedan, is one of the new breed. Immediately recognizable by its low stance and aerodynamic body panels, the "four-door sports car" carries a deep-breathing four-cylinder engine with a 16-valve cylinder head built by Cosworth, a company usually associated with racing cars. The 190E 2.3-16 is a particularly well-balanced machine, with brakes, handling and safety to match its power. It also has all the amenities of a classical touring car and comes with choice of automatic or manual transmission.

All 1986 Mercedes-Benz models feature, along with SRS, an improved stereo radio/cassette player that is rendered useless if removed when the anti-theft alarm is activated. All are fitted with aerodynamic, light-alloy wheels that follow the design of those used on the 190's.

This article was provided by Prestige Imports of Norwell.

The aerodynamic 300E is the first new mid-size Mercedes-Benz sedan since 1976. Powered by a 177-hp gasoline six, its performance is matched with a suspension system designed for both comfort and precise handling. The Mercedes Supplemental Restraint System and ABS anti-lock brake system are standard.

THE BMW 325es. A CAR DESIGNED TO FIRE UP THE DRIVER'S INTERNAL COMBUSTION ENGINE.

To the embarrassment of some two-seater, so-called sports whirlwinds, we present the BMW 325es.

"A beautifully refined hot rod from Bavaria" (Motor Trend).

Its 6-cylinder Eta engine provides a torque-rich driving force. A BMW sports suspension endows the car with rare turn-and-corner prowess.

Delivering you from speed to safe standstill is BMW's anti-lock braking system (ABS)—as standard.

And further performance hallmarks include spoilers front and rear, low profile tires, sports seats, and an M-Technic steering wheel.

Does your automobile have unibody construction?

By Bruce King, Owner
King Collision Center Inc. of Pembroke

Do you have a unibody? Knowing if you do can be critical when your vehicle needs collision repairs.

Recent automobile sales figures indicate that most Americans have at least one unibody vehicl in their driveway. Today nearly 90 percent of all domestic and 100 percent of all imported vehicles sold in the United States are now built with what the manufacturers call "unit-body" or "unibody" constructi n.

That is, today's high tech cars are designed to eliminate the massive steel frame that was the backbone of traditionally built cars.

This new approach uses high-strength lightweight steel welded together in sections that intereact with connecting sections to give the car its overall strength.

This is done in much the same manner as the fuselage of an airplane, or the shell of an egg. This new generation of lighterweight cars is the result of worldwide demand for greater fuel economy. With the design change in construction, has come, for the collision repair industry, the challenge of more technical repair procedures, greater need for constant training, and sophisticated equipment.

These cars are built to exact specifications allowing no more than 12-one hundredth of an inch in fluctuation. To work properly your unibody car must be restored precisely to the manufacturers data. With this new design, the car is built with collapsible zones designed to give, or collapse, in the event of an accident. These zones collapse to absorb the energy of the collision to protect the safety of the passengers inside. However, the fact that so many parts are counterconnected, combined with the use of much lighter metals, "ripple" effects are created when a unibody car is damaged.

For example: A minor kink under the passenger seat could easily prevent proper alignment of your car's whole front suspension causing poor handling and tire wear. We have all heard the old wives' tale that once the frame, or in today's case, the unibody, is bent that the car will never be correct again. Nothing could be further from the truth. With properly trained technicians, and sophisticated high tech unibody bench frame equipment, these cars can be restored to manufacturers exact specifications.

Fine, but how do I choose a quality collision repair shop? Being a small consumer is the key to buying quality collision repairs. Qualify the collision repair shop. Not many shops have made the commitment to excellence in purchasing today's high tech equipment that must be used to repair your vehicle to it's pre-accident operation, safety, and value.

If the collision shop does not offer, then ask for a tour of the facility to see their equipment for unibody repairs and spray painting. Do they have an in-house paint mixing system with tinting capabilities for proper color matching? And is their facility clean and orderly? After writing your damage report (estimate) were you explained in detail the damages to your vehicle, pointing out any hidden damage that might be missed by the appraiser if not pointed out? Were you then explained the insurance claim procedure, how it works and the shop's payment policy? Does the shop offer a written guarantee on their repairs? Were you shown any completed cars ready for delivery? How did they look? Did the paint match?

Finally, after you're satisfied you have found a quality collision repair facility, ask your friends, neighbors, and auto mechanic what they know about the shop you have chosen. Your automobile represents your second largest investment and your family's well-being relies on the quality and expertise of the collision repairs.

With today's average car costing $15,000 and payment schedules up to five years, obviously quality is the key!

Jeep Cherokee momentum continues

Ask around. You'll hear the same talk just about everywhere. Jeep is continuing to design, engineer, and build innovative, exciting all-purpose 4 wheel drive vehicles, like Jeep Cherokee. Today their impact is hotter than ever.

Already famous for a string of important awards, Cherokee continues to gain momentum in '86. And it's a small wonder. For starters, Jeep Cherokee is built from the ground up with exclusive Uni-Fram Constructions and QuadraLink Suspension, making for savvy street smarts, as well as excellent off the road manners.

The innovations continue with Command Trac, the standard Jeep 4-wheel drive system. A lightweight, synchronized part-time transfer case which allows shifting beteen 2 wheel drive and 4 wheel drive operation without stopping. Selec-Trac (with automatic transmissions) is the optional 4 wheel drive "shift on the fly" system. With Selec-Trac you can "set it and forget it", because it can be operated full time on dry pavement or on low friction slippery surfaces.

Superb fuel efficiency is another Cherokee strong point. With the fuel saver package, Jeep Cherokee gives you an economical 24MPG EPA City Est MPG, and 27 EST Hwy.

Leahy honored as first recipient of King Award

Dan Leahy was proud to be the first recipient of the Forrest E. King Memorial Award. It was a humbling moment for the general manager of Kimball's By The Sea, to be honored by his professional peers in the business community.

At a special award dinner last week, Leahy was selected for the honor, as the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce member "having best demonstrated during the previous year, the highest standards of business ethics."

"It would be foolish to deny some personal edification," he said this week, reflecting on the award presentation. "It is a humbling experience to be held in esteem by your peers.

"I see last week's event as far more than an individual presentation. At the same time I acknowledged it as the growth of the Cohasset organization that has come into its bloom time."

As past president of the organization which began three years ago, Leahy has witnessed its evolution from a group of small businessmen, to an organization "that in its moderate way has helped awaken the town and made it duly concerned with the business issues of the eighties."

Not one to conceal his opinions, Leahy explained, "there is an element of the Cohasset Chamber that has generated an awareness and a mutual concern in this town. I see this award as representing a cohesiveness and maturity of a certain group of people with a legitimate statement to be made. I do not mean that our viewpoint is always right or always wrong. But it is a collective viewpoint."

It was in the fall of 1982 that Leahy talked of forming an organization with his business neighbors, including Frank Smith, Sue Straley, Fred and Sally Wood and Joseph Quinn. Several options were discussed and a decision was made to develop a Chamber of Commerce within the community.

"The key," Leahy stated, " was that we needed an organization concerned with all types of businesses in all areas of this town. We wanted a group that would envelop a large manufacturer to a one or two-man storefront operation. We wanted it to include the West Corner, 3A and the Village."

The Cohasset branch of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce now includes about 90 members. That is a good portion of the town's entire business population, Leahy noted.

Nominees for the Forrest E. King Memorial Award surround winner Daniel Leahy who is holding the award with June King, the widow of the Cohasset businessman. (L to 4) Frank Smith of Fleming's of Cohasset, stands with other award nominees Andrea Merrill of the Cohasset Consignment Shop and Sue Straley of Cards and Shards. (Carol McCann photo)

The young organization has been involved in issues which have hastened its maturation, the board of directors chairman stated. Already, the Chamber has been embroiled in debates regarding a business hours curfew and several zoning issues presented at last year's town meeting.

Leahy said despite the businessman's reputation for considering the "bottom line," the local Chamber

Mail carrier reflects on the end of 16-yr. career

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Roger Leonard won't be delivering the mail anymore.

As of March 15, the popular Beechwood postal worker's job will be terminated. A "human error," a momentary lapse in judgment has cost this mailman dearly. He may be paying for that accident in January with his livelihood.

He is not free to discuss the details of the accident which occurred on his route January 25, nor the resulting penalty.

What Leonard wanted to talk about, was the great loss he will feel for the people he has served for 14 years. Delivering mail to the Beechwood residents was only a portion of his job. What he will miss more profoundly are the flock of animals he admired and fed along his route, the children he watched grow. He knew each family in an intimate sense as through the years he delivered bills, birth announcement, letters from college, condolences in death.

A mailman, Leonard said, "is an extended part of each family he serves." This Cohasset mailman will miss his family.

Born in Cohasset, Leonard is part of a family which began four generations ago in this town. His cousin John Leonard was the first letter carrier appointed through Civil Service in Cohasset. That was in 1940.

Roger was appointed Sept. 9, 1969 and worked in North Scituate for the first six months. He was assigned a foot route in that area.

"That's where I met Danny and Betsy," he recalled with fondness. The pair were not brother and sister, but two dogs Leonard befriended along the weary route. In fact, while he was still learning the directions, a co-worker advised him, "just follow the dogs. They know the entire route."

Leonard heeded the warning which proved correct. The dogs would wait each morning for their new friend at the North Scituate office, while Leonard sorted his mail. Each morning they completed the journey with him.

In October, 1972, Leonard was appointed to the Beechwood route. For 14 years he traveled the 14 miles each day to the businesses and residences in that area of town. "It is a well-balanced route," the postal professional stated. "More than half of the homes have curbside delivery so I can deliver without leaving the truck. It's really a perfect route."

On an average day, Leonard will sort between 1000-1500 pieces of mail. There are peaks in the postal industry, but Leonard explained there are no specific times when deliveries are much heavier than average. "It depends on the family," he said. "If a child is away in college, or something like that, the mail is heavier in the winter. But you can never anticipate the mailing habits of the public."

A "maximum effort day" to borrow Leonard's terminology, would include utility bills, flyers, political

Fire Dept. proposes system to 'save lives'

The science of fire fighting has progressed greatly since the early 1700's. That was when the first water sprinkler system was patented.

Since that time, the technology of fire fighting has advanced. Sprinkler systems have become mandatory in commercial businesses.

The Cohasset Fire Department would like to use this proven system in homes. That's why Fire Chief Daniel Brock and Fire Prevention Officer Mark Trask are proposing that all new construction include residential sprinkler systems.

The proposal will be included in the warrant of the April 5 Town Meeting.

The concept is simple. With no plans to expand firefighting personnel, but an increase in new construction, the Cohasset Fire Department needs an edge in preventing property damage and loss of life. They have that edge in the businesses scattered about town.

But their main concern, according to Capt. Trask, is to save lives. Residential sprinkler systems are a proven method of preventing death in a building fire. In the United States last year, 7,000 lives were lost in fires. Of that total, 5,000 were lost in domestic fires. "Just think about how many fires there must have been to result in that number of deaths," he says.

Capt. Trask sees the sprinkler system as one component in the science of firefighting. It will fill the gap, he says, between the time a fire begins in the home, to the time the local department arrives. And in 1986, with fewer men to respond to a larger population, that is the advantage of requiring the installation of sprinkler systems, he explains. The cost of the system varies, but in the size of residences currently being constructed in Cohasset, Capt. Trask estimates the cost between $1,500 and $2,000.

Cohasset's week . . .

License hearing change

Selectmen have requested that a beer and wine license hearing for J. Bildner's be rescheduled from Feb. 25 to March 6.

The Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) had set a date of Feb. 25 to hear the appeal of Windward Management Co. Two weeks ago, selectmen denied for the second time a request by J. Bildner's to obtain a beer and wine license for their store at Cushing Plaza.

Atty. Charles Humphreys, representing the new store owners, appealed selectmen's decision to the state.

Selectmen requested the change in the hearing date. The ABCC appeal will be heard in the Boston offices of the state agency.

Housing agency resignation

Housing Authority member Marguerite Libby submitted her resignation from that board, effective Feb. 7.

Because of the resignation, there is now a four-year unexpired vacancy on the board. Residents interested in seeking nomination to that office, must submit their papers to the town clerk's office by Feb. 27.

Police sergeant exam

The state Department of Personnel Administration notified selectmen that the examination for Cohasset police sergeant will be held April 19.

Selectmen must now indicate where the examination will be held. According to state regulations, the test will be given at a site designated by selectmen from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. that day.

Edison Co. meetings

Eastern Edison Co. has extended an invitation to town officials to attend a meeting at the company's Brockton headquarters Monday, Feb. 24.

Edison representatives are planning a series of community meetings to establish communication to coordinate future storm restoration efforts.

At the meeting, Edison officials plan to present information on how the company operates during storm restorations. Community leaders have been invited to discuss the procedure, so that the town officials "will fully understand what each of us can expect of the other" during future storms and the continuation of electrical power, President Allan Hamer stated in a letter to selectmen.

In response, selectmen noted that Executive Secretary Donald Andrew and Police Chief Joseph Kealey will be unable to attend because of vacation plans.

Advisors review capital requests

New water department equipment, electronic pagers for the fire department and new police cars are among the items recommended by the Advisory Committee for capital budget.

A phone jack is all that is left of town hall requests after the committee voted to slash a microwave oven, a refrigerator, a couch, a lighting system and a renovation to the stage floor.

The $9,295 water department capital outlay includes a chlorine booster pump, a spectrophotometer and a chlorine leak detector, which the committee considered necessary safety equipment.

The committee did not recommend $10,000 for a new truck and $1,000 for engineering expenses. According to Chairman Jackie Dormitzer, the new truck requires a special article.

The committee also voted to recommend $138,004 under general expenses and $289,000 under personal expenses.

According to a committee member, the water department is trying to ihstall new meters at a cost of $50 apiece. He added that it cost $198 to repair the old meters.

$13,950 was recommended for Capital Budget for the fire department. In an attempt to upgrade response time, the department is seeking $10,000 for a communications system.

$8,000 covers 24 paging devices, one for each fireman. A tone generator, at $2,000, allows the chief to summon any or all of the 24, Fred Koed reported.

"It should also cut down on the overtime," he added.

Other fire department items include a water vac at $500 and $2,000 to replace a piece of equipment designed to cut open a car.

The $38,729 police department capital budget request includes three new cars and new body armor.

The committee put the town hall budget at $175 for a phone jack for the selectmen's meetings. $1,175 requested for a microwave and couch was cut. Because the law requires a place for employees to be able to lie down, member Besty Mallard suggested they purchase a cot.

The committee also voted against a request for a new lighting system for the auditorium and refinishing the stage.

$9,590 was recommended for the harbor budget, including $2,590 for an outboard motor, $1,500 to replace worm-eater floats and $15,500 to repair stairs.

$82.90 was approved for elections and town meetings for a file cabinet.

A request from the treasurers/collectors office for a computer calculator was reduced from $175 to $50. "I'll put Zayre's down," said Dormitzer, indicating that they could get them on sale.

$70 was approved for recommendation for a secretaries' chair for the town clerk.

The planning board request for $475 for a typewriter was also approved.

Betsy Mallard advised the committee that it was more important to invest in a good one. Dormitzer agreed to have it checked out.

The committee recommended $1,200 for the maintenance of the flagpole.

The committee decided to postpone the vote on town buildings until after the town voted on the town hall addition.

Leahy talks about his award from Cohasset Chamber members strive toward " a comfortable marriage between what is best for the community and commerce."

His argument has been stated previously that most Cohasset business people are also Cohasset residents and taxpayers. "We don't want to see flashing neon on our streets either," he explained.

"When the Chamber comes out on an issue with a public statement, it's easy for people to say we are out for profit. But they don't see that in our efforts to interpret an issue, we spend many hours in discussion, seeing how mutually satsifying this can be if looked at from a different angle," he added.

Respectful, yet not unwilling to offer criticism of town government, Leahy noted that with Prop. 2 1/2 and the stringent regulations regarding development, "the tax base is effectively shrinking and the advisory board and other town committees will be grappling for another forum of resource for this town." Leahy warned that the business community and town officials should work "toward a cohesive understanding that there can be reasonably controlled growth and change."

New businesses are attracted to this community, he explained. The sophisticated, higher than average income level of the population makes this a desirable location for the selective storefront operations. Cohasset is a natural location for stores such as the Chocolate Factory, a BMW dealership, and Bildner's, he noted.

"From the developer's viewpoint," he added, "who would like to construct a residential or office development, Cohasset carries an equal level of desire in a limited way. Our location is an asset but it is also difficult to get in and out of. We also have the reputation of being a difficult town to get established in.

"The process the town set for a business to become established is very stringent," he continued. "That's not necessarily bad, but it's an arduous procedure to become established and sometimes it appears the town is more severe than is necessary. This is probably because town officials feel it is in our best interest to be that stringent. But there are other coastal South Shore communities, and the prospective businessman may make a judgement that another community may be the best place to establish himself."

Before his association with Kimball's, Leahy was a partner and general manager at Hugo's. His years within the Cohasset business community have taught him much.

"The businesses in Cohasset are all indicators of the economy. There are facets that are thriving, and those that are not. Once you've established yourself, just because you have 02025 on the top of your letterhead, doesn't guarantee success or failure," he noted.

In his particular business experience, Leahy has had to deal with the highs and lows of the changing seasons. His business income is close to saturation in July and August, while at the other extreme is November and February. "The resolve is to bring the sides up during both those extremities to allow more retention of personnel. The major problem I face is if I am running a first class operation with the best personnel management in July and August, what do I do with those people in November and February? I have to generate income to support that quality of management," he explained.

"We have no ulterior motives," Leahy continued, "other than balancing commerce with the community."

One of the best income-producing facets of his winter business is corporate conferences. With major clients throughout the region, Kimball's is now enjoying a quality reputation throughout the corporate community. But plans for 600 new hotel rooms in Rockland will continue to cut into the profit edge Kimball's has constructed slowly through the years.

"We attract people here because we can outprice the new construction properties with their large overhead," he said. "Once they are here, we give our clients the personal service we are noted for. We may not have the glamour of the newer facilities, but we have a personal touch and that's why they are willing to take less grandiose to run a successful business conference or for an overnite stay."

The Kimball's dining room, now open to the public four nights a week in the winter and seven nights in the summer, is also attracting new clientele to the harborside facility.

As far as advertising, Leahy said the small restaurant is slowly gaining popularity through "advertising with the most credibility - word of mouth."

The hotel and restaurant employs 40 persons in the off season, and 80 throughout the summer months. The South Shore Music Circus performers are among the summer guests at Kimball's. In fact, last year Leahy employed one person to coordinate the performers' bookings at the hotel, and more celebrities than ever were accomodated at the seaside hotel.

Regarding last week's award, Leahy said he was as pleased with the 100-plus attendance at the Chamber's dinner, as he was being named the first recipient of the Forrest King Award.

"That kind of response," he noted, "is a statement of clarity. As with any small type of organization, there may not necessarily be constant agreement on anything, but this is an on-going thriving group of people with a fairly good focus on the ambition of the Chamber.

"We have no ulterior motives," Leahy continued, "other than balancing commerce with the community. A large majority of the Chamber members are residents of this town. So we have a dual interest. We are concerned with traffic flow, the water supply and what Cohasset looks like. We are as concerned with the issues of the town as anybody, but it doesn't mean my opinions as a businessman are wrong."

Leahy has never disguised his opinions whether speaking to the Board of Selectmen or Town Meeting. When asked if his future includes elected office, Leahy said the thought has been considered, but momentarily discarded.

"I can't now. With two small children and a business that occupies 80 to 90 hours a week, it requires a fragile balancing of my time. The key to a good statesman is honest committment. And I don't have the time that would require," he said.

Award winners in Art Center photo show

Tessa Frootko Gordon of Newton won the award for the best color photograph in the South Shore Art Center All New England Juried Photography Show, Images.

The awards were announced at the opeining on Feb. 7 and the show will continue through Feb. 21 at the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Gordon also won a special award given by the Hanover Arts Lottery Council. Her winning photograph is titled "Nina."

L.E. Woodburn of Middleboro won a special award for her piece "Crushing Wisteria," given by the Brockton Arts Lottery Council and an honorable mention for her piece "Iris."

The best black and white award went to Amy Whorf of Hingham for her photograph "A Face from the Past." The Weymouth Arts Lottery Council award went to Steven E. Nelson of Milton for his piece, "Mary Hart's Kitchen, Margaree, Cape Breton." The Plymouth Arts Lottery Council award went to John Woolf of Cambridge for his piece "Samuel Appleton Bldg."

Honorable mention in black and white went to Rick Johnson of Duxbury for his untitled photograph and to Amy Whorf for her piece. "Brig O Doon."

MAXIMIZING THE APPEAL OF YOUR STORAGE SPACE

Most people never feel like they have enough closets no matter how much storage they have. This is one reason why our buyers place ample storage space fairly high on their new home wish lists.

One of the minor indignities our sellers face is having prospective buyers open up all the closets, not to snoop, but to see how big each one is. Even if a closet is enormous, they won't be especially impressed if, upon opening a door, a wall of laundry, old shoes and other junk comes tumbling around their feet. Because closets are so important to our customers, it's important to have them as uncluttered and well-organized as possible while your property is on the market. If you have too many items for your closets to hold, consider having a yard sale, or you could make a trip to the Salvation Army's nearest thrift shop with your tax-deductible contribution.

When you finish with your closets, attack any junk or messes in the basement or attic. Whatever amount of storage space you have, it will look much more attractive if you clean it out.

Sprinklers in new homes proposed. . .

"The town of Cohasset is restrained by Prop. 2 1/2 and policy. There won't be an increase in the size of the fire department," he says. "The position of the fire department is, though the town won't increase the department, the town will continue to develop - one house here, a commercial building there. For every building added to this town, fire protection needs are added to the town."

A sprinkler system installed in a building, has been proven for more than 200 years to be a substantial aide in fighting fires and saving lives, Capt. Trask states. "Because the sprinkler head is right at the scene of the fire, you can easily see it is more efficient than a fire fighter coming into a totally engulfed building."

He adds, "sprinkler systems are not in themselves a save-all and end-all. But in coordination with other building components, such as fire walls, fire doors, exits, smoke detectors and alarm systems, it is a viable component in fire protection.

"We don't hold to the theory that a sprinkler system replaces the firefighter. In any situation, there may be sprinkler failures. But we can use the residential system to cover the growing gap between the level of service provided by this department in 1976 and the level of service provided in 1986," he states.

The modern sprinkler system, he says, is equivalent to a firefighter on the scene of aconflagration. Using it as an analogy to a firefighter, Capt. Trask notes, "It sits atop the ceiling 24 hours a day with water pressure and a fixed nozzle prepared in the event of a fire. It never leaves its post if a fire occurs. The sprinkler head is unaffected by heat while it supplies water to the source of the heat. They are not subject to smoke inhalation, or the toxic gases from a fire. They are not limited to 30 minutes of firefighting time (the number of minutes supplied in a firefighter's oxygen container). This 'guy' sits on the ceiling and constantly sprays the fire until it is extinguished."

The sprinkler was first introduced in the early 1700's. It was a primitive, non automatic system used in businesses as commercial enterprises blossomed. New England was a natural site for the systems as large, multi-storied textile mills dotted the region. The system included a perforated pipe along the system which had to be manually operated.

The first system devised in the 1700's included a tank of water attached to the ceiling, with a fuse attached to a stick of dynamite. When the fuse burnt, the container of water exploded onto the source of the fire.

The systems gradually evolved into more sophisticated methods of fire fighting. In the late 1800's, the automatic sprinkler head was devised in New Haven, Conn. A demonstration of an early version of the automatic sprinkler head shows a heat-sensitive device. A lock on the head melts as it is heated by a fire. Once the lock is disintegrated, the valve on the sprinkler head is opened and the pressurized water in the pipe is released through the head.

The sprinklers were considered an essential portion of the community's fire apparatus as men, and later horses pulled the steam engines to a burning building. While the wild scene of men pumping the steam engine would be occurring outside the building, the sprinklers would be fighting the blaze at its source.

As the steam engines gave way to motorized equipment, the science of the sprinkler system advanced, Capt. Trask explains. "The system was later refined to run through a building from a main pipe in the street. A valve is alerted to open the pressurized water in a fire. The system of pipes which runs through the building is filled with water which is released when that valve is opened. In businesses, one sprinkler head is required for every 144 square feet."

Businesses have long been ordered to install water sprinkler systems within the buildings. This procedure was mandated for insurance purposes, Trask explains, to prevent the loss of expensive office equipment and structures.

There is a different reason for pushing to mandate residential systems in new homes. "We want to save lives," Capt. Trask says.

The fire department officials realize there will be some resistance to their proposal. "It's new and

Senior Center open house 'a great success'

Judging from the crowd of cars parked along North Main Street last week, and from the number of people mingling inside the Community Center, it was evident that last week's Senior Center Open House was well-received.

"It was a great success," according to Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton. More people than expected participated in the five-day program designed to introduce the center and its activities to the community.

From the programs' reception last week, Bryanton has a greater understanding of what the senior citizens of Cohasset want from their center.
New classes will be starting as a result of attendance, comments and opinions expressed last week.

Although Tuesday's snowstorm forced the cancellation of that day's activities, the remaining days were filled with lessons, demonstrations, luncheons and lectures.

Because of the cancellation of Tuesday's luncheon, the Senior Center has scheduled another event for Tuesday, Feb. 25. Beginning with piano show tunes by Charlie Watson at 11 .a.m., luncheon will follow at noon at the First Parish Meeting House. Reservations must be made first by calling the Senior Center at 383-9112.

Last Monday, everyone brought their lunch to the Center at 3 North Main Street. Dot Zarba, a nutritionist formerly with Angelo's Supermarkets, talked about nutrition for the elderly. She explained how senior citizens must continue to eat well. She gave them shopping tips for purchasing the best foods on a limited income.

"She's very concerned with the senior citizens," Bryanton said. "She spent time telling them how to purchase items in smaller quantities and explaining that it's easy to ask that packages of meat be broken into smaller portions. Dot's a sensitive person and the seniors really relate to her."

The director noted that in addition to Tuesday's piano presentation, Brenda O'Leary from Medical East, a Blue Cross/Blue Shield HMO, will talk to the group. Bryanton had received inquiries regarding health maintenance organizations, and O'Leary will be available to answer any of those concerns.

Last Wednesday morning, there was bowling downstairs at the Community Center. As one man explained to the director as he exited from the alleys, "I'm definitely coming back." According to Bryanton, it was the gentleman's first attempt at bowling with senior center members. He enjoyed the warm reception he received from the "regulars."

"I think that's so nice. Often when you retire, you're concerned about joining new groups and new programs. You're the newcomer and that's a bit strange. But he really enjoyed the group and they welcomed him," she said.

After bowling, luncheon was provided and served by members of the Cohasset Council on Aging and the Social Service League. Volunteer Karin Bartow supervised the luncheon. "It was so pretty," Bryanton said, adding, "The seniors really appreciated that."

A popular event last week was held during the luncheon when members of the Cohasset High School Cabaret performed for the diners. Bryan Marks directed the students in a half-hour presentation of song.

"That, to me, was the highlight of the week," Bryanton stated. "The students were so enthusiastic- what a handsome group. The children from the nursery school here were brought into the room. It was wonderful. Mr. Marks is fantastic and the high school deserves a lot of credit for their enthusiasm and willingness to do this sort of program for the community. It was obvious to me the students have great respect and enjoy working with Mr. Marks. Sometimes teens have trouble relating with seniors, but this was not the case. They mingled and conversed. They were very relaxed."

The director added, "I think that will be the program that stands out in their mind from last week."

At the same time, there was a demonstration and instructional class on Oriental rug making with Virginia Harvey. The daughter of Senior Center volunteer Alba Crossen, Harvey took time to show how her artwork can be created at home by anyone who's interested.

In fact, the demonstration proved so popular, the center will begin a class on Oriental rug making. Anyone interested in learning this beautiful and simple craft, should contact Bryanton at the center.

"Virgina holds classes in Hingham with men and women. So men will be very welcome here," Bryanton stated. "It's very relaxing, and it's really beautiful. It's something you learn to do here, and can take home and work on at night. And all the

The Cohasset Council on Aging was presented last week with a $2,042 formula check from the state Department of Elder Affairs. Joining in the presentation were (l to r) Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton, Council on Aging member Mary Donovan, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Council on Aging Housing Rep. Helen Barbery, Chet Jakubinak of the Dept. of Elder Affairs and Senior Center volunteer Karin Bartow. Holding the check is Dorothea Bjorkgren, secretary of the Council on Aging. (Carol McCann photo)

Anderson to leave CHS post for Babson College

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

Cohasset High School teachers and students wre surprised to hear one of its most important assets, Jon Anderson, will be leaving both his teaching and coaching positions to become the head soccer coach at Babson College next fall.

Anderson, a math teacher, was probably best known for his success as varsity boys' soccer coach, but also coached JV girls' basketball and boys' track.

As the soccer coach, Anderson was responsible for turning around the program and making a barely .500 club into South Shore League champions. Anderson led his team to the State Tournament two years in a row, a feat which caught the eye of Babson.

However, Anderson's ties with Babson go back further than this. After attending Penn. State for a year (1971-'72), he spent the next three and one-half years at Babson and graduated in December, 1975.

In these years, Anderson made a great contribution to the soccer team on which he started at midfield. His efforts were rewarded this senior year when Babson not only won the National Championship, but they had the best record the school has ever recorded, 17-1.

When asked if he ever thought he might return to Babson after leaving in '75, Anderson said, "The thought had entered my mind, but when I decided to teach, it didn't seem possible. I didn't want to be an assistant coach at a college, and I was content with high school. but I suppose the thought was in the back of my mind."

In order to put together a winning club, Anderson must work all year to build his program. Not only does his team play a rigorous 16-game schedule starting in September and ending in November, but they also have three or four indoor soccer tournaments during the winter, and outdoor spring season, and begin practicing for the regular season in August.

Furthermore, Anderson will probably be asked to coach some other sport during the off season and assume some administrative duties as well.

Babson has no football team, and thus, soccer is the biggest fall spectator sport. In fact, when Babson is playing a rival, crowds of 3,000 people are usually anticipated. Because of this tremendous support of and interest in soccer, the team is extremely strong and has won the NCA tournament nine of the last 11 years. Last year, Babson was the second-seeded team in New England. Thus, Anderson is both excited and nervous about his new task, while he hopes to continue Babson's winning tradition.

When asked how different his coaching responsibilities would be on the college level, Anderson explained that unlike high school, where soccer players usually play two other sports, in college, Anderson will have players that only play soccer.

His players will be "very highly motivated and are going to take care of themselves, which leaves me time to deal with tactics and put my emphasis on skill work."

Anderson also said that unlike high school, recruiting will be one of his major responsibilities. Anderson said that most of Babson's players come from Massachusetts, and since he is most familiar with the South Shore, he will base much of his recruiting efforts in this area.

Anderson also said the game of soccer itself changes as one advances. College soccer is a much faster and a more skilled game than in high school. He also pointed out that the competition greatly improves as well. There will no longer by any "pushovers" as he put it. Most of the games are very competitive and are decided by only one or two goals. Anderson finally said that many team members, especially freshmen, find it hard to adjust their schedules to keep up with the rigorous soccer and tough academic schedules.

Coach Anderson must keep an eye out for any of these sort of problems. But, he also pointed out that most of the boys are highly motivated in both academics and soccer, and a problem rarely exists.

Anderson's major concern about his leaving is how his departure will affect Cohasset's soccer program. He feels, "When things change a lot, it hurts the program. Hopefully, someone will take over and keep the continuity."

Anderson believes that the strong parental support of boys' soccer will keep the program strong. Anderson also hopes that the publicity of his leaving will alert some good candidates that the job opening is available.

After talking to some of his high school players, Anderson received some mixed feelings. Obviously, the boys were very pleased for their coach and were thrilled to see him move on, but they also expressed concern for the future of the team.

Anderson will be sad to leave Cohasset High School and will miss both coaching and teaching the kids here.

However, he still intends to coach track this spring, and is planning to come and watch his team and other Cohasset teams play next year.

When asked what was the strongest lesson he learned in Cohasset, Anderson said that he learned how to motivate his team so that they not only played well, and played like a team, but most importantly, that they also enjoyed themselves as well.

Anderson hopes to continue living in Scituate with his wife and two boys and stay in close contact with his students and players at Cohasset High School.

Anderson will be greatly missed at the high school, and all his roles will be hard to fill. But we all wish him luck at Babson and hope his success continues.

Boy Scout Troop 28 news . . .

Eight scouts and three adults had an excellent day of skiing at Pat's Peak in Henniken, NH. The skiing conditions were superb. The learning beginners were skiiing down the higher hills by the end of the day.

The scouts were invited to be guests of the First Parish Church in Beechwood this past Sunday. The scouts observed "Scouting Sunday" in February.

E. Gardner Jones from the First Parish was very familiar with Scouting and reminisced about some of his Scouting experiences in Cohasset. He welcomed the scouts to the church and the observation of their service.

A window display of some of the Scout Jamboree and other activities is in the window of Cohasset's Pilgrim Bank.

Cohasset Cub Scouts Pack 38

The Cub Scouts are anxiously preparing for their upcoming Blue and Gold Dinner. The scouts and their parents are invited to attend an evening of recognition for the scouts' achievements and entertainment. The Blue and Gold Dinner will be held Sunday, March 2, at the Unitarian Parish House on North Main St., Cohasset, from 6 to 8 p.m.

The Pinewood Derby Race will be held March 26 at the Osgood School from 7 to 8 p.m. All cars should be built and weighed to be sure they qualify for the race. Adjustments can be made prior to the race.

Tiger Cubs

The Tiger Cubs should be working on their Pinewood Derby cars, too. They will race about one hour before the Cub Scouts, from 6 to 7 p.m. March 26.

different," Trask admits. "But it's a fact that every new fire protection law has been passed as a result of a disastrous event. If the town chooses not to approve this, what will it mean to each property owner? Over the course of time as the town continues to develop, that margin of safety provided by the fire department will become less. That's a general statement with no quantitative figure to back it. But it's only common sense that if we once had one firefighter per house, as we have developed, that ratio is now one firefighter per ten houses. That much margin of safety is being taken away from the protection of the entire community."

The officer realizes that many oppose an abundance of laws and regulations passed onto the individual. "But the point I am making is that as the town grows, there is going to be more emergency activity. The fire department also responds to accidents and medical emergencies. To keep the level of fire risk down, we have to be more available for other calls. We are talking about the ability of the fire department to provide its level of service," he argues.

In all honesty, Capt. Trask notes, a mandatory sprinkler system in new residences will probably become state law within the next 20 years. "Only three municipalities in the country now mandate this, but I think it will inevitably become law in all cities and towns," he adds.

☐ Brian Ormiston, Leah Burbank, Gail Fasciano, Laura Doherty and Peter Kasperowicz have all entered art work in the Young Artist Drawing Competition at the Portland School of Art in Portland, Maine. We are all waiting to hear if they are winners up there, we know they are down here.

☐ Hats off to Michael Brown, who will be performing with the Spirit of Liberty concert band. Mike will be part of the group that performs at the newly restored Statute of Liberty in New York City and then will travel with the band on a five country tour of Europe! He will even take part in a concert on Bastille Day in Paris, an honor indeed. Mike was selected by audition, and should be very proud of himself. I'll bet he is all set to travel with the snare drum right now . . .

☐ Have you seen Dudley Bryan's rendition of the Skipper, the new High School logo? Look for it on the tee-shirts that will be worn for the volleyball championships.

☐ It was recently announced that Dr. James F. Marten has become the chief executive officer of MedChem Products, Inc., a Massachusetts corporation principally engaged in the development, manufacturing and distribution of products that contain hyaluronic acid, used in eye surgery and for other medical and veterinary applications.

☐ Michael K. Keller and David H. Sargent of Cohasset have been selected for the Dean's List at Massachusetts Maritime Academy as the result of their academic achievements during the fall semester of 1985.

☐Jon Anderson of Scituate, CHS soccer coach, has been named head soccer coach at Babson College.

Anderson, 32, takes over at Babson following the resignation of seven year coach Bill Rogers last August.

Anderson was a three year player at Babson and graduated in 1975. His team was 17-0-1 in '75 and captured Babson's first national championship in Division III. He has head coached at Weymouth South High four years (1977-80) and Cohasset High five years (1981-85). He started the soccer programs at both schools and had Cohasset in the Division II state tournament the past two seasons.

Now what's a snow-shoveler supposed to do with only one mitten on? Peter Whoriskey is only momentarily bewildered in his efforts to shovel his way to college tuition payments.

☐Kathleen M. Bowen, an Interior Design major at the Braintree campus, was recently named to the Dean's List at Newbury College.

To earn this distinction, students must have achieved a grade point average of at least 3.3.

☐Valerie Lipsett and Max Maire of 85 Elm Street have been named editors of the New England Farm Bulletin. The Bulletin, which was established in 1976, is the largest garden/farm newsletter in New England, with a readership of over 30,000. The Bulletin will be edited and published out of Cohasset and will feature gardening advice based on South Shore conditions.

Mr. Maire's gardening articles and poetry have appeared in The Mariner and he was the subject of a Mariner profile last year.

In addition to editing and publishing, Ms. Lipsett and Mr. Maire also operate The Tinkers, a popular fix-it shop in town.

☐Donald J. MacKinnon of Billerica has been named to the Ohio Wesleyan University Dean's List for the fall semester, 1985.

MacKinnon is a senior economics management major at Ohio Wesleyan. He is a graduate of Cohasset High School, and is the son of William J. MacKinnon.

☐Last week marked the end of the Winter Sports, congratulations to all of the teams on their fine records. There are three that we will be continuing to watch, the boys and girls varsity basketball teams and the wrestlers. Liam Stanford, Glen Froio and Doug Bennett all have made it to the States, having qualified last weekend at Bridgewater-Raynham! These three boys will go to Wayland next week, where they are sure to do a superb job (two of them were flu-ridden when they won last week). Good luck to you all.

☐This is the week for travelling, a lot of the students are out of town. Several went to visit siblings at colleges, as did Holly Pompeo. Holly went to UNH to visit Laura, and got a bonus as it is Winter Carnival there, and she got to see the ice sculptures. Everyone had a super time, we should hear more news on the various trips next time.

☐It was also nice to see Brian Edwards on Channel 5 last week, "doing his thing" in basketball. He certainly will be number 1 choice when he graduates, watch out for him!!

☐Reserve the end of the month for the Dramatic Club's performance of "The Hollow", it promises to be a super one. Details will follow at the time.

☐Congratulations are in order for more CHS students, talented ones! Michelle Meagher, Celia Mullen, Melissa Nothnagle, Carine Montiaux, Amanda Sweeney, John Kornet and John Pereira in chorus, and John Scott-in the band all were accepted to participate in this year's Sr. High Southeastern Mass. School Bandmasters' Association Musical Festival. They auditioned for their parts, and were selected out of 25 South Shore Communities.

☐Great to see the list of candidates for public office get larger each week. It shows that there is indeed a lot of interest in our town, and each one that is running is to be applauded!

Precious resource

We've heard it repeatedly. Children are our most precious resource. We're not sure what we were called as youngsters, but that's a hefty title to place upon anyone.

The public school system in Cohasset is an integral part of this community. Parents are as involved as the teachers. They demand a quality system. They want to see their children challenged, nurtured and stimulated.

There is a portion of our population who do not have children in the school system. Either they have decided to place their youngsters in private schools, their children have graduated from the system, or they do not have offspring.

Whether or not they have children in Cohasset schools, every taxpayer in this town supports the system through almost fifty percent of their municipal taxes. When you pay that much for a service, you should be keenly interested in where the money is spent.

School budget sessions are not the most inspiring moments ever held in the history of municipal meetings. However, they do provide a clear perspective of how our tax dollars are invested. Input from the public is welcome, but is rare.

Unless someone has a vested interest in a particular area of education, there is likely to be no citizens' debate on school budget proposals. That is true not only in Cohasset, but in all communities. In fact, there are probably more people interested and enlightened about public education in Cohasset than in many communities.

While the Mariner attempts to provide coverage of all school committee meetings, we know there are times we do not have adequate staff for that purpose.

In addition to covering the meetings of the school committee, we also like to focus on the individual classroom activities. This may not be everyone's cup of tea, but many readers enjoy seeing what our students are doing within the school buildings. We are all helping to pay for new school roofs. It might be interesting to know what's happening underneath those expended tax dollars.

For the past few weeks, we have provided limited space to highlight the writings of our sixth grade students. We have had a lot of fun publishing these weekly essays. Everyone enjoyed these delightful stories - from the editor who looked forward each week to perusing them, to the typesetter who printed them into the computer, to the proofreader who double-checked them, to the production worker who read them while laying out the copy.

The imagination of these young students is almost incomprehensible. Perhaps the medium of television has hampered their consumption of literature, but it has failed to weaken their imaginations. Such fine examples of writing skills demonstrate that the younger generation is still capable of perfecting the written statement.

So that's where our tax dollars are spent. These children have been writing each week, magnificent, funny, inspirational, emotional, thought-provoking messages for all of us.

We can't think of a better way to allocate our hard-earned money than investing it in the literacy of our future - our most precious resource.

NEWS ITEM — South Shore homeowners who heat with oil are enjoying substantial savings this winter resulting from world-wide oil price decline. No tumble in gasoline and electric costs expected in near future. The mild winter has helped. High cost slows domestic oil exploration. 'The world has a surplus, the U.S. has a shortage,' says oil spokesman

"...So now there's an oil glut...stop griping, it'll all keep until the next oil shortage...!"

Beechwood residents back their mailman

To the Editor:

We support the effort of Roger E. Leonard, our Cohasset letter carrier, in his struggle to return to his employment with the United States Postal Service. Roger has been loyal to his employer, consistent in his duties and courteous to his customers.

We also attest to his longevity of service, stability of work history and good moral fiber.

As the result of an accident on January 25, our letter carrier, Roger E. Leonard, was terminated from his job. After 17 years of excellent dependable service, it seems his parked postal jeep rolled away and hit a car.

This reprimand, in our opinion as customers, deprives us of the excellent service we have enjoyed for many years. We are not all infallible, an error was made, but not something to ruin a man's life by taking away his livelihood!

We, as customers, feel deprived of more than just an excellent letter carrier. This man has become a part of all our daily lives, a valued friend who is missed by both adults and children. Is this the way to end a 17-year career?

Arts Boosters want instrumental music

(This letter was sent to Supt. Eugene Crowell from the Cohasset Arts Boosters. —Ed.)

To the Editor:

The Arts Boosters Club is a group of parents who are interested in seeing the arts supported more vigorously in our schools. Formed last fall, the Club's purpose is to coordinate parent volunteers for school arts activities and events, to muster larger audiences for plays, concerts and festivals, to assist with publicity and more important, to act as advocates for the arts.

We found a distressing absence of appreciation for the performing groups and other arts activities within the community. With no arts department head, with no coordinated, sequential, system-wide curriculum, with no specific instructional goals in some areas, and a "numbers" approach by administrators rather than a dedication to these subjects as important and meaningful components of students' education, parents felt the time had come to do something more organized and sustaining for the arts.

Two years ago the school committee adopted an Arts Policy that commits a fair share of resources to the arts and states its belief in the importance of the arts as a component in a quality education. The PSO, and before it the Communications Councils, have worked for many years to bring arts specialists and performers into the schools to stimulate and motivate students in these areas.

Almost a decade ago the Massachusetts Board of Education expounded its case for the need for comprehensive arts in education programs. The problem, they said, is that "many students and the general public hold a stereotyped view of the arts as frills or minor subjects. In many instances the myth prevails that expenditures for the arts are a waste of funds because these disciplines do not provide young people with useful knowledge and marketable skills." The Board's rationale for a renewed commitment to the arts is, "new directions to motivate learning, to heighten students' perceptions, to broaden their study of our cultural heritage, to sharpen critical judgments, to present opportunities for expression in different forms, to achieve understanding of self and others, to experience the joy of discovery, and to improve the quality of life at all age levels . . . the arts can make a difference in children's attitudes toward learning and toward people who differ from them in such characteristics as race, religion, ethnic origin and physical capabilities."

In spite of all these efforts, and a climate of clearer awareness of the value of the arts in education, one component of Cohasset's program—instrumental music—is again in jeopardy.

It confounds us that instead of an easily defensible position of support for instrumental music—for the whole music program—and recommendations for solving some of the external problems that are effecting the program, you appear to have opted for a less courageous course of reducing the program. While we recognize that we all exist in a society that reveres less the cellist than the quarterback, we need bold and decisive leadership in our educational institutions to produce young men and women who will emerge with a better understanding and appreciation of our culture and the arts.

We implore you to not only reinstate the instrumental music position, but to commit yourself and our schools to substantive support in these areas of instruction. And further, in your long-term planning for educating fewer students at the secondary level, to explore creative solutions to the problems of scheduling, image, exploratory exposure versus skilled training, and to new and more arts courses.

Please do not view our plea as one from a "special interest group." That term suggests parents with a narrow sense of concern for only one area of the curriculum. Within the area of the arts, our concern is for the total school population, for if students are not participating instrumentalists or actors or muralists, they should be participating members of an audience. The artists who take music or art classes should have the respect of their peers, and in that area, much education is needed and it cannot be provided without a solid, well-supported arts department.

And finally, while we may wear the hats of "Arts Boosters" and are advocates for instrumental music, that does not make us any less parents with a dedication for all aspects of education.

What's the problem with these two? You'll have to the see "The Hollow" presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Society Feb. 28, March 1 and 2 at the Town Hall to find the answer. Actors David Bennett and Joan Scorgie portray the obviously-distressed pair.

Resident clarifies reasons for assessment proposal

Letters

To the Editor:

Regarding your February 13 article "Resident proposes Curriculum Consultant," I would like to make it clear why parents are proposing a needs assessment by an independent consulting firm.

1. To conduct a managerial, operational and educational needs assessment to provide information to assist the school committee and administrators to better plan for maintaining quality education in our schools system.

2. If present available funds for the schools are insufficient to preserve quality education, then a detailed needs assessment will be required to provide the townspeople with information supporting requests for more funds.

At the February 10 meeting of the school committee I asked: "What if we ever have to ask for part of the school budget to be exempt from Prop. 2½?" I never said the school committee budget should be exempt from 2½. However, the proposed study by an outside company could document the rationale for such a step.

Neither the school administrators nor school committee members have the time or the expertise to do such a comprehensive study. It would require someone's full-time attention to be done well. While it would be a one time cost of $20,000—plus, considering the fact that the school budget is over 50 percent of the town's budget and fast approaching the $5 million mark, the relative cost is small.

A needs assessment would help eliminate the yearly panic by students, parents, faculty and the school committee regarding what courses need to be cut to meet budget guidelines. We are presently going through such a discussion with a music position; it is not the first time. We hear from the school board that they have not yet been able to look at what changes may have to be made in the language department in the future. Enrollment has been declining for many years, but there are no plans for the future to maintain the programs that we all want for a quality educational system.

In three out of the past four years the schools have asked town meeting voters for extra money because they cannot function within their budget allotments. This has been done on a yearly basis because there are no long range plans. This "bandaid" approach is not professional, nor is it economical. The proposed study would assist in identifying areas where we need more funding, and it could perhaps find some areas where we may be able to restructure for cutbacks or transfers.

Mr. Hart's statement that it should not be difficult convincing the people of Cohasset that the budget requests should be funded may be true, but voters need and will demand a more comprehensive rationale and evidence of coordinated longterm planning to do so in the future.

Often the superintendent's proposed budget has been presented to voters at town meeting following a last minute school committee vote. This is not fair or responsible. Other town departments prepare their budgets, discuss them with the advisory committee and their constituents, vote on them and present them to the public well before town meeting.

The school committee would serve the townspeople better if it reconsidered the benefits of a comprehensive needs assessment for our schools.

Pay attention to the fruits of folly

To the Editor:

Several supporters of the Ward Plan disaster, when backed into a corner by a few facts that they can't dispute, have countered snarlingly "What right have you to be involved in Cohasset's Sewer Problems?" Well, I have paid my Federal and State income taxes and Cohasset property taxes in full and on time for 26 years, never been caught littering or mowing the lawn early Sunday morning, have provided time and money to some charitable causes, and attempts to overthrow the government have been limited to financial contributions to the Republican Party, especially during the Carter regime. And I have analyzed the sewer situation. There are many other experienced engineering executives in town that are equally capable of doing it, but there is no sign that anyone has, or is willing to speak out.

The Sewer Commission will have three articles in the next warrant, at least two of them need be questioned closely. If the past is a criterion, neither the Selectmen nor the Advisory Committee will do so—they will blindly support the articles. I may not question the articles at town meeting—all it takes is one proponent of limited free speech to shut me up (there were about 15 of these devotees of electoral purity at last town meeting). At the two town meetings I have observed (neither from a seat in the middle of the auditorium), the townspeople zinged in all sorts of questions on the easily understandable articles, but the questioning of the sewer articles was weak, not well-informed and seemingly half-hearted. The sewer issue is like a highway accident—people will slow down for a look but don't want to stay around and get involved. Well, the mistake in waving off a virtual gift of a sewage treatment plant (90 percent funded) and ending up with an inadequate (and unfunded) share in the Hull Plant (and a piece of its annual operating cost) is probably the most costly mistake in the town's history. The sewered area is the same but delay has increased costs. The proposal to reduce the sewered area from that voted a year ago because the funding delusions finally have been admitted makes no sense. The reasons for selecting the size of the sewered area last year remain valid.

It's high time some good citizens begin to pay attention. The "prevent growth" ideology, the juvenility of "denying profits to companies that just want to build plants", the masking of Cohasset's own capriciousness by charging that the Federal and State Government Agencies are "thwarting the will of Congress and subverting the Clean Water Act" have diverted attention from the financial fruits of our folly.

The golden opportunity has been lost, and there is no very good way out now. But some objective attention by the citizenry might minimize the damage.

Thanks to Kimball's

To the Editor:

Last week Dan Leahy won the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Forrest E. King Award, and another award, which might go unnoticed by the larger community if it were not mentioned here.

The Cohasset High School Music Department performed their Valentine Cabaret program at Kimball's By-the-Sea before an audience of 90. All of us paid a minimum reservation fee, for which we expected to receive some peanuts and a few crackers and cheese.

To our surprise, we were offered a mid-evening supper, comprised of delicacies fit for Tina Turner, Bob Hope, Liberace.

In addition, thanks to CHS Choral Director and Instrumental Music Director Steve Shirosky for a wonderful program. Several times the audience had to pinch itself to be reminded it was still in Cohasset—and not in Las Vegas or Reno paying a $200 cover charge to see the performers of stage and screen.

No. This was still Cohasset. We were being treated to Kimball's know-how, acoustics and planning . . . all of which showed off our students' talents like priceless jewels.

The generosity of Kimballs, the Roy family and Dan Leahy and his staff has not gone unnoticed by the arts community.

Cohasset sports news. . .

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

Two weeks ago, Cohasset crushed Middleboro 59-36. Coach Bill Fallon said his team did not have much trouble beating this much weaker team. Maureen O'Leary was Cohasset's high scorer with 13 points, followed by Anne O'Leary who has 12. Melissa Shea and Sarah Dickerman both picked up nine points each. Anne had a great game pulling down 12 rebounds. Melissa also had a strong game according to Fallon.

Friday, the girls lost to a tough Sandwich team, 49-37. Cohasset was leading with one minute to go in the first half, but were held to one field goal in the third quarter, which sealed their fate. Fallon felt his team played poor offensively, but was pleased with the efforts of Cindy Spooner, who had 13 points and 11 rebounds.

Monday, the Skippers pulled out a win over East Bridgewater, 56-43. Cohasset was down at the half but came back in the third quarter to outscore East Bridgewater 15-2. Maureen O'Leary had a good game offensively with 14 points. Margie Murphy also played well pumping in 13 points.

Wednesday, the girls blew past Hull, 59-22. Cohasset was up by four points at the half, but outscored Hull by an incredible margin of 41-8 in the second half to clinch the victory.

Fallon thought the entire team played well, especially Anne O'Leary, who had 10 points and Maureen O'Leary, who had 18.

Cohasset had three girls named to the All Star team: Anne O'Leary, Maureen O'Leary, and Cindy Spooner. These girls played in a game last Friday with the best players in the league.

Fallon predicts his team should be ranked either seventh or eighth in the state in division three. This would mean Cohasset should open the tournament on Wednesday with a team from the Mayflower League.

Fallon says he is going to take one game at a time, but feels if his team plays well they have a shot at the South Championship.

WRESTLING

The boys concluded their season with a respectable 7-10 record. Coach Torin Sweeney was very pleased with the season and especially with the leadership of tri-captains John Riley, Brian Leary, and Liam Stanford.

Sweeney is looking forward to continuing the season into the spring and summer and has set up some tournaments in order to keep his wrestlers in shape. Next year, Sweeney is hoping to improve on this year's record and feels Cohasset will be strong if it can fill some of the lower weight classes left vacant by graduating seniors.

Overall, Liam Stanford finished with the team's best record, 14-2. Glen Froio (11-2-2), John Riley (10-5), John Froio (7-14), Brian Leary (9-5), and Randy Reid (12-4) all had winning records and great seasons as well. Sweeney pointed out that Randy Reid is only an eighth grader and had a remarkable season with 12 wins, 10 of which were pins. Sweeney also cited Peter Buckley, Greg Baker, Pat O'Conner, Mat Devany, and Omhar Brown, as having good seasons and Sweeney will be looking toward these boys to make even greater contributions next year.

In the South Sectional Tournament on Friday and Saturday, Cohasset had its best showing since 1981. In this competition of 16 teams from this area, Doug Bennet, Glen Froio, and Liam Stanford all placed fourth overall and thus, qualified themselves for the State Tournament to be held this upcoming Friday and Saturday in Wayland.

Sweeney was very proud of the boys and with Randy Reid who made it to the second day of competition.

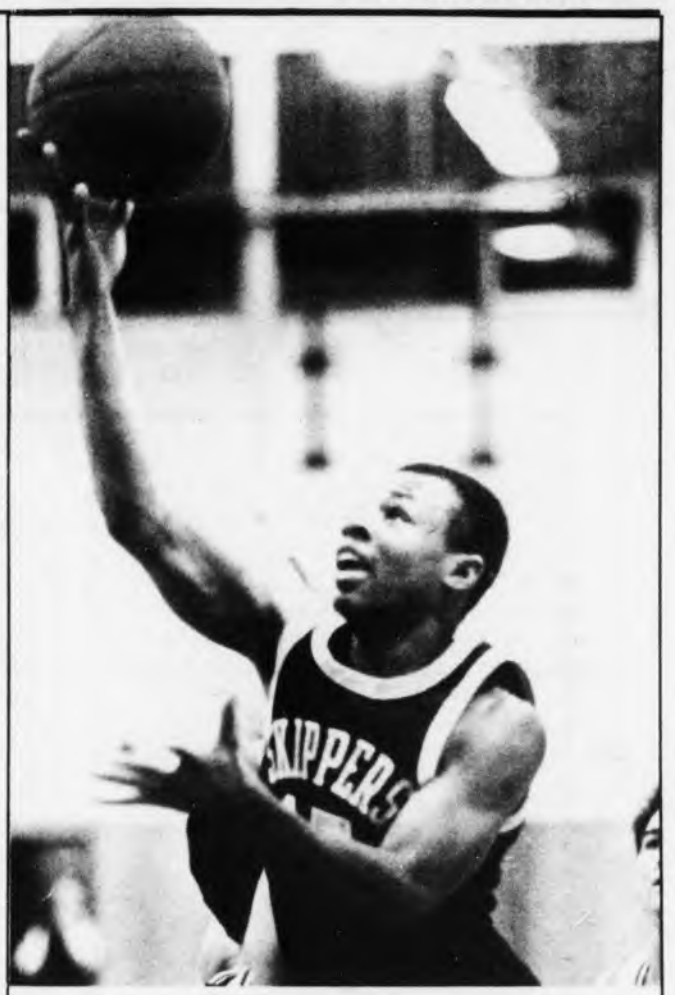
BOYS' BASKETBALL

Monday, the boys demolished East Bridgewater, 97-56. Coach Ed Minelli felt Cohasset played very well against a team which had previously given his team some trouble the first time around.

Bryan Edwards was Cohasset's top scorer with 30 points, while Mike Smith had a career high of 16 and James Creed 14. According to Minelli, David Shumaker had a strong game with six assists and Bob Shultz played well defensively with six steals.

Wednesday, the boys finished the regular season by crushing Hull 85-48. Bryan Edwards led all scorers with 24 points followed by Tony Bogartie who had 20. In this game, Bryan, who is only a sophomore, scored his thousandth career point and has a shot at becoming Cohasset's all-time leading scorer if he continues to play the way he has been this year.

This victory made Cohasset undefeated in the league for the second year in a row. This win was also Cohasset's 39th straight victory in the league. The Skippers also clinched its third straight South Shore League championship, a feat which has never been achieved by any other team in this area.



Bryan Edwards reaches for control of the ball in last week's game against Hull.

This vacation week Minelli has set up some tough scrimmages against Swampscott and Cambridge Rindge and Latin in preparation for the biggest game of the season on Saturday against Andover and the state tournament.

Saturday's game against division one Andover will be held at B.C. in Robert's Center at 2 p.m. and should be one of Cohasset's hardest challenges all year.

Cohasset Candidates Corner. . .

Gallagher announces candidacy

Last year, after much thought and consideration, I decided to declare my candidacy for election to the Board of Selectmen. Having lost that election by only 17 votes, I feel that the indication of support for my candidacy is clear. Hence, I have again decided to declare my intent as a candidate for election to the Board of Selectmen.

Having been involved with numerous town affairs, committees and boards I am fully aware of the time, effort and dedication required to serve the town and its residents fairly, honestly and well as a member of the Board of Selectmen. I am committing myself based on what I am willing, and have, to offer. I am willing to give 100 percent, and feel that I have the necessary qualifications to represent all residents of Cohasset regarding the various issues that will come before the Board of Selectmen.

James Gallagher

I was a member of the Recreation Commission for five years, serving as vice-chairman for two years. Because of my role as a Recreation Commissioner, I have been integrally involved with various concerns of residents including liaison from the Recreation Commission to the Harbor Study Committee and the Cable TV Committee for a two-year period. I was involved with the Facility Permit program developing rules and regulations, policy and fee structures for a three-year period, and for five years helped develop and present the Recreation Commission budget, seeing it through Proposition 2½.

Through association, I am aware of the functions, needs and concerns of all town departments. Having been before House Committees at the state level regarding recreation legislation, I have familiarity with, and working knowledge of, various state branches of government, and am willing to approach any branch or seat of state government that may be of help to Cohasset.

Having two children of our own, and because of my role with the Recreation Commission, my wife Patty and I have volunteered our services with numerous youth and adult recreation and sports programs: chaperoning ski trips, coaching soccer, Little League and street hockey, as well as serving as a Cub Scout den father.

I have also worked as a volunteer administrative coordinator for various youth programs and have helped with the Recreation Department special events and activities. Other community work has included helping design and fund the Beechwood Playlot and development of the Elm's Meadow Skating Arena. I am presently a member of the Town Garage Study Committee and the Rotary Club of Cohasset.

I have been a resident of Cohasset for the past 26 years, graduating from Cohasset High School in 1964. Currently, I am a self-employed Master Tradesman, and have been for the past 23 years.

Cohasset is, and hopefully always will be my home. I wish to continue to serve both you and our town in the capacity of Selectman. However, I will not stand before you and promise you what no one can predict regarding upcoming matters as they will face the Board of Selectmen for disposition, but I will stand before you and ask for your support based upon my record of service to our community.

For your consideration, I thank you.

Signatures on nomination papers

John K. McNabb Jr., a candidate for Selectman, turned in more than 200 signatures on his nomination papers, more than four times the 50 signatures needed to qualify for the ballot.

"I have been greatly encouraged by the very positive response to my candidacy," said McNabb. "I want to thank everyone who signed my papers for helping me to get onto the ballot."

"In the past few weeks I have talked to hundreds of people and have listened to their concerns about the Town of Cohasset," said McNabb. "I will continue to listen to people's concerns during this campaign and after the election."

"I am hearing some dissatisfaction among many people about town government," said McNabb. "I am always open to a discussion of problems, and will do my best to hear both sides of the question."

McNabb, who lives at 53 Pond Street, currently serves the Town of Cohasset as Chairman of the Town Government Structure Committee and as a Trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Peek at Past answer

The answer to the previous Peek at the Past photo was guessed correctly by Fred Koed. It was the 1915 CHS football team on the steps of the Osgood School. The first central school in Cohasset was located where the elderly housing is now situated at 90 Elm Street. The school was torn down in 1956. The photo was supplied by the Cohasset Historical Society.

Lifeguard applications

The first step to employment as a Lifeguard for the MDC is a written application, and scheduling a time for the test. At the time of application, lifeguard certifications are not necessary, but they must be submitted before employment begins.

For applications call 727-9650 or pickup or write the MDC Headquarters. Testing for lifeguards will be held on the following dates:

C. Christopher Ford runs for school board

Chris Ford has announced his candidacy for one of the two three year terms on the Cohasset School Committee.

Ford, who lives at 145 Border Street in Cohasset, is the President and owner of Hallmark 100 Properties, Ltd., a real estate brokerage firm located in Cohasset.

Ford and his wife Karen have three children in the Cohasset public schools: Erica, 15, Paul, 12, and Jon, 9.

He is a 1959 graduate of Cohasset High School. Ford also graduated from Bridgewater State College and has done advanced studies at the University of Hawaii, Cornell University, and Michigan State University where he received his Ph.D. degree in 1969.

He was one of the early Peace Corps Volunteers in 1963 and served his two years as a school teacher in North Borneo (Malaysia). He also directed a community development program and taught teacher education at the University of Guam for seven years. Ford worked for four years in the United States House of Representatives as a legislative assistant specializing in education programs before returning to Cohasset in 1981 to open his own business and raise his family in "the best place for raising families that I know of."

"The Cohasset schools and the Town of Cohasset were good to me," he said. "I have taken much and now I feel that I have a responsiblity to share some of my time, experience and effort in return. I am eager to serve and hope that I can make a positive contribution to the schools and the community," stated Ford.

Production starts Feb. 28

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production is Agatha Christie's "whodunit" "The Hollow," at the Cohasset Town Hall, Friday Feb. 28 & Saturday March 1 at 8 p.m. and Sunday March 2 at 2 p.m.

The play, based on the novel by Agatha Christie, is directed by Julia W. Jordan. Betty Miessner is the Producer.

"The Hollow" has all the ingredients of an Agatha Christie classic -; drama, suspense, mystery and intrigue. The audience always responds to the action of this celebrated playwright since they are given clues as to the culprit and the production builds to a surprise ending.

And so it is that the talents of the CDC cast do justice in their performances by keeping the action lively and the characterizations excellent. They include: Ginny Barcomb, Denise Ripley, Bonnie Haley, Harry Heineman, John Kuhn, David Barrett, Joan Paquette, Ed Lappen, Fraser & Joan Scorgie.

Sheldon Ripley is the set designer and Clark Young, lighting designer.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production, Agatha Christie's "The Hollow," offers excitement and genuine splendor.

Tickets for the Cohasset Town Hall performance are $4, available at the door and in advance at Flemings in Cohasset Center. Seniors are invited to attend the March 2 matinee at no charge.

Tryouts for spring show

Tryouts for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's spring production "Gramercy Ghost" by playwright John Cecil Holm will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall at 2 p.m., Sunday, March 16.

The play itself is a lighthearted family comedy in three acts, calling for a cast of 12; six male and six female roles. Roles range in age from youthful to "older", including three characters who portray the "ghosts" of the play.

"Gramercy Ghost" is scheduled for production on Friday and Saturday May 16 and 17 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, May 18 at 2 p.m. on the Town Hall stage.

Director of "Gramercy Ghost" is Brewster Pattyson. Playbooks are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset.

Community theater enthusiasts, whether experienced or beginning, are invited to try out for roles in this delightful Cohasset Dramatic Club spring production.

Professional seminar

Thursday, February 27, the Cohasset League of Women Voters is sponsoring a Personal and Professional Development Seminar to be conducted by Ms. Anne Rarich, M.Ed., a Senior Staff Associate and Master Trainer for Performax Systems International, Inc.

This seminar is designed for people who are employed full or part-time, are self-employed, community leaders, volunteers, public officials, or simply want to develop communication and management skills.

The League promises a stimulating as well as informative evening. The fee is $10 which covers all course materials. The Cohasset League of Women Voters is underwriting part of the cost of the seminar as a community service.

The seminar will be held at the Unitarian Parish House on Main Street. Registration begins at 7 p.m.; the seminar begins promptly at 7:30.

For further information contact Peggy Corrigan at 383-0296 or Debbie Cook at 383-6313.

Roadrace April 6

Plans are now underway for the 10th Annual Cohasset Roadrace By the Sea, to be held Sunday, April 6 at 1 p.m.

This year a Walk For Fitness will also be held at 9 a.m. for those not quite ready to run. T-shirts and hats will be given to all entrants.

Local merchants sponsor the T-shirts and the timing results will be donated by Cohasset Heights Landfill. Refreshments will be provided in the Town Hall parking lot following the race.

This year Bay Coast Medical will provide a Walk-Run Clinic on Saturday mornings at 8 a.m. at Rotary Hall from March 7 through March 29.

The Cohasset Rotary Club is again the sponsor of the race with proceeds going to their scholarship fund and other in-town beneficiaries. Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons will again be co-chairmen of the event.

The race is limited to the first 800 applications. In the past runners have come from over 20 states although the greatest percentage is from Cohasset and Scituate, keeping this a local event that everyone looks forward to as a sign of spring, and a time to see old friends after winter hibernation.

The entry fee is $6 and applications are due by March 31.

Applications are available at Good Sport, Cohasset Liquors, Colonial Pharmacy, Harbor Liquors or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Kings Ridge ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a ski trip to Kings Ridge, N.H. Sunday, March 16.

Buses will leave from the Town Hall at 5 a.m. and return at 7:30 p.m. that day. The cost for the trip is $27 per person. Rentals are $13 and lessons are $9.

If you are interested in this trip and are 17-years-old or younger, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 before Friday, Feb. 28.

The department will be able to accommodate 45 people and registrations will be accepted on a first-call basis.

Rotary directories prepared

The 23rd annual issue of the Cohasset Rotary Club Telephone Directory and Buyers Guide is being readied for publication.

Contracts and rate cards have been mailed to all advertisers in the 1985 book and new businesses are being solicited as well.

The book is the major fundraiser for the club's Scholarship Fund, which last year awarded $12,000 in scholarships to Cohasset High School graduates. The book carries only Cohasset telephone listings and Cohasset advertising.

The advertising committee is being headed by President-elect Ed Goff, assisted by Fred Howe, Dane Hahn, Jim Gallagher, Ed Connelly, and Jack Livingstone.

The committee in charge of correcting the phone listings is chaired by Vice President Ron Goodwin and includes Dan Duffy, Burt Pratt, Ed Fox and Kevin O'Connor.

The deadline for all advertising copy and payments is March 25. A substantial discount is offered to advertisers who send in their payments and copy by March 1.

New advertisers who have not been called on may write to Rotary Club of Cohasset, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset 02025 and a contract form and rate card will be sent to them.

Annual meeting Feb. 22

The Annual Meeting of the Cohasset Central Cemetery will be held Saturday, February 22 at 4 p.m. in Trueblood Hall, Unitarian Parish House.

Each lot-owner has one vote, and your attendance is encouraged. Refreshments will be served.

Various reports on the status of the Cemetery will be made, and Directors, Officers and a Nominating Committee will be elected for the coming year.

The meeting is usually over by 5 p.m.

Historical Society meeting

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual spring dinner meeting Tuesday, March 18, at Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House.

This gala yearly event will feature a dinner catered by Jessica's, and an unusual evening program provided by members of the Society. The theme of the program will be Cohasset's own history, and will utilize some of the extensive resources of the Society's membership, its archives and its collections.

The dinner will feature sherried beef with wild rice, vegetables, salad and dessert. Cost of reservations will be $9. Reservations must be made prior to Tuesday, March 11, and may be made by contacting the Society at 383-0773, 383-6930, or by check sent to the Society at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset. Payment must be received in advance. Time of the dinner will be 6:30 p.m. There will be a social hour before dinner.

Planned as part of the evening's special program is a presentation of slides made from the old photographs of Cohasset located in the Society's archives and museums. If you are interested in the unique and fascinating history of this small New England seacoast town, plan to spend an evening with the Historical Society as it embarks upon a voyage into the past.

Seating for the dinner and program is limited, so make reservations early.

Around the puck with Buck. . . hockey violence

By Bob Buckley
Sports correspondent

It's been a problem since the discovery that water freezes at 32 degrees. Violence and hockey seemed to go hand in hand and this season the South Shore League has decided to take a stance.

The South Shore League, a league that has been an innovator in regard to rule changes decided that any team that accumulates 13 penalties during a game will automatically forfeit.

The league also ruled that any player thrown out of a game will be suspended for two games rather than the one game that the Massachusetts Inter-Scholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) enforces.

Already the 13 penalty rule has had far reaching consequences. Rockland was in the midst of celebrating its first SSL hockey title when it was discovered the Bulldogs had the magic 13. The result went from a 7-5 SSL championship victory over Duxbury to a quick Duxbury victory and a celebration put on hold.

The question now arises, has the South Shore League gone too far or over-reacted to violence in the game?

To answer this question with a yes or a no would over simplify a touchy situation.

Obviously, the SSL felt it had to address this dangerous situation.

As a long-time follower of the South Shore League, I have to agree that SSL was justified in taking some action. I can remember one SSL game in 1978 when Holbrook and Hull played before no fans (that's right, zero) because on ice violence in their first meeting resulted in 13 arrests and a fan riot in the parking lot after the game. The SSL and all other high school leagues have faced similar situations.

But the 13 penalty rule is not the answer. The reasons for this are twofold. First, in the Rockland-Duxbury game not one of the penalties called against Rockland was a major penalty.

As Duxbury coach Peter Sagesse said "A team can get 13 penalties in a game and still play a solid game without chippiness or cheapshots."

What is so magical about 13 penalties? Aren't four major penalities for fighting and six minors more violent than 13 tripping and holding penalties?

Secondly, the South Shore League is correct in taking a stance against violence but it shouldn't have to go it alone. The MIAA should join the SSL in a fight against violence.

However, the SSL is part of the MIAA and if the MIAA is going to have the impact it should, the member leagues should all play by the same rules.

For example, in the upcoming state tournament Rockland and Austin Prep will be two of the higher seated teams in the tournament.

Rockland's seating will be hampered by its forfeit while Austin Prep will not be penalized even though it had 19 penalties in its 5-5 tie with North Andover last Monday.

The South Shore League should be commended for taking a stance against violence in high school hockey. The MIAA should follow this lead. I suggest a forfeit take place: a.) based on the number of penalty minutes not the number of penalties or b.) based on the number of major penalties.

However, in order for a ruling to be totally effective it must be unified statewide.

Hockey has potential to be the most exciting of all high school sports. I call on the leaders of the MIAA to make sure that excessive violence does not hinder this exciting spectator event.

AAA to host area code meeting

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the American Automobile Association (AAA) and State Rep. William J. Flynn, Hanover, will sponsor a meeting to discuss the placement of a new area code district on the South Shore.

New England Telephone Vice President John Coleman will attend the meeting for the purpose of explaining the various options for placement of the new area code.

The meeting will be held Tuesday, Feb. 25, at 8 a.m. at American Automobile Association (AAA) Headquarters in Rockland.

For reservations, please call Kevin J. Costello at the Chamber, 479-1111.

Travel to Philadelphia with the South Shore Art Center and tour the Barnes Foundation, a unique collection of art featuring major Impressionist masterpieces.

The Barnes Foundation collection is never loaned out or reproduced and is only open to limited groups. The Center offers this opportunity to visit this collection on its Philadephia trip May 24-26.

The tour will also take participants to the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Rodin Museum featuring the largest collection of Rodin works outside of Paris, the Brandywine Museum with works by three generations of Wyeths, and the Longwood Gardens, the 350-acre DuPont estate.

The Center, at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, has made arrangements for this tour through Cerel's Travel in Natick. Cost of the trip is $199 based on double occupancy and includes travel by motor coach, two nights at the elegant Barclay Hotel on Rittenhouse Square, admissions and local transportation to museums and a general sightseeing tour of Philadephia's historic highlights. Included in the fare is also a $25 tax deductible donation to the Center.

While at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, considered the third largest art collection in the United States, guests will tour a special exhibit of the famed British printmaker Richard Hamilton. At the Brandywine River Museum located in picturesque Chadd's Ford antique enthusiasts will discover the annual antique show for browsing and buying.

At the Longwood Gardens, guests will have a specially guided tour of the DuPont's majestic house and gardens including the conservatories.

The Center has arranged for pick ups from the South Shore area and from the Framingham/Natick area. En route, a morning snack and box lunch will be included.

Come enjoy Rodin, Cezanne, the Wyeths, DuPont and all the splendor of this city of brotherly love over the Memorial Day weekend. Reservations and a deposit need to be in to Cerel's Travel by March 21. Contact Cerel's in Natick or the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548, for further information.

Juried exhibit at center

Entry dates for the South Shore Art Center's All New England Juried Exhibit, New Beginnings, are Friday, Feb. 21 from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 22 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Works are to be delivered to the Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset at the times specified. Categories include oil and acrylics, watercolor, drawing and pastels, graphics, 3-D, mixed media/collage and photography both color and black and white.

Artists may enter three works per category except for photography in which five works may be entered. All works must be original and not previously exhibited in the South Shore Art Center All New England Juried Exhibit or the South Shore Arts Festival in the summer.

New Beginnings opens Sunday, March 2 with a formal reception and awards presentation from 5 to 7 p.m. and continues through the month of March. All works not accepted into the show are to be picked up Saturday, March 1 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The entry fee is $6 per piece.

For further information on this exhibit contact the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

After 16 years, his postal career is over. . .

correspondence and free samples.

For ten years, Leonard traversed that 14-mile route without a sick day or a dog bite. That's quite a record for a profession loaded with such industrial hazards. In fact, Leonard showed up for work with one other co-worker on the day of the 1978 Blizzard.

"I was on time that day too," he noted with pride.

In 1976 he was given a Superior Achievement Award by the Cohasset Postmaster "in appreciation of the years he demonstrated devotion to duty and outstanding performance and commendable ability".

For 13 years, he was annually granted a Safe Driving Award by the National Safety Council. That award is given to accident-free federal workers.

Leonard is simplistic in explaining why he became a postal worker. "I wanted to be a servant to the public; physical fitness is built into the job; and I wanted to be in my hometown and not commute."

For 14 years he had it all. But it's not so much the work he'll miss. It's the special moments - the conversations, the children and the animals he has befriended through the years.

"I know all the names and ages of the children on my route," he said this week from his Bancroft Road home. "I know the occupations of the spouses, where the children are going to school."

And when asked if he read the backs of postcards sent along his route, Leonard replied with all seriousness that if you've read one, you've read them all. "They don't mean anything to you, so you treat them all the same," he responded.

A man with great emotion, Leonard recalled a few incidents when he was warmed by the graciousness of his neighbors. About two years ago, a few days after Christmas, Leonard neared the end of his route. He made a delivery into a mailbox, and drove off to the next stop. In the rear view mirror he spotted a small child beckoning him to return.

"I thought to myself, I don't know what she wants, but I'll go back. When I got out of the truck she said to me, 'Mr. Mailman, look at what Santa brought me for Christmas.' It was a Cabbage Patch doll. We talked about the doll's name, I asked her all about the doll and if she was registered. Then the little girl looked up and said, 'Mr. Mailman, would you like to hold my doll?' There I was with this little girl, holding her doll in my arms. I almost started to cry."

There's another friend along the route who likes to stash sandwiches on cold winter days in the the mailbox for her favorite letter carrier. In the summer, a cool beverage is often waiting for the thirsty worker.

"I'm like clockwork on my route," he added, "so this woman knows exactly when I'll be by her house."

On many Saturdays, Leonard helps stranded motorists as they attempt to travel through the winding ancient roads of Cohasset. "The most often-asked question is 'whereistheHanoverMall?'" he explained.

As much as the people, Leonard will miss the menagerie of animals he has known throughout his career in Cohasset. Two of his favorites are Cinnamon and Jinx, horses that reside along Mill Lane.

Every day, the postal worker will bring along apples and carrots ("they like the carrots better") for the waiting horses. "They hear the sound of my truck's engines as I enter the cul de sac and there they are with their noses peeking through the fence waiting for me," Leonard said, adding that he once attempted to substitute cucumbers for the carrots and was given the brush-off by the two equines.

The canines along Leonard's route — "my dogs" -are comfortable with the familiar sight of the mailman. "This is my turf, and I'm there every day. They understand that," he explained.

In recent years he has become better acquainted with the animals than their owners, as more residential developments are constructed in the once rural area. Cluster mailboxes at the end of each development are becoming routine, and the mailman's personal friendship with a family subsequently vanishes.

"I won't miss the workroom activities," Leonard admitted, noting his termination from employment will separate him from the more important duty of serving the public.

"I'll miss my route," he stated simply. "All I wanted in my life is good health and a good job to go to. I never had any thoughts to do anything else but deliver the mail. But now my future is in question. And I won't be able to work until I obtain some skills."

The 40 year-old mailman continued, "being a mail carrier is a craft, not a career. I didn't go to school for it and I was never an apprentice or a journeyman. It was merely a job - but it was a good job."

Highest honors to two Rotary members

The Rotary Club of Cohasset bestowed Rotary's highest honor on two of its members.

District Governor John J. McCarty, of Chatham, and his wife Barbara, recently visited the club to present Paul Harris Fellowships to Rotarians Fred Howe and Burt Pratt. This brings to three the number of local Rotarians who have been given Rotary's highest honor. Former School Superintendent Bill Ripley was honored last year.

The club donated $1,000 in the names of each of the two recipients. These funds go to the Rotary Foundation, an international fund which provides money for health and humanity programs throughout the world. The funds used to nominate the two new Paul Harris Fellows was earmarked for the Polio 2005 campaign which is saving millions of lives, mostly young children.

Howe, a retired investment counselor, joined the Cohasset club in 1949 and was president in 1951-52. Pratt, a printing salesman, joined in 1965 and was president in 1970-71. The two were honored in particular for their work on the club's annual telephone directory which provides scholarship funds for Cohasset High School graduates.

Theatre Review

'Ain't Misbehavin' livens up So. Shore Performing Arts

By Judith Montminy
Special to the Mariner

"Ain't Misbehavin'," the Tony-award winning musical revue based on Fats Waller's music, has bounced onto the stage at the South Shore Performing Arts Center in Stoughton.

The show will play to audiences through February 23. The Fats Waller tunes are lively, and the cast is experienced, directed by Arthur Faria, who staged and choreographed the original New York production.

The on-stage musical combo is adequate, although sometimes it overpowers the voices of the singers.

Terri White stands out as the strongest of the five-member song and dance team. She's a dead ringer for Nell Carter who starred in the show when it first came to Boston. White's voice is sassy, her moves are brassy, and she brings just the right amount of energy and bounce to the production. The technical difficulties with the sound system never interfere with White's delivery. Nor does the straying spotlight. White is able to command the audience's focus throughout the show.

The rest of the members of the cast, Boncella Lewis, Stanley Ramsey, David Witherspoon and Adriane Lenox, are veterans of previous "Ain't Misbehavin' " productions throughout the country and their familiarity with the material is evident. Both Witherspoon and Lenox, however, were scheduled to play in Stoughton only through February 16 and will be replaced by Doug Eskew and Leslie Barlow, also experienced "Ain't Misbehavin' " players.

The cast is professional and is brought to the South Shore by Bill Hanney in association with The National Theatre Guild.

Fats Waller's music is earthy and suggestive in every way, but the South Shore production appears to be toned down from the original. When the actresses shimmy on stage, they don't run the risk of falling out of their costumes.

Some songs, such as "Black and Blue," are noticeably dated with references to a black person who feels "white" on the inside. But the show doesn't pretend to be contemporary. Waller wrote this music during the 1920s. When he was only 25 years-old he wrote the music for the Broadway show "Hot Chocolates" and sent songs like "Ain't Misbehavin' " "Honeysuckle Rose," and "I've Got A Feeling I'm Falling" to the forefront of popular music.

Boncella Lewis, Leslie Barion, Terri White (front) and Doug Eskew and Stanley Ramsey (rear) are all part of the 'Ain't Misbehavin' cast.

Act I takes off when the three women sing "Off-Time" and really starts hopping with the entire company singing and dancing "The Joint Is Jumpin'." The strongest number by the men is "Fat and Greasy" and brings the audience into the act.

"Ain't Misbehavin' " celebrates Waller's contributions to American music. "Tain't Nobody's Bizness If I Do," "Keepin' Out of Mischief," "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter," and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," are some of the songs Waller made famous.

Once again, South Shore audiences are being given a choice of theatrical productions, both in Boston ("Glengarry Glen Ross" and the pre-Broadway "Big Deal") as well as locally ("Ain't Misbehavin' " and the pre-Broadway "So Long On Lonely Street"). Any and all live theater is a welcome addition to the entertainment scene.

The South Shore Performing Arts Center can play an important role, especially if it corrects its technical problems. The biggest detractors from the current production are technicals flaws: microphones that gurgle, lights that flicker and amplification that doesn't penetrate the orchestra seating under the balcony's overhang. A cast and show can be great, but if the actors can't be seen or heard, all the talent in the world won't help.

As a renovated movie theater, the South Shore Performing Arts Center serves a dual function in Stoughton. Yet when it is being used as a legitimate theater, try to get seats that are no further back than Row K if you choose to sit in the orchestra section. In addition to the muffled sound, sight lines can present a problem to certain patrons who have trouble seeing over tall bodies.

Tickets to "Ain't Misbehavin' " are available through Ticketron or by calling 344-1988. The South Shore Performing Arts Center is located in Stoughton Center.

Vo-Tech asked to create no-smoking policy

Administrators at South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School were asked last week by the school committee to develop an enforceable no-smoking policy.

"Students are smoking in the building," said committee member Lloyd Patriquin of Whitman. "I don't like to see us restrict the students, but something must be done. "In some cases you need a gas mask to enter the rest rooms," he said.

"It appears that we'll have to provide a lot more surveillance, or ban smoking entirely," said Superintendent-Director Clifford W. Easton. "We have to come up with a workable solution."

The present policy allows students to smoke before and after school in a designated area behind the building but students are not allowed to smoke during school hours.

Students who violate the rules receive a one-day suspension for their first offense, two days for a second offense, and three days for a third offense. Parents must meet with administrators to reinstate the students after the third offense.

Last week's senior open house drew crowds. . .

materials can be found locally, Virginia said. Believe me, after the rug is completed, you end up with an heirloom - they're gorgeous."

Last Thursday, Joanne Sheppard held her popular gentle exercise class. Those classes will continue every Tuesday and Thursday from 1:30 to 11:15 a.m. "Joanne talked to the seniors and asked them about their concerns. She tailors her classes to the concerns of the participants, and alters it to their needs," Bryanton explained.

A Keep Well Clinic with Social Service League nurse Mary Ann Hansen followed the exercise class. "The seniors really love Mary Ann," the director noted. "They trust her, and she always enjoys taking the time to talk with them."

In the afternoon, librarian Susan Whatrous reviewed the Best Seller list and discussed various popular books. This was a kick-off for a program which will begin Feb. 27. Every other Thursday, the senior center will sponsor a Book Discussion group in which various books will be discussed and reviewed. In March, Mary Stein from the Hingham Square Bookstore will review the most popular books for the Cohasset seniors.

Periodically, Whatrous will return to the Book Discussion group to help residents select books from the Paul Pratt Library and to take orders for certain titles.

Nancy Clapp demonstrated the craft of stenciling during Friday's program. The projects sampled by Clapp were simple, yet elegeant, acco, ding to Bryanton. Response from the demonstration has led to the formation of stenciling classes at the Senior Center, although no starting date has been decided. Anyone interested in participating may contact Bryanton.

At the same time, Toni Trudell of Hingham demonstrated basket weaving and showed the seniors how to complete small heart-shaped baskets for Valentine's Day. This class attracted a lot of attention, and regular weaving sessions will be scheduled. Bryanton requests that anyone interested in participating should call her at the center.

"All these exercises, basket weaving and stenciling classes are good programs for senior citizens," the director emphasized. "They help with overall movements, using muscles and joints. And there's nothing here that's difficult. Many studies in the last few years have indicated that keeping active and exercising is really helpful in dealing with the aging process."

Last Friday, in addition to the morning classes, a luncheon was again presented by the Social Service League and the Council on Aging. Featured among the delicacies was a chocolate layered cake from J. Bildner's of Cushing Plaza. The store had sent flowers to the center in honor of the special-events week.

A knitting class in the afternoon with Edna Finnegan proved a popular activity.

One of the newer classes added to the Senior Center line-up will be painting classes with Maura Ditman. A student at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Ditman has organized similar classes in Acton and in Maynard.

Bryanton noted that class participants need not have artistic abilities. "Maybe someone painted when they were in school and hasn't touched it since. We're looking for people who enjoy creativity," she said, noting that many of the supplies will be provided by the center, and others will be routine items found in most homes.

"We want to keep the costs down, and we do not have many supplies here," Bryanton explained. "So we are going to keep the projects simple."

Again, anyone interested in participating in the art classes should contact the Senior Center. The painting class will begin Friday, March 7 and conclude March 28.

More candidates file for elected office

With the deadline drawing near, perspective candidates for public office are preparing to submit their nomination papers. All candidates have until 5 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 27 to submit their nomination papers to the town clerk's office.

The following persons have filed the necessary nomination papers with the town clerk:

John Muncey, South Main Street, for a three-year term on the Housing Authority; Robert Jackson, Ash Street, a three-year term on the Water Commission; Vito Conte, Hillside Drive, a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen; James Gallagher, Short Street, a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen; Martha Gjesteby, Old Pasture Road, a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen; Dane Hahn, Black Rock Road, a three-year term on the School Committee; Mark Trask, Bancroft Road, a five-year term on the Planning Board; Daniel C. Cotton, King Street, a five-year term on the Planning Board.

Potential candidates for two three-year terms on the Board of Selectmen include: John McNabb Jr., Pond St., Clifford Mitman Jr., Beach Street; David S. Duncombe, Sheldon Road, Jerome A. Whitney III of Jerusalem Road, and Martin Dooley of Summer Street.

Perspective candidates for school committee include: Diana Kornet, Nichols Road; James P. Leonard, South Main Street; C. Christopher Ford, Border Street, and Tanna Kasperowicz, South Main Street.

Potential candidates for three seats on the Paul Pratt Library Board of Trustees include: Lucia R. Woods, Jerusalem Road; Barbara M. Powers, Beach Street; Michele Buckley, Forest Avenue; Max S. Maire, Elm Street, and Cynthia Johnson Whealler, Jerusalem Road.

One three-year term on the Board of Assessors has attracted incumbent Thomas S. Duggan of Ripley Road.

One three-year term on the Water Commission will include candidate Jackson and potential candidate Ronald Goodwin of Ash Street.

The race for a three-year term on the Sewer Commission may be between Frank C. DeSantis Jr., Forest Avenue, and Michael J. Spirito of Highland Court.

One three-year term on the Board of Health may be contested by Sharon L. Becker of South Main Street and Matthew E. Sullivan of Nichols Road.

Gerard Buckley of Hugh Strain Road is the only potential candidate in the race for a five-year term on the Recreation Commission.

With the resignation of Marguerite Libby, there is a four-year unexpired term on the Housing Authority.

Incumbent Muncey is the only candidate thus far for the five-year term on the Housing Authority.

Deer Hill School creative writing winners announced

Writing contest winners

During the past six weeks, the six graders at Deer Hill School have been involved in a creative writing contest. Each week they submitted stories, poems, and newspaper articles to be judged by teachers and fellow students. The weekly winners accumulated points on their placings. After six weeks of exciting competition, the results are now in:

Winners in Mr. Becker's homeroom are:
1st place: Erik Waal
2nd place: Brian Conant
3rd place: Kevin Bishop

Winners in Mrs. Cisnerso's homeroom are:
1st place: (tie) Amy Crafts and Julienne Quemere
2nd place: Laurie Bronstein
3rd place: Christopher Henderson

Deer Hill principal, Kenneth Ekberg, presented the winners at an awards assembly Friday, Feb. 14. Other students who had accumulated points were awarded certificates of achievement for their participation.

These students are: Ali Welz, Heather Brennock, Kevin Mulcahy, Peter Sheppard, Evan Spencer, Dan DeMichele, Corinna Minnar, John Geary, Tom Reardon, Billy Murphy, Michelle Woodland, Jed Terry, and Colin Knox from Mr. Shultz's homeroom.

Nicole Bieryla, Rebecca Kirk, Marcie Hahn, Rod Hamassi, Bridget Leung, Mac Campbell, Patrick Suhrbier, Chip Kennedy, Rebeccas Tosca, Shawn Burgess, Chris Brown, Erin Sutherland, William Bruns, and Amy Gallant from Mr. Becker's homeroom.

Erin Lennon, Jennifer Reidy, Vanessa Jones, John O'Leary, David MacDonald, Jimmy Yess, Adam McNamara, Stephanie Eno, Tim Getto, Jeff Stone, Brenden Murphy, Stacy Pierce, David Greenwald, and Jason Legere from Mrs. Cisneros's homeroom.

Much of the writing produced during the contest has been outstanding. The teachers and students hope that the Mariner readers have enjoyed reading samples of the children's work and would like to extend a very sincere "thank you" to the Mariner for affording these young authors a chance to be published.

Wickertin and the Golden Harp

He had heard about the golden harp before. His grandfather had owned it and during the time of the ownership he had had tremendous powers. Then it was stolen from Wickertin and immediately he lost his royal position. Now it was Robin's job to get it back.

The golden harp was very important to the Wickertinarians because it was the secret strength to the kingdom. It had been stolen at a festival when the orchestra had left the stage for a bite to eat, and it hadn't been seen since then.

Robin had heard that the valuable instrument was taken by aliens from another universe. He wasn't sure he believed this bit of information, although it would be rather interesting to visit another land.

Robin thought long and hard about how to reach his destination. "I would have to make some sort of machine," he thought carefully. "It would have to be self-propelled."

Now of course this was a long time ago, some time before the birth of Christ, so they had never heard about a rocketship.

The prince made many models and sketches of what the object would look like and how it would work. Soon the prince had it all worked out and knew every essential step for making his vehicle.

He worked long and hard making sure he was doing every step correctly, and then double checking it. The worst thing in the world, according to Robin right then, was a malfunction in the booster rocket.

After many days of total concentration, the rocket was finally finished. The prince had been working on it in his secret lab two miles away from the palace so no one would bother him.

It was now the time that Robin had dreaded for many months. He had to get his father's (the king's) permission.

The king was a harsh man with a deep, raucous laugh. He was cold, and the only thing he relished was war. He had shoulder length, curly, marshmallow colored hair, with green, beady eyes. He was a large man of six feet, seven inches, and wore a size thirteen boot. Everyone in the kingdom was afraid of this man. The ground tremored when he walked. He took slow, steady steps and never hurried to get anywhere. The townspeople scurried into their houses whenver the beastly king made one of his rare appearances.

Robin walked reluctantly into the chilly stone room where his father sat sleeping.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

On Meaningful Death and a link to Nov. 22, 1963

The sublime, too, can get overdone, and the reader may approach the point of tiring of Christa McAuliffe stories. But for me the meaning of profound events isn't usually immediately apparent; I need some delay before I understand what has happened. In the case of the assassination of President Kennedy, I still struggle with the event and with its meaning for my country and my passionate optimism of a quarter of a century ago.

No subsequent death until the astronauts' affected me the same way, and when I spoke to David Cutler on January 28, I said, "It reminds me of November 22." We did not, nor will we ever, have to remind each other the year.

For those who were young in the age of Kennedy, part of what happened that November 22 is that with his death, death was cheapened. Once the life of the most vital and lively and amusing and promising of presidents had been cut short, other deaths, even those of other heroes, even that of another Kennedy, seemed, like the death of my own grandmother, trivial. I am ashamed to say that because I knew and know that no death is trivial, but that is how I felt.

With Kennedy gone our lodestar was gone, and we groped for meaning. The last half dozen years of the sixties were a hellish time in which families were rent, lives ruined, and dreams abandoned. I came to regard it as commonplace when lifelong friends turned into seeming lifelong derelicts, and when the fond hopes of their parents turned to nightmares.

I survived, I suppose, because I had meaningful work, because I never took drugs seriously, and because my political beliefs had been so deeply set in hope while John F. Kennedy lived. But it seems that I am destined to spend a good part of my forties ministering to generational colleagues who were not as fortunate. At forty-plus the accused are cocaine and heroin and above all booze, but the spiritual villain disillusion is in more ways pervasive and widespread than any substance.

It is in that context that the lives of the astronauts hold meaning for one who shared their time on earth. All of them in their lives gave the lie to the notion that ours is a defeated generation. Here were men and women of our time, giving their all for a cause they deeply believed in. In their lives they retained what so many of us lost in the sordid world of grief that predominated in America following the death of the President.

At last, then, meaningful death. That is what the tragedy of the space shuttle means to me. After the incomprehensible death of Kennedy, after the incomprehensible deaths of our braver brothers in Viet Nam, after numerous other incomprehensible deaths in the streets of America, here are seven who died, as Joseph Warren died at Bunker Hill, in the pursuit of a noble ideal.

It is perhaps our generation's greatest conceptual failing that in our grief we could not understand that the death of President Kennedy, and the later death of our braver brothers who went to Viet Nam, were themselves meaningful deaths heroically donated in the pursuit of an ideal. Perhaps the death of these astronauts, who so clearly stand with those who stood with Washington at Valley Forge, will elevate our understanding of prior deaths which our generation came to trivialize.

In a real way, then, the loss of the astronauts can redeem a generation and its perception of itself. Here were seven who stayed the course of their youthful idealism; who reflected the optimism of President Kennedy, the hopes of their parents, the promise of our brothers who perished in Viet Nam, and the dreams that partly perished in many of us.

It is thus that their sacrifice leaves me more optimistic than at any time in the last 23 years. For although they are gone, they have revealed a generation that prevailed despite the grief of our youth. We are a generation who will yet survive our trials and take our place among the giants of history.

One prays that the children who watched that explosion on television will prevail in their day without the tumult we have known.

This addendum is primarily for Marshfield and Scituate readers. Last weekend I emerged from the ever-so-safe world of punditry to participate in a "roast" of Marshfield's distinguished state representative, Frank Hynes. The program was headed by Massachusetts House Speaker George Keverian, one of the funniest men in tarnation, and it included a number of distinguished local residents in addition to one obscure reporter.

The episode was a learning experience, to put it mildly. Whereas George Keverian can tell a joke, I cannot. Whereas George Keverian can appropriately slip a profanity into remarks before an audience, I cannot. My remarks, to be as blunt about the matter as I try to be in commenting on issues of the day, were way out of line, even for a roast. Frank Hynes and his friends deserve a public apology.

George Higgins, 'The Friends of Eddie Coyle' author visits

By Peggy Beals
Mariner Correspondent

"I'm going to tell you," she said. "I don't like The Friends of Eddie Coyle."

The forthright woman was talking to the book's author George V. Higgins, a recent speaker in the author series sponsored by the Friends of the Scituate Library. In his talk Higgins quickly set an informal, outspoken tone, where such remarks could be made and received with dignity.

His impressive background has shaped his novels and contributed to what people like and dislike about them. A Brockton native and graduate of Rockland High School, he earned degrees at Boston College and Stanford.

His debut in the business world was behind the wheel of a Coca Cola truck. "Robert Parker (author of the Spenser detective stories) and I are the only members of the Former Coca Cola Truck Driver Famous Writers Club."

From the bookshelf

His father, an educator, was pushing him toward teaching high school English. To avoid that, he became a reporter on the Providence Journal at a cut in salary.

He learned about Beacon Hill while researching John Thompson, Speaker of the House under Gov. Endicott Peabody. "I thought this would be a puff piece on the governor and an indictment of Thompson, but the Speaker was fascinating!"

Thompson, he said, is the model for Bernie Morgan in A Choice of Enemies, and the only character Higgins has drawn from life. Higgins said he is sued regularly by people claiming he described them.

Higgins is a lawyer who served as assistant attorney general and as an assistant U.S. attorney in Boston. He covered the Watergate trials for Atlantic Monthly and worked for Associated Press — "the best school for creative writing there is" — while trying to write novels. His 15th novel, Eddie Coyle, was a success. That was in 1972.

Many best sellers later, he has been selected by the British Book Marketing Council to participate in a project presenting modern American writers to England.

He wrote 'Lit'rary Life,' a weekly review of 18 magazines for the Boston Globe, for six years.

Of the language his characters use, Higgins says, "That's the way those people talk. When I'm representing them as a lawyer, that's the way I talk to them.

"I know the language offends people. I don't give public readings of my stuff because that language isn't appropriate in places like this."

His characters commit violent acts too. A woman in California complained about the language. He replied to this effect: in the book she named there were two murders, a stabbing, a violent rape and other anti-social acts, and he wondered about her morality if all she could fault was the language.

Outspoken in his views, he has only contempt for the way books are reviewed and published today. "You go on a talk show, the interviewer tells you (back stage) he loved every word of your book, then on air he asks how you came to write about the economic crisis in Brazil."

Of reviews, he suspects people either don't read them, or the more the book is panned, the more they rush to buy. "Why," he wondered, "does the Pope come down so hard on nuns who speak out about the church's stand on abortion, but tolerates Andrew Greeley?" Greeley, he believes, "uses a computer to create his "cardboard characters."

Higgins said he wants the reviewer to tell him about the characters in a book, if it is well written, where the book succeeds or fails. "Let the character tell the story, act it out, not the author."

The amount of dialogue makes his books easy to read, and his characters — Jerry Kennedy, Eddie Coyle, Digger — are so real he refers to them as if they were good friends.

He said his books aren't researched. "They just simmer until I can't keep from writing, then I become impossible to work with, to live with. I write fast, before I forget."

And he rewrites. His next book, The Imposter, is the sixth draft of the original writing.

Higgins' talk has started a run on libraries for his books. The next scheduled speaker on March 2 is Doris Kearns-Goodwin. For information on this popular, well-attended series, you may call the Scituate Public Library at 545-6700.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Astrological readers beware: Mercury will go retrograde

Has life been getting you down, Bunky? Do your best laid plans result in monumental foul ups? Has Mercury squared by Mars and Uranus turned your brain to silly putty? Well, don't dispair, Sonny Boy. Change is just around the corner. March 8, Mercury will go retrograde, and things will get much worse. Listen to what Madame Zolar has to say:

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): With Mars your ruling planet in Sagittarius, wanderlust will seize your spirit, and you will plan journeys to distant and exotic places. Unfortunately, retrograde Mercury will make sport of your plans. Your luggage will go to Morocco, but you will spend your entire vacation fogged in in Taunton.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Congratulations! Your financial initiative is absolutely brilliant and will attract the attention of a Scorpio. Unfortunately, he is an employee of the Internal Revenue Service, and will prove unsympathetic.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): During the coming month people will tend to be somewhat dazed and to display a singular lack of judgment. An excellent time for the con game you've been considering. May Madame suggest that you stand outside supermarkets with a donation can and a sign reading, "Help stamp out osmosis?"

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): One of your dearest fantasies will come true this month. An employee, bemused by retrograde Mercury, will inadvertantly lock you into Bildner and Sons overnight and you will be forced to sustain your strength by sampling all their wares. Because this is the lenten season, you may wish to remember that even looking at their pastries is at least a venial sin.

LEO (July 23 - Au. 22): You will be released from the shackles of tradition, and will experience a freedom you have not known in many years. Translation: Your employer will finally decide that he can no longer tolerate your overbearing and domineering manner and will fire you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): You will be frustrated and enraged by the lack of order and incompetence you see around you. Particularly when you wind up in Morocco instead of Taunton, and the airline gives you an Aries' luggage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Confusion that accompanies a retrograde Mercury will be particularly active in your life, and you will go to the wrong church for your wedding. This will not daunt you in the least, and you will marry whichever groom or bride fate sends you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Your career with the IRS will take a sudden upswing when you are able to expose questionable financial dealings by a Taurus. The fact that she is your mother will not deter you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): You will be very happy during the coming month. Natives of other signs, who are not as accustomed as you to dealing with incompetence, confusion, and a messy environment will look to your leadership. Enjoy these planetary aspects, and plan to move out of state in April when people come to their senses. There will be a very real possibility of a move to lynch you at that time.

CAPRICORN (Dec.22 - Jan. 19): Retrograde Mercury will cause you to lose your customary acumen and an unscrupulous Gemini will involve you in a scheme to stamp out osmosis. When Mercury goes direct, you will hunt him down and destroy him. Unless you can convince him to make you his partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Your creative and innovative ideas will attract the attention of one of the most powerful public officials on the South Shore. Don't worry about it. Bewildered by retrograde Mercury he will forget to lock the cell door.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): In an attempt to raise enough money to pay your taxes you will ask a Taurean to invest your money for you. The results will make you very happy, as you will have good reason to cry and wring your hands for at least a year. Congratulations!

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Pay no attention to a sun sign astrologer who writes for a newspaper. She developed delusions of grandeur when a Mr. Gramm and a Mr. Rudman consulted her regarding a financial plan for the nation and she is not longer reliable when it comes to advice for individuals.

Legislators reminded of the importance of S.O.A.P.

Local legislators opened their mail last week to find Valentines including tiny bars of soap from South Shore Elder Services. The symbolic bars of soap are from the Massachusetts Association for Home Care Programs/Area Agencies on Aging and are to remind the legislators to add to their budget a program called "SOAP", "State Older Americans Act Programs."

SSES is asking their state officials to assure its elders that the state will not let essential programs go down the drain.

South Shore Elder Services is the federally designated AAA funded under the OAA, and serves 11 South Shore communities (Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.)

Under the Gramm-Rudman balance budget plan, Title III Older Americans Act Program will bear the brunt of budget cuts, since the OAA (Older Americans Act) is part of the unprotected, "Category 11," where the largest percentage of reductions occur, according to the U.S. House of Representatives select committee on aging.

"For SSES," this means immediate decrease of more than $12,000 in federal funding as of March 1, 1986 for programs that are already in progress. That means existing programs are frozen," said Susan Young, Executive Director, of South Shore Elder Services. "Next year, the cuts are expected to be at least 25 percent of 1985's operating budget. That spells disaster," she said.

SSES is asking its state senators and representatives not to forget the 60,000 elderly on the South Shore. Programs that have taken 25 years to build could be demolished in just a few years, such as Hot Meal Program, Meals on Wheels, Elder Day Care Services, Transportation, Nursing Home Ombudsman, Legal Services, Employment and many other services for the elderly.

Last year, more than 10,000 South Shore elders relied on these progams to remain at home, functioning independently in the community. Four thousand three hundred seniors were served each day, 1/3 being delivered to the homebound.

For those frail elders, that lunch is a life line, not a free lunch," said Young. "For the elderly who rely on these basic services remain in their own homes, major budget cuts may mean premature or unnecessary institutionalization."

The full extent of the reductions for this year and the next four years will clearly depend on whether or not Congress decides to use the automatic spending cut process known as sequestering, or whether it will seek to increase tax revenues.

Last year, 317,000 people statewide depended on over $16 million Title III services. Since 1981, Title III funding has decreased despite an annual increase of 1.3 percent in this state's elder population, SSES along with the Mass. Association of AAA is now turning to the state for help. The AAA's are campaigning for $900,000 in supplemental funding to offset the Federal in Title III funding caused by this year's budget cuts.

Potato skins, chipped beef & cheese are traveling treats

Back from their travels are some of our readers for whom sampling the native food is part of the joy of vacationing. Casting diets to the winds for two glorious weeks were Ruth and Jack Lawrence who would top off their day by their pool in a villa outside of Acapulco by seeking out new taste treats.

The Mexicana cena (supper) is served from 9 to midnight, so it takes a day or two to adjust to the different schedule, for luncheon isn't until 2 and then — you guessed it — siesta time.

Acapulco is famous for its serviche, or cold fish salad, a white fish that is marinated in lime juice which cooks the fish. After this, it is diced into small pieces and mixed with diced tomatoes, onions, chili and avocado.

Just as in our country, there are regional dishes: in the north, broiled goat is popular; tacos are favored in the Yucatan where everything is pickled from pigs' feet, beef and chicken to pork.

Mexico City is very cosmopolitan, and there you can sample the regional dishes. But don't plan on sampling all their chili, for there are more than 60 varieties. Some are in the "watch out" category, especially if jalapeno peppers are used in the sauce. The menu the Lawrences brought home makes one drool: bananas baked in brandy and kahlua, caramel crepes, jumbo shrimp baked in garlic butter.

Potato skins served as appetizers appear on the menu, as do mushroom caps stuffed with shrimp and baked in garlic butter. Here is their way with potato skins.

PARMESAN POTATO SKINS

Scrub and prick four large baking potatoes. Bake in 425 degree oven for 40 to 60 min. Cool. Cut into quarters lengthwise. Using a spoon, scoop out potato, leaving a 1/4" thick shell. Place skins in a 13x9x2" baking pan. Bake in 325 degree oven for 20 min. Brush insides of skins with butter or margarine. Sprinkle skins with:
3 T butter or margarine, melted
1/4 c. grated Parmesan cheese
1/8 tsp. garlic powder and dash of red pepper
Bake 10 to 15 min. more or till crisp. Makes 16.

It looked like a mass exodus as cars headed north during school vacation week. Bedecked with skis and poles, packed with kids and coolers with perishable groceries, the family station wagon had little room to spare what with bulky winter jackets. For appetites that will burgeon with exercise and fresh air, a hearty breakfast is one of the pleasures of a ski weekend. Pancakes, French toast, eggs in your favorite style is a good way to start the day, or even this rather simple dish which could also do for a Sunday night supper. Spending the Washington holiday weekend with friends is getting to be a habit for the Richard Wheelers, and here is Nina's recipe for

CHIPPED BEEF AND CHEESE ON MUFFINS

Soak 10 oz. chipped beef in boiling water for 5 min., drain and tear it into pieces. Have ready six English muffins and six hard-boiled eggs, quartered. Make 2¼ c. sauce, as follows:
Melt in double boiler top 4 T butter. Stir in 4 T flour. Blend and stir in:
2 c. milk. Add:
3/4 lb. grated sharp Cheddar cheese
2 T medium-dry sherry and
1 T Dijon-style mustard, stirring until cheese is melted.

Pour over eggs and muffins (toasted or broiled) and egg quarters.

And, as the radio reminds us at every turn of the dial, let's not forget the sunny south where the Dwight Simmons' spent a month in Boca Raton. When their friends in Florida invited them to a buffet, this casserole they contributed drew raves:

BAKED KIDNEY BEANS/Tomato Sauce

Drain five 1-pound tins red kidney beans. In a bowl combine a 14-ounce bottle of ketchup, 1 T Tabasco and 1/2 tsp. ground allspice. Sprinkle six thick slices of chopped bacon in bottom of a 13x9x2" baking pan, and top with half the beans. Sprinkle two small onions, two green peppers and three tomatoes, all chopped, over beans and cover vegetables with remaining beans. Top with ketchup mixture and 1 c. firmly packed dark brown sugar and bake them in a preheated 350 degree oven for 3 hours. Serves 12 to 15.

'Is it Art,' an art critic dialogue debuts March 9 in Cohasset

"That's art! I could do that." How many times has a viewer of a work of art responded that way when he or she can't quite understand why a certain piece is considered art.

"Is It Art," a dialogue between two art critics addressing the question of why one work is considered art and another is not is part of the South Shore Art Center's continuing March series, Sunday-at-the-Center, the Creative Process, Part VI.

Held in the Center's classroom at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset the first Sunday in the series, March 9, author and independent curator John Arthur will give a slide presentation and lecture on Contemporary Realism.

The second Sunday in the series, March 16, art critic for the "Boston Phoenix," David Bonetti and art critic for the "Patriot Ledger," and news editor for "Art New England," Charles Guiliano will address the issue of Is It Art," using slides of known and unknown contemporary artists to illustrate their dialogue. The last Sunday of the series, March 23, will be a painting demonstration by realist artist Susan Belton.

The Sunday programs begin at 3 p.m. and advanced registration is required for the series or for the individual programs. The Creative Process: Part VI continues in the Sunday-at-the-Center series focusing this year on realism. The painting demonstration by Belton will give the audience an understanding of how she perceives what is fascinating and how that is translated onto her canvasses. She will illustrate the choices and changes that go into the process of creating a painting.

Belton's works are part of the permanent corporate collections of the American Telephone and Telegraph, Chemical Bank, Prudential Insurance Co. of America, City Bank, Dartmouth College Museum and Galleries and others. She is a graduate of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts and has been the recipient of a Bartlett Traveling Scholarship and an Artists Foundation painting Fellowship. She is affiliated with the Thomas Segal Gallery and has had numerous one-person and group exhibits.

The dialogue between Guiliano and Bonetti, considering their individual backgrounds as critics, should give participants better insight as to how a work comes to be considered art. Both critics are contributors to the magazine "Art News." Bonetti was formerly associated with the Thomas Segal Gallery.

Arthur's slide presentation and lecture on contemporary realism will center on emerging realist artists and on well-known contemporary realists. He is the author of Realists at Work, published by Watson Guptill; Realists' Drawings and Watercolors; and his most recent, American Realism: the Precise Image, published by Asahi Shimbun.

This series is funded by the Joseph Drown Foundation as part of the "Art is All Around Us" program and by the Marion Huse Memorial Fund. For further information and to register for the series or an individual program, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Special needs recreation program session planned

Parents and friends are invited to a planning session Monday, Feb. 24 to assist and plan after school and weekend programs for children, young adults, and adults who have special needs or have difficulty in regular recreation programs.

The programs will begin immediately and will be sponsored by the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens.

This meeting will begin promptly at the First Church of Weymouth, 17 Church Street in Weymouth Heights at 7:45 p.m. sharp.

All parents and friends from Weymouth, Hingham, Braintree, and the surrounding communities are encouraged to attend and help give us your ideas and suggestions.

A sampling of eight week courses could include programs in swimming, horseback riding, Special Olympics, dance, gymnastics, and much more. For further information please call Norene Carter at the South Shore Association Office or Drew C. Bililies, Director at 275-0023.

"Your majesty," the king's gentle slave girl spoke out with her voice sounding like a bird's song. "Your son, Robin, has come to speak with you."

The king sat up like a bolt, apparently embarrassed at being seen asleep. "Speak up. I have better things to do than to listen to you."

"Sir, I have come to get your permission to retrieve the golden harp. I thought it only proper for me to ask you first. May I go?" the prince asked sheepishly.

"Do what you please, Robin, as long as you don't bother me with it," and the king fell asleep again.

Robin prepared to leave the next day at high noon. He collected enough food and water to last him many moons. Then he decorated the inside of the rocket to look like his bedroom to prevent him from getting homesick.

That night he couldn't slee p because of his excitement that was mixed with anxiety. When he woke up in the morning he was very stiff from sleeping in an odd position. Because of this his journey was delayed for an hour an a half.

Finally, at one-thirty in the afternoon, the prince took off. The rocket was programmed where to go so Robin didn't have to steer all the time. The journey was a pleasant one, but lasted for several days.

One day, when Robin was almost out of food, he spotted land. Robin slowed the rocket down to look at the land, and, sure enough, it was the long awaited land. He landed the rocket and climbed out willingly.

Aliens were waiting right outside the landing pad. Robin greeted them tentatively and the creatures stepped back. The scene laying before Robin was spectacular.

The land was blooming with summer. There were grassy hills covered with trees. The trees had a thousand buds on each branch. In the middle was a stream with a miniature waterfall, only about one foot high. There were neatly cut square rocks, and placed on the flattest of all the rocks was the golden harp.

"So it is true," he thought. "it's really true." He walked the moist land and touched the harp. The aliens kept a close eye on him the whole time. Then he picked it up and asked, "May I take it home?"

The aliens seemed to understand as they stepped aside, making a path to Robin's rocket. Robin waved goodbye to the aliens and started for his home.

The Magic Harp

Jack was eating at the pizza joint when he overheard a couple talking. They talked of an enchanted world with a magic harp. Jack thought they belonged in a mental ward or funny farm. Then he forgot the whole thing, He exited the pizza place and walked down the cement sidewalks lighted by flashing neon lights.

When he got to his apartment building, there was the door the tenants were forbidden to go into. Dare he enter the forbidden room? His curiosity went wild thinking of what could be in that room, maybe a chest of treasure or a fierce lion.

Finally his curiosity overcame him, He slowly reached out with a trembling hand to open the door. Jack grasped the cold metal knob, closed his eyes, jerked the door open, and jumped in. When he opened his eyes he was in a land of myst erious things. The trees were yellow and the grass purple. Things seemed to be backwards. The gophers flew and the birds lived in the dirt.

After aimlessly wandering around for hours he reached a brook. This was no ordinary brook. he could sense the magic around it. The water was a dull green color. It was surrounded with small round pebbles. Then he saw it: a golden harp. Could it be the couple he overheard wasn't crazy afterall?

He rushed to the rock the harp was placed on. A pla que under the harp said the harp granted wishes. He wished he was home. Then he was. He lived happily ever after.

One String Attached

"So its true," I thought. "It's really true." My father must have been thinking the same thing when he entered the forest for his first and last time. I took another step into the enchanted forest, which held many secrets within itself. The secrets were in the trees, the lake, and the soft chirps the baby sparrows made on this young summer morning.

As I looked around I saw the legend: the golden harp. I drew myself near the harp, and it moved. I stepped away and it moved to where it was before. I had only known this story from my mother, who had heard it from her mother. Now I realized it wasn't just a fairy tale. Once again I thought of my dad's quote on that strange Monday.

I stared at the harp and it looked back, giving me a sensation of friendliness. My eyes closed and my mouth opened with a yawn. My long journey had tired me out; I couldn't stop myself . . . I was asleep.

I dreamed of my father approaching this enchanted forest on a fine sunny day of June in 1743. He was also tired; a light sweat dripped down his face. His shirt was unbuttoned, trying to keep himself cool. My dad walked to the harp. The harp moved to keep itself safe. My dad was a sly man though, and he tricked the harp. He had played a note, and as the legend went, whoever played the first note on the harp would receive the gift. The gift was to own the forest and pass it on to his children, grandchildren, etc. There was one string attached that no one knew about. That was . . . whoever touched the harp would be trapped inside and be the spirit of hope for all people.

A light breeze blew and woke me up. I knew if I tricked the harp, I would be with my father. I did not want to end my life right here. I felt very selfish, but somehow I knew I was doing the right thing.

I was very tied and it was almost supper time. I had to be home. As I left the forest I felt as if I owed something to the memory of my father. After three days hard thinking I had thought of the answer. I was going to write a book about my father and this day.
